Teachers set to consider revised contract

by JILL BETTNER

School Dist. 21 teachers are set today to consider the proposed 1973-74 contract as revised Monday by representatives of the Wheeling Faculty Council (WFC) and the school board.

Dist. 21 Assistant Supt. John Barger, chairman of the school board negotiating team, said yesterday the new contract is a compromise.

"There are some things we would have preferred to have in it and some things I'm sure they would have preferred to have in it, but when you negotiate, you have to compromise," he said. "I think the contract is fair for both parties."

Village approves environmental advisory unit

An ordinance creating an environmental advisory committee has been approved by the Wheeling Village Board, ending more than two years of discussion and planning.

Although the ordinance passed unanimously Monday night, appointments to the commission are not expected until after the April 17 village elections.

The commission will consist of three members. Although each commissioner will serve a three-year term, the first appointees will serve staggered terms of one, two and three years.

The group will serve as an advisory body to the village board on matters concerning environmental pollution. It has the authority to conduct studies, provide research and work with other agencies on environmental problems.

A LAST MINUTE change in the ordinance gives the commission the power to make recommendations on all projects coming before the village plan commission and zoning board. The commissioners can also hold hearings on these projects.

The village board said the ordinance is designed to be flexible so commission members can work out their operation once they have a firm grasp on local pollution problems.

To allow for this flexibility, the ordinance includes the provision the village (Continued on page 3)

Barger refused to elaborate further and would not disclose the terms of the agreement worked out Monday. Margo Richter, chairman of the WFC negotiating team, also refused any comment when contacted yesterday.

Miss Richter said last week the WFC executive committee rejected a proposed multi-year contract that had earlier been agreed upon by the bargaining representatives.

ACCORDING TO Miss Richter, the teachers planned Monday to ask the school board negotiating team to accept the terms of that proposed multi-year contract as a one-year agreement. Both Miss Richter and Barger refused yesterday, however, to verify that the contract going to the teachers today is a one-year agreement or that it contains the same terms as the proposed multi-year contract.

If the teachers approve the revised contract today, Barger said the agreement will be considered by the school board Thursday night at its regular meeting.

Because the negotiations have been closed this year, information on the terms of the contract package has been sketchy. Last year's sessions were open to the public.

Barger revealed several weeks ago some of the points that were discussed by bargaining representatives. They included:

- The 1973-74 school calendar.
- Extra duty salary for teachers.
- Basic salary for teachers.
- Insurance coverage for teachers.
- Contract duration.

IT IS NOT known if the bargaining teams have reached agreement on these issues or if additional terms are being discussed.

Last year, representatives of the Illinois Education Association (IEA) bargained for local teachers. The 1972-73 contract, when it was finally approved last September, included a 6 per cent hike in annual teacher salaries.

The 6 per cent pay increase was split up among the teachers according to a pay schedule devised by the WFC. The contract provided $3,825,352 for the pay schedule as compared to $3,608,823 allotted in 1971.

Other terms included in the present contract that is set to expire in June are:

- The procedures for negotiating contracts.
- 10 days sick leave for teachers, one day personal leave with the approval of the district and one day personal leave without approval. All sick days and personal leave days not used can accumulate to 100 days.

• The board of education will pay group health and accident insurance for all full-time employees.

Miss Richter said when the talks ended last year she was pleased with the contract. Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill also said he felt the settlement was "a good one." He said the 6 per cent pay raise was competitive with increases in other districts at that time.

Gill has not commented on this year's talks and was unavailable for comment yesterday.

MASKED DANCERS will be part of the show "Double Exposure," to be presented by the Wheeling High School Orchestras dance troupe Friday and Saturday. The program will feature twenty-six dances and will start at 8 p.m. at the school. Tickets for the annual event are $1. The show will be presented in the Little Theater.

Would 'raise property taxes'

Passolt raps tax distribution plans

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Mgr. George Passolt was in Springfield yesterday to add his voice to the apparently successful objections to a state sales tax reapportionment plan.

A committee of the Illinois House of Representatives voted yesterday to quash the bill which Passolt said would force Wheeling to raise property taxes.

Passolt said Wheeling now receives significant revenue from the state system which returns one cent of every nickel collected in sales tax to the municipality where it is spent.

The manager said, however, the Illinois House bill would reduce the proportion of sales tax money being returned to the village. As a result of the committee action yesterday, the measure will reach the House Floor with a "do not pass" recommendation, usually sufficient to kill most proposed legislation.

PASSOLT SAID ONE plan under consideration would return only 20 per cent of the present amount to Wheeling, with the other 80 per cent being distributed throughout each county on a population basis. An alternate plan would return 50 per cent to the village with the other 50 per cent being distributed by population.

Passolt said if either plan is adopted, Wheeling stands to lose a great deal of money. He estimated the first plan would cost Wheeling $200,000 a year and the second would cost $135,000 a year.

Passolt said if either plan is adopted, Wheeling stands to lose a great deal of money. He estimated the first plan would cost Wheeling $200,000 a year and the second would cost $135,000 a year.

"Either of those would mean we'd have to increase our property taxes," he said. "As a matter of fact, that money is more than we're getting from federal revenue sharing."

The manager said the bill was proposed to compensate for the large amount of sales tax revenue returned to towns that have major shopping centers. He said he thought the idea behind the plan was unfair because "it becomes a kind of socialism."

Passolt compared the idea behind the bill to two car dealers who do different amounts of business. He said that although one firm sells more cars than the other, the more prosperous dealer does not share his profits with his competitor.

THE MANAGER said the bill was also unfair to towns that had taken on the responsibility of commercial development. "If you take on the problems that go with these commercial activities, all this costs the village money," he said.

"But you also expect to make money, and you figure you'll take in more than it costs," Passolt said the plan favored communities like Buffalo Grove where there is little business development. "Buffalo Grove would stand to benefit because they have very little commercial activity," he said.

He added that if the bill is adopted, Buffalo Grove would probably not feel the need to develop commercial centers. "There would be no incentive for anyone to have a shopping center," he said.

Three area students on Carmel honor roll

Three area students are among pupils listed on the Carmel High School honor roll for the third academic quarter.

Michael Walz, a ninth grade student from Wheeling, was recognized for earning special honors. During the grading period, he received no grade lower than a "B."

Both Anna Campbell and Denise Malachowski, both of Buffalo Grove, made the honor roll by maintaining a "B" average during the third quarter.

The state

The Illinois House yesterday passed a bill making the death sentence mandatory in certain murder cases despite claims it is "cruel and unusual punishment."

Once a month, for six hours, a good conduct inmate at any Department of Corrections penal institution could visit privately with his family under a bill passed by the Illinois House.

Rep. Bruce Gougias, D-Chicago, accused R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of cheating the state out of millions of tax dollars by selling little cigars which, he said, are cigarettes in disguise.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The administration proposed raising the $1.60 per hour minimum wage to $2.30 over three years, a move one House Republican described as a compromise in the wage fight that stalemated the last Congress.

President Nixon asked Congress to give him an unprecedented free hand in the field of trade, including increased exchanges with Communist nations and the power to retaliate against countries discriminating against U.S. exports.

New Orleans Police Superintendent Clarence B. Giarrusso disclosed that six policemen wounded in the January gun battle at the Howard Johnson's motel were shot by police.

Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., has introduced legislation which would repeal the newly-instituted taxpayers' $1 checkoff to finance presidential elections.

Many mothers around the country took their children to work yesterday as part of a protest of cutbacks in federally-funded day care centers.

The House sustained President Nixon's veto of a rural water and sewer grant program, giving him the second major victory in a week in his fight with Congress over federal spending priorities.

Jayne murder trial

Bailey keeps up pressure on Adams

by ROGER CAPETTINI

Defense Attorney F. Lee Bailey continued his attack on the credibility of the state's star witness yesterday as the George Jayne murder trial extended through its fourth day of testimony.

The witness, Melvin Adams, remained on the stand for the third straight day.

During the afternoon session yesterday, the nine-woman, three-man jury watched a videotape recording to an interrogation session when Adams was questioned for three hours by Palatine police, state's attorney's investigators, and FBI agents less than two weeks after the slaying.

Adams is the state's key witness in the trial of Silas Jayne, Joseph LaPlaca and Julius Barnes, all charged with the 1970 rifle slaying of Silas' brother, George, in suburban Inverness.

Adams, who has been granted immunity from prosecution, has testified Silas Jayne paid him to murder George. He said he, in turn, hired Barnes, the alleged triggerman.

THE VIEWING OF the videotape came as Bailey cross-examined Adams for the second day.

Adams has testified during the trial and during pre-trial hearings that the statements he made at the Palatine police station were false. At that time he denied any involvement in the killing. Since that time, Adams has outlined his version of the alleged murder plot, implicating the three defendants.

Before the viewing, Bailey asked Adams if he was nervous during the questioning session in Palatine and Adams said he was. Bailey continually tried to imply Adams remained as calm through the nine-hour interrogation session as he has been on the witness stand.

Adams said he felt he "acted scared" while being questioned by police that day, but said he doesn't know if his fear was "evident."

Before calling for the viewing of the tape, Bailey first got Adams to say his demeanor is different when he lies.

BAILEY THEN asked if Adams' conduct and demeanor while being questioned by police were different from his conduct as a witness. Adams answered, "I can't say there was a difference."

"Your purpose that day was to convince the police the lies you were telling were the truth, correct?" Bailey asked. Adams said "yes."

"And you lied to the best of your ability?" Bailey continued.

"I don't know what is the best of my ability," Adams said. "I tried to act as calm as I could."

The defendants: Joseph LaPlaca, Silas Jayne, Julius Barnes

Bailey then asked to have the videotape played. He implied it would show the jury Adams could remain perfectly calm under pressure and, admittedly, while lying.

The tape according to Bailey, was made of the last three hours of nine full hours of questioning Nov. 10, 1970, when Adams was held at the police station for fourteen hours before being released.

CIRCUIT COURT Judge Richard Fitzgerald told the jurors the recording was not to be considered for the purpose of determining the truth of the statements made by Adams, "but for the limited purpose of judging the demeanor and credibility of the witness."

During the morning session, Bailey questioned Adams about his arrest on a charge of communicating with a young woman who was a witness at a grand jury investigating the murder.

Adams was charged with contacting Kathy Beaver, 18, a friend. Adams said he convinced the woman to sign a statement attesting to his whereabouts one of three nights during the week of the slaying.

Adams admitted to Bailey he planned to use the statement as a false alibi, but said the woman was mistaken and did not know her statements were incorrect. Adams said the charge against him was dropped later because of his cooperation with the prosecution.

Bailey is expected to resume his cross-examination of Adams when the trial resumes today at 11 a.m.

International art show slated at mall

Artists from 22 foreign nations will bring their paintings, sculptures and pottery to Woodfield Mall for the "Peoples of the World and their Art" show April 29 through May 6.

About 100 artists will work under the flags of their country and home state and talk about their art. As they work, they will be happy to talk to visitors, according to the directors of the show, Joerg and Paula Noack.

Participants include Nkrumah Ofari from Ghana, who works in abstracts, Walter Day of East Germany who welds metal sculptures of birds in flight, and F. Liu from Vietnam who paints scenes and people of his country.

Also at the show will be Jean-Claude Gaugy of France, displaying his wood-carvings, Dave Milligan of England with his metal sculptures, and Les Parisch of California who will paint on gold leaf.

Two Forest View artists win awards

Two students from Forest View High School received ribbons in the first annual Illinois High School Art Exhibition held recently at Illinois Wesleyan University in Bloomington.

Robert Wagner placed second in drawing and Ann Takamoto received an honorable mention in drawing.

A total of 57 students from 37 high schools won ribbons in the contest.

State PTA president speaking in area

The state president of the PTA will speak to incoming area PTA officers today at 9:30 a.m. in Hoffman Estates.

Dorothy Benner of Urbana, Illinois, will discuss the problems of programming and parent education to incoming officers from Dist. 37 PTA's. Dist. 37 includes the Arlington Heights, Northwest, Schaumburg, Randhurst and Dun-Lake PTA councils.

The meeting will be in the Vogelei Recreation Center, at Golf and Higgins roads in Hoffman Estates. Evelyn Johnson, secretary of the state PTA will also appear.

Sales tax redistribution bill voted down in State House

by BOB LAHEY

SPRINGFIELD — An Illinois House committee yesterday voted down a bill aimed at sharing the sales tax wealth from giant shopping centers among all cities and villages.

The measure would have caused the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars each year for several Northwest suburbs by redistributing the one per cent sales tax municipalities keep on purchases made at local stores and businesses.

By a vote of 13 to 1, the House cities and villages committee gave the bill a "do not pass" recommendation, a move that generally means the death of proposed legislation.

The measure, introduced by State Rep. Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, was the object of intense lobbying pressure by suburban officials.

Several northwest suburban mayors were here yesterday to express their opposition to the bill which, as one legislator said, "would take the money from the towns where the problems are and put it out with the pigs and cows."

LONE COMMITTEE member voting was State Rep. Eugene Schlickma, R-Arlington Heights. He said his vote came only because he supports establishment of a commission to come up with a sales tax redistribution formula.

"I would like to turn the clock back to the time before the sales tax formula was devised" and start again with a more equitable formula, Schlickman told the committee.

However, he said changes proposed in the bill would have a "convulsive effect" on communities that depend on sales tax revenue.

The bill would have given only 20 per cent of the one-cent municipal sales tax to towns where it is collected. The remaining 80 per cent would have been distributed statewide on a per capita basis, in the way gasoline and state income taxes are given to local governments.

Figures distributed by Rep. Donald L. Totten R-Schaumburg, showed that all Northwest suburban communities in his district would lose revenue under the bill, with the exception of Palatine and Hoffman Estates, which would have more than doubled their sales tax revenue.

Of 10 cities and villages in the Northwest suburbs, total sales tax revenue would have dropped from nearly $10 million to slightly over $7.3 million.

AMONG THE officials present were mayors Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect, Robert Atcher of Schaumburg, Nicholas Blase of Niles and Roland Meyer of Rolling Meadows. Also present were George Passolt, village manager of Wheeling and Richard Eppley, village manager of Mount Prospect.

Most were from communities which have large shopping centers and need the money from sales tax for services to these areas, according to their testimony.

Meyer told the committee that in Rolling Meadows sales tax revenue totals $1.2 million coming mostly from industries which the village has labored to attract in order to build its tax base.

Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, drew applause from the crowd jammed in to the small hearing room, saying "there will be no reduction of taxes in the communities which benefit from this bill, and we all know it. The towns which are hurt by it will simply have to go to the people for more taxes in other forms."

Under the formula proposed by the bill, Rolling Meadows' sales tax revenue would have plunged from $1.3 million to $612,000.

In Des Plaines, the drop would be from $2.1 million to $1.4 million; Elk Grove would go according to a partial estimate, from $1.1 million to $661,000, according to figures given to the committee.

The figures would have been less drastic in Arlington Heights, $1.5 million to $1.4 million and Mount Prospect, $1.5 million to $1.1 million.

Palatine would have benefited slightly with an increase in revenue from $567,000 to $580,000. Hoffman Estates, would have enjoyed an increase from $211,000 to $440,000.

Prospects Heights

Two state panels give incorporation a chance

Despite objections by the Illinois Municipal League, two state legislative committees have recommended passage of bills that would give Prospect Heights a chance to incorporate.

The Illinois House of Representatives Committee on Cities and Villages voted 6-5 to recommend passage of a House bill that would allow Prospect Heights to become a city without consent of neighboring villages. Arlington Heights and Wheeling have objected to the proposed city of about 10,000 residents.

The Illinois Committee on Local Government voted 10-2 to recommend passage of a similar Senate bill. Both bills, introduced into the Illinois General Assembly last month, would permit unincorporated areas of 7,500 or more residents to incorporate without approval of nearby villages. For an area of less than 7,500 persons, the bill requires consent from municipalities within 1½ miles.

Before voting, both committees listened last week to testimony from the Illinois Municipal League, opposing the bills, and the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA), in favor of the bills.

Tom Fitzsimmons, assistant director of the League, said the group is opposed to the bills because they would create more units of local government.

"WE ARE OPPOSED by policy to the proliferation of further units of local government. We believe if they (Prospect Heights residents) want to live under the charter of incorporation it is available to them by annexing to surrounding communities. Why create another assembly of services which would be quite costly to residents? Besides, when those people decided to move in an unincorporated area they knew what the conditions were."

Fitzsimmons said he was aware Arlington Heights and Wheeling have formally opposed the bills, but that it did not influence the league's position. He said the league will work to defeat the two bills when they get to the House and Senate floors. The bills are sponsored by State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, and State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northfield.

Jack Gilligan, PHIA president, said he testified that the state statutes on incorporation are ambiguous and that the incorporation laws need to be modernized, as proposed in the bills.

The PHIA is also fighting in the courts for incorporation. After the Cook County Circuit Court and Illinois Appellate Court ruled against incorporation, the PHIA appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear its case. The high court turned down the appeal, but the PHIA has decided to petition again for a hearing.

Village approves land annexation west of Wolf

The Wheeling Village Board Monday approved an ordinance annexing land to the south of Hintz Road on the west side of Wolf Road to the village.

The board also directed the zoning board hold hearings for this property to consider changing the zoning from residential to industrial. Property owners also requested hearings for a special use permit to establish, locate and maintain motor freight terminals.

In other action, the board approved the payment of $3,948.58 for well repairs and $6,123.60 for new storm sewers in the Dunhurst area.

Bids were opened for a new animal warden's van and for the exterior refinishing of the village water tower on Old Willow Road. A decision on the bids will be announced at the next board meeting.

The board approved the final plat of a two lot subdivision for the Tara Village apartment development. The subdivision separates the land being developed for apartments from a parcel of land planned for other uses.

Trustee Bill Hein announced the village would let bids for the construction of a new Jeffrey Avenue bridge during the week.

board can amend the duties of the commission at any time. It also gives the commissioners the power to develop their own rules and organization.

The commission, however, is required to meet at least four times a year and report to the village board at least once a year.

Although the members of the commission will not be paid as was originally suggested, the committee chairman will have his expenses paid by the village for training, schooling and conferences.

THE COMMISSION has the option of hiring a secretary or staff with the permission of the corporate authorities. Special technical advice will also be financed by the village if approved by the village manager.

Work on the environmental ordinance began two years ago during the 1971 village election campaign. Several times proposed ordinances were sent back to committee for further study.

Board members said this delay was necessary to make sure the ordinance was workable. They said they also wanted to ensure that the ordinance was compatible with state codes.

Village Pres. Ted Scanlon and trustee Michael Valenza were not present at the meeting.

Ruling on opening Strong Street suit expected today

Judge Robert J. Downing is expected to rule today on whether to reopen the W. Strong Street zoning suit to allow the village to submit new evidence.

The suit, filed by several Strong Street homeowners, challenges last year's decision to zone 47 scattered lots in the area to allow apartments. Residents charged this action was spot-zoning because it ignored the present single-family homes in the area.

Shortly before Judge Downing was scheduled to rule on the case, the village asked to delay a decision so Wheeling officials could consider rezoning the entire area to allow apartments. The judge granted the delay, saying he would decide today whether to admit evidence on the rezoning.

The village board unanimously approved rezoning the entire area last week over the objections of numerous W. Strong Street residents.

Judge Downing, however, has recently been appointed to the Appellate Court. Since he will assume his new position around the first of the month, it is not yet known if Downing will continue to rule in this case or defer it until his successor is appointed.

The first judge assigned to the Strong Street case was also appointed to the Appellate court. Judge Edward J. Egan ruled on several pretrial motions before being moved up to the higher court.

Man arrested for car theft, other counts

Wheeling police yesterday charged a 32-year-old man with stealing two cars, possession of marijuana, possession of burglary tools and possession of stolen license plates.

Michael Joseph Wilson, alias Joseph G. Wilson, was arrested by Cook County Sheriff's Police after Wheeling police received a report of a stolen car from the Fireplace Restaurant on N. Milwaukee Avenue.

An employee of the restaurant reported her car stolen when she left work at 2:30 a.m. Nancy Bartels told police she had quarreled with her boyfriend and said he might have taken the car.

WILSON WAS arrested at Miss Bartels' residence by sheriff's police. He was found to be in possession of marijuana and burglary tools, police said.

Later in the morning, Wheeling police found an abandoned car in the parking lot of the Fireplace Restaurant. After checking the car's registration number, police found the car had been stolen in Portage, Ind., last month.

Police said they tied Wilson into the theft of this auto after investigation. He was charged with the theft and possession of stolen Illinois license plates.

Police said Wilson gave no address. He was being held on $22,500 bond.

Community calendar

In an effort to avoid conflicts caused by two or more organizations who plan events for the same evenings, the Wheeling Park District is putting together a community calendar of leisure, recreation and community activities.

Bill Maher, park district intern who is coordinating the project, said he is having trouble contacting organizations to find out their schedules of upcoming events.

The information from each organization will be compiled into a master calendar that will be distributed to all groups.

Maher said all groups interested in having their activities included in the community calendar should contact him at the Wheeling Park District office, 222 S. Wolf Rd., 537-2222.

Meet your candidates for village offices: Part 2

Ted C. Scanlon: I'm going to make Wheeling 'All-American,' incumbent mayor vows

Incumbent Wheeling Village Pres. Ted Scanlon says "my issue in this campaign is to make Wheeling the All-American village and I will do it." Scanlon is seeking his third term as head of village government.

He said, "Any time you have an election everything becomes an issue. However, youth is one issue that is not being played up and I think it should be."

Scanlon, of 281 Park Ave., said the youth of Wheeling should have a place to go that is not supervised by an adult, but run by the "kids" themselves. "This is one thing the entire community can work on together," he said.

WHEN ASKED about having a full time mayor in Wheeling Scanlon said, "I felt they should have had it a long time ago, but went along with the village manager system." He added that it would help Wheeling because business wants to talk to a mayor not the manager.

Scanlon said the current village manager, George Passot is "a very good man, a very sincere man, and a very dedicated man." He said he may not have the qualifications of some managers, "but he is getting his feet wet. I will support him all the way."

Asked about the reputation of being able to get a traffic ticket fixed in Wheeling because of outside sources, Scanlon said, "You better not be able to. I am very confident in the present structure of the Village of Wheeling. I think they (current Wheeling citizens) realize that they are out of the wheeling-dealing days." He said he felt those "days" ended before he got into office. "IN FACT," said Scanlon, "I even leave the individual departments alone." He said he only talks to department heads about specific problems.

When asked to name the three most influential people in the village, outside of the trustees, Scanlon only named two — Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill and Wheeling High School principal Thomas Shirley.

"I can't think of anybody on their plateau. My definition of leadership would be the type these men offer. Leadership is when you can get a lot of people to forget their differences. There are other leaders in our community but they don't have the overall leadership of these men," Scanlon explained.

In the next four years, he said, residents can look for all the current development of the village to be completed. "I would like to see Wheeling look to the south and take in Pal-Waukee Airport. I would also like to see the boundaries get squared away," he added.

Scanlon said he would draw the boundaries on the north at the Lake County line, but would leave the south and west open at this point. Wheeling's development is stopped on the east by the Cook County Forest Preserves.

On April 17, Wheeling residents will elect five village officials who will represent them for the next four years. The positions being contested in this election include village president, village clerk and three village trustees. There are two candidates for each position.

Today the Herald publishes recent interviews with candidates of the To Overall Progress Party (TOP). The interviews briefly outlined the candidates' views on issues in Wheeling government.

HE FEELS THE center of the village will be along Dundee Road between Elmhurst and Wolf roads.

As for a nine-year fight between the village and Pal-Waukee airport owner George Priester, Scanlon said, "I have a good personal relationship with Priester. However, I can't answer how George feels about the village. I think the airport is a great asset to the village and we do not want to harass the owners," he explained.

Scanlon also said he feels the village president should have more power. "I think that he should be on the record for voting. The village is my life and my love," he said. When asked why a village representative has not attended a Northwest Municipal Conference in more than two years the candidate took sole blame. He said he has not had the time because of family obligations. "We are however, very interested in continuing in the conference," he said, adding that someone will be attending future meetings.

SCANLON SAID the major problem in Wheeling is the lack of a commuter railroad transportation in the village.

"Transportation is a problem in the village. We are just a little too much to the north," he said.

As for other village problems Scanlon said, "To each person a problem is big, but I don't think they are real major things."

He said no appointments will be made to several village commissions' vacant posts until after the elections. "We'll wait till the storm is over," said Scanlon.

He also feels the village is doing a tremendous job on flooding. "The MSD (Metropolitan Sanitary District) is doing the job up north and that should help. We have tried every way of informing people of the work being done," he said.

Scanlon said, "I do have a feeling for people when they say they have all kinds of problems, but the improvement is something that has to come. What is good today is not good tomorrow."

For village trustee

Bill Hein

Incumbent Wheeling Trustee Bill Hein, candidate on the To Overall Progress Party (TOP) ticket, said he is seeking reelection because he wants to carry through on his programs.

Hein, who was appointed trustee 18 months ago, is chairman of the village board's committee on sewer, water and public health. As such, he has been responsible for much of the recent flood control work.

"The prime issue that I am most concerned about is flood control," he said. Hein, of 138 Berkshire Drive, said he became involved with the flooding problems through his board committee and has had little time to develop other programs.

According to Hein, Wheeling is headed in the right direction with flood control. He said the most important part of flood control is to make sure projects currently in the planning stages are followed through into actual construction.

HEIN SAID he also approves of the present village policy on development in flood plains. He said flood plain construction should not be singled out as a major cause of flooding in the village.

"I don't think there is any area that has been developed which hasn't added to our flood problems," he said.

Hein explained that for this reason it was not practical to impose any type of moratorium on flood plain construction. He also noted that it would be hard to enforce such a moratorium because the law protects the rights of property owners.

"For somebody to say that they are not going to build in the flood plain, to me they are not telling the truth," he said.

Hein explained that flood plain construction merely requires more stringent standards for water retention. "With control and with engineering, there should be no reason why we can't do it," he said. "It merely makes it more expensive."

ACCORDING TO Hein, the present trend of building in Wheeling has been determined by the rising cost of land. "Prices are the thing that governs just about anything in this country," he said.

He said builders have found it uneconomical to build single-family homes given the high cost of land in Wheeling. He explained that while the builder is always looking for a profit, the trustees must make sure that the land is being put to its best use.

Hein said the boom of apartment and townhouse development was needed to provide the village with a balance of housing types. He said, however, he expects the trend in building to return to the single-family development.

One issue that Hein said should not have become part of the election campaign is the dispute over rezoning the W. Strong Street area to allow apartments. He said the people in the Strong Street area have been politically exploited and he wondered whether they had been made aware of all the facts in the case.

WHEN ASKED about campaign charges that the village board is unresponsive to village residents, Hein said the issue ignores the role of the village manager.

"You don't have to wait till a Monday night at a board meeting," he said. "The village manager can take care of it promptly. Why not let him handle it?"

Hein also was the prime mover behind the new village bus service. He said although the bus is a small step towards solving the area's transportation problem, it proves that the village can begin to tackle the problem.

"I think it was a very small step, but it was a giant step as far as the Village of Wheeling is concerned," he said.

For village trustee

Richard Missing

Richard Missing said there are two issues in the campaign for village office this year — flooding and Strong Street. As trustee candidate on the To Overall Progress Party (TOP), Missing said both issues have been overplayed.

Missing, 115 W. Manchester Dr., explained that the present village administration has accomplished a great deal with its flood control programs. "There's been progress made here," he said.

The candidate said that when he first moved to Wheeling the flooding problem was considerably worse. "We had some real dandies," he said.

To Missing, the real problem lies outside of Wheeling, in the areas north of the village. "The answer is really getting up north," he said. "Some people don't understand that the big problem is upstream."

MISSING NOTED that the village has attempted to inform village residents about flooding. "We've had our flood meetings, and we've had good attendance at a few of them," he said. He added, however, that many residents were not concerned with flooding because their homes do not flood.

According to Missing, the recent controversy over the rezoning of the W. Strong Street area has also been overrated. He said the village actions in rezoning the area to allow apartments was a way of protecting the area at the same time water and sewer lines were being brought in.

Richard Missing

"If the builder does come in, they are going to get their streets and their water," he explained. "I think the board is protecting the area by putting in a fine set of apartment buildings."

Missing said before the area was annexed to the village, it was used as a dumping ground. He said the village has worked hard to clean up the area to make it more attractive. "They need the Village of Wheeling," he said.

ONCE A DEVELOPER does come into the area and provides utility lines for his projects, Missing said, he would favor village financing to provide the rest of the homes with water and sewer lines. "I think it would be only right," he said.

If elected, Missing would like to begin a village beautification program. He said this program would be "just a general cleanup" which would include the planting of trees and shrubs along the main streets in town.

He said he would also like to begin some youth programs which would allow village young people to plan their own activities. "I think these kids want some place where they can come in, sit down and have a soda," he said. "They need it, they want it and I think they should have it."

Missing said he was seeking office because he liked the work the present village board has been doing. "These people have done just a great job," he said. "We really moved along, and I'd like to be part of it and help it move along."

HE SAID he was particularly interested in the recently approved environmental commission. "That's going to be an exciting committee," he said.

Missing added, however, that the other village commissions are not presently working as well as they should. "Those commissions, they've got to come up with the ideas," he said.

"I don't think we're getting that much efficiency out of some of these commissions," he said.

The candidate said if he is elected he would like to serve as chairman of the village board's finance committee. He said he has a lot of experience in accounting and bookkeeping. "I think I'd be best qualified for finance," he said. "I like to spend money and spend it right."

For village trustee

Al Lang

Al Lang, incumbent trustee on the To Overall Progress Party (TOP), sees recent problems with several of the Wheeling village commissions as a part of the present political campaign.

He said members of the commissions have been using them as a kind of political football. "I think the problem has been that we've had some people run for office for the past two years and put them on commissions," he said.

As chairman of the village board's judiciary and purchasing committee, Lang is responsible for the various commissions. He said he is not happy about the way several of the commissioners have been using their positions to criticize the village.

"It seems like the past two years they've spent complaining that they don't get any support from the board," he said. "They got in and really bum-rapped everything we did."

LANG, 753 S. Dennis Rd., said he thought the commissions should act as advisory agencies to the board. "I think the commissions are really set up to make recommendations to the board," he explained. "I would like to see them take a more active part."

If reelected, Lang would like to work towards untangling the various factions in the village so Wheeling could be a unified community. He said the rezoning of the W. Strong Street area was one divisive issue in the village, and said part of the problem was misinformation.

"Those people think their homes are going to be torn down," he said. He blamed this misinformation on the fact that the issue has become part of the political campaign.

He would like to get the proper information to residents in the Strong Street area, but said he didn't think the people would be willing to listen right now.

LAND SAID another "non-issue" that has become part of the political campaign is the village's flood control programs. He said the village programs have done a great deal to alleviate flooding.

"It's an issue because it is there and it hasn't been completed," he said of the present flood control programs. "It's an incomplete project."

He added that because of flooding problems, members of the Wheeling Independent Party (WHIP) have also attacked village building policies.

"Building is being made an issue and I think it is being made an issue in an unfair way," Lang said. "You really can't tell a man who has a piece of land that he can't improve it. You really don't have that much control."

Lang said instead of halting all building in the flood plain, the village should merely continue with its policy of enforcing flood plain regulations. He said these policies were proven effective last summer.

"Last year we had an awfully wet summer, but the flooding was minimum compared to the rest of the communities," he said.

LANG SAID another reason for the attacks on village development is "some people are against change anyway." He explained, however, that Wheeling had to grow because the entire Northwest suburban area is growing.

"They are expanding very fast, but in this day and age you almost have to," he said. He added that it was important to make sure the village was ready to handle its own growth. "I think if good government keeps on it, you won't have any problem," he said.

As Wheeling grows, Lang said he thinks there will be some changes made in the local government. He said home rule would be something that Wheeling would have to explore.

"Home rule has a lot of drawbacks," he said. "But it also has a lot of advantages. I think I am in favor of home rule, but I don't want to jump into it rapidly."

Lang also said Wheeling might get a full-time mayor in a few years. "I can see the possibility in a few years," he said, "but this would be up to the people."

For village clerk

Evelyn Diens

"After you have a job — like doing it — I don't see why I shouldn't run again," said Evelyn Diens, incumbent candidate for the office of Wheeling Village Clerk. Mrs. Diens has held that position for 18 years.

She looks at her job as having the major function of "serving the public at large." Mrs. Diens said, "We do this in the best way we can. We try to direct the people to the right parties when they need information. I've even had calls asking where a girl can get an abortion."

Running as a member of the To Overall Progress (TOPS) party, Mrs. Diens said she doesn't see any real issues in the race for clerk. "Our opponents accuse us of being discourteous and not being an information center. Honestly, I don't know what else we can do," she said.

MRS. DIENS, 323 N. First St., said she would be remiss in her duties if all she did was stand at the receptionist's window and give out information. Mrs. Diens is also the village collector and office manager.

"My girls (office employees) bend over backwards to help residents get information. They are constantly busy and I'm very proud of them," explained Mrs. Diens. "There may have been isolated cases when someone couldn't be helped, but they are very few."

As an incumbent, Mrs. Diens is running on her record. She said since the campaigning started there have been several rumors about the office of clerk, but "rumors are rumors and the record speaks for itself."

Evelyn Diens

Mrs. Diens cited the following as some of her major accomplishments:

- Mailing out applications for vehicle stickers.
- Getting vehicle stickers that are dry mountable.
- Mailing business licenses to applicants.
- Working on the village map with the village manager.
- Preparation of an index for voters.
- Development of a color coded village filing system.
- Increased the hours the village hall is open to the public.
- Establishment of special village office hours for voter registration and the purchase of vehicle stickers.

ADDING TO her record, Mrs. Diens also said she has three major goals. She would like to see the village get its own stamping machine for mailing, extend the hours of the village hall to include Saturday mornings and work on more legislation to change state statutes.

By getting the postage machine the village would be able to stamp and post mark its mail without the aid of the post office. The new machine would cut both cost and time in sending out village mail, she said.

Mrs. Diens said her second goal is one she is trying to complete as soon as possible. Her major obstacle is arranging the work schedule of employees and the cost of keeping the village office open an extra half a day.

"IF WE FIND a way of keeping it open, at least on Saturday morning, it will be service to many residents. There are some people who just can't make our daily hours since both husband and wife work," said Mrs. Diens.

Her final goal is reducing the village vehicle auto stickers price for senior citizens.

Mrs. Diens said even though she is running on the TOP ticket she is not really a politician. "When the political questions are asked at our coffees I let the trustee candidates answer them. Unless the question is directed to the clerk's office I do not take part in the discussion," she explained.

Mrs. Diens has held the position of treasurer, vice president and president of the North and Northwest Clerks Association and is a past president of the Wheeling Women's Club.

Walker promises program of 'zero budgeting'

by BOB LAHEY

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Daniel Walker told Illinois businessmen yesterday that he will institute a program of "zero budgeting" for the state next year.

Walker, addressing the annual legislative conference of the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce, declared that every department head in his administration will be required to build a budget starting with "zero dollars" and then will need to justify to the governor "each and every dollar they request."

The governor said this will be an integral part of his two chief goals: Tax relief and increased aid for education.

He appealed for help from the business community in attacking inefficiency in government which he blamed on "bureaucrats and special interest groups."

Gov. Daniel Walker

He said that added aid to elementary and secondary education could be achieved through greater efficiency and selective spending. Walker told the businessmen that all increased spending in his current budget proposal — $134 million — is devoted to schools. "But if all the pending school legislation now before the General Assembly were to be passed, it would raise the proposed budget by over $1 billion," Walker said.

WALKER ASKED the Chamber members for support in a legislative program which would bring about reduced administrative costs in schools and increased benefits for students. "The business community must support greater funding for schools," he said. "Good schools attract industry."

Walker also appealed for help to bring pressure on the legislature to hold expenditures to current state revenues.

"Illinois ranks in size," he said, "with the 10 largest corporate entities in the world, but it is not being run economically."

As an example of government inefficiency, the governor said millions of dollars have been spent on bumper stickers reading "The New Illinois."

"Bumper stickers will not bring new industry to Illinois," he said. "New parks and recreation areas and schools will attract industry."

Walker also said that he will institute management schools for middle-level government officials to teach them principles of sound business planning.

In response to questions Walker told the businessmen that he was "troubled" by the concept of branch banking. He said he feared that small banks which are the backbone of many communities would be unable to compete with branches of giant metropolitan banks.

WALKER ALSO said that he is fearful of a state lottery because of the opportunity for organized crime to interfere with such a revenue scheme, and because lower income groups would be most attracted to gambling with their family budgets.

Finally, Walker drew an enthusiastic response when he declared flatly, "The Crosstown Expressway (in Chicago) will not be built while I am governor, and that is all there is to it."

'First shoe' drops in Elk Grove unit district debate

by WANDALYNE RICE

The first shoe dropped last week in the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 unit district study, with surprise and relief sweeping through the rest of the High School Dist. 214 area.

The second shoe is still hovering, however, and there may even be a third shoe to keep everyone awake for at least awhile longer.

The citizens' committee that has been studying unit districts for the Dist. 59 board met last week to decide what to recommend to the board. Among the proposals was the one that has been giving Dist. 214 the heebie-jeebies — a proposal that Dist. 59 become a unit district and incorporate Elk Grove and Forest View high schools under a single board and administration with the Dist. 59 elementary schools.

Preliminary readings on what the committee would do ranged widely as the meeting approached. One person told me the committee would definitely vote for a unit district, another told me it would definitely vote against one and still a third said the outcome would depend on how many members of the committee turned out to vote.

So the committee took its vote. And, on the general proposition that it should recommend formation of a unit district (the precise shape of which would be determined later) the committee voted 15 to 10 against a unit district with two abstaining.

That was the first shoe which dropped with a thud.

The second shoe quickly materialized, being dangled from the hand of one Edward Hauser, president of the Elk Grove Village Park board and one of the committee members voting on the losing side for a unit district.

HAUSER SAID the vote was pretty close and was therefore "not decisive." He said there would definitely be a minority report filed recommending a unit district.

He also knows perfectly well that any group of citizens can press on with a unit district proposal without the help of a school board by filing the necessary petition asking for a referendum on the issue. He said he had no idea whether that would happen, but he clearly knew it was possible.

So he and the other dissenters on the committee are holding the second shoe — the possibility that the idea of a unit district in all or part of Dist. 59 isn't dead.

It would certainly be harder to push for a unit district in the face of a committee report against one, but it might not be that much harder.

During the discussion on the issue, one interesting thing that emerged was that the same arguments were being used by opponents and proponents of unit districts.

For example, Dist. 59 achievement test scores have been dropping. The proponents said the infusion of new money in the district that would come from formation of a unit district could help reverse that trend.

The opponents argued that the dropping test scores showed Dist. 59 can't manage its own problems and should not take on the added responsibility of providing high school education until it can.

All through the arguments the two sides used the same evidence to reach different conclusions. Which means that the evidence generated by the study can be used just as effectively (or ineffectively) for either side.

THE THIRD SHOE, though, is even more intriguing. That is the High School Dist. 214 study of "district organization" which was set up in response to the Dist. 59 study.

The Dist. 214 administration has repeatedly said the study isn't a "unit district study." However, several persons speculated after the Dist. 59 vote that the 214 study would die a quick and merciless death because the pressure is now off.

If the study doesn't die, however, (and it would be awkward for the 214 board to kill it with too much haste) it may prove even more interesting in the long run than Dist. 59's.

Because it isn't limited to unit districts, it may end up finding good reasons to combine some elementary districts. Or it may turn up evidence for one or more unit districts. In fact it may result in all sorts of new ideas about how school districts in this area should be organized.

So that could be a third shoe — just as irritating to unquestioning advocates of the status quo as the Dist. 59 study.

At the same time, of course, a unit district study is going on in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, with possible effect on Dist. 211.

So, though the outcome is far from clear, it is at least apparent that the term "unit district" will be around for awhile. Keep your ears open listening for the shoes to drop.

Rep. Crane hails Senate's stand on gold ownership

Restoration of the right of American citizens to own gold — a pet project of U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, since his election to Congress in 1969 — has been approved by the U.S. Senate.

Crane hailed the Senate action last week as "a great stride forward" and expressed optimism that the measure could also win approval in the House of Representatives.

The gold ownership provision, sponsored by Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, was approved in the Senate by a margin of 68-23 in what Crane called a "great bipartisan effort." He pointed out that the measure won the support of such diverse Senate personalities as Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Illinois, and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn. Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., opposed the measure, as does the Nixon administration.

McCLURE, a former member of the House, was among supporters of previous House measures introduced by Crane to repeal the ban on the ownership of gold, initiated in 1934 at the request of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Crane said McClure promised when he moved to the Senate in January to pursue the effort for the ownership of gold, and the measure passed by the Senate is identical to the one which Crane has sponsored unsuccessfully to date in the House.

Crane said a steady stream of mail favoring gold ownership has been received by members of both houses during the past two or three years and has resulted in a variety of legislative proposals for modified gold ownership. But he called the McClure proposal the first "clean bill" — removing all restrictions on private gold ownership — to win approval in either House.

A bill containing a separate, identical gold ownership provision sponsored by Crane is pending before the House and Crane speculated that the measure would eventually be taken up by a House-Senate conference committee.

CRANE SAID Senate approval of the measure represented the furthest advancement of the concept of gold ownership since it was outlawed in 1934.

In the last session of Congress, the same measure advanced as far as the floor of the House, where it was stricken as a "non-germane" amendment to another bill.

Crane noted that Rep. Wright Patman, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, had ruled the amendment germane during committee hearings, but argued on the floor that it was not germane.

He said he believed the tactic of striking the amendment as non-germane was used because opponents of private gold ownership feared that the proponents had enough votes to pass the measure, leading to his optimism that the proposal will be passed on the next attempt.

Admissions chief named to two posts

Harper College admissions director Donn Stansbury has taken on two jobs within the national college and university admissions system.

Stansbury, of Arlington Heights, was named chairman of the junior-senior college relations committee of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission Officers.

The committee is one of six working groups of the Association. Serving with him on the committee are representatives from Florida Junior College, University of Washington, Boston University, and Pennsylvania State University.

Last month Stansbury also was named a "content" instructor in a training program aimed at improving the quality of data reported by two-year colleges and to train administrative personnel in and for responsible positions in college data system operations.

The program is being sponsored by the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges and the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

Harper officials cited

Two administrators and five faculty members at Harper College have been named Outstanding Educators of America for 1973.

They were selected for exceptional service, achievements and leadership in the field of education and will be included in the national awards volume, Outstanding Educators of America.

Winners are: Clarence H. Schauer, 51, vice president of Academic Affairs, who has been at Harper College since 1969. He lives in Palatine.

Guerin A. Fischer is vice president of student affairs. Fischer, 35, is a resident of Arlington Heights. He is in his fourth year at Harper.

Professor of music George P. Makas, 51, joined the college in 1967. He is director of the Harper Community Concert Orchestra and lives in Northbrook.

Dennis Brokke, 43, is counselor and coordinator for the Harper College Community Counseling Center. A Schaumburg resident, Brokke has been at the college since 1971.

Michael D. Brown, 31, of Streamwood, is assistant professor of art. This is his second year on the Harper faculty.

Assistant professor Mary Ann Mickina, 29, coordinates the secretarial science intern program. Miss Mickina, who joined the faculty in 1970, is a Chicagoan.

Rose Trunk of Barrington is associate professor in accounting and economics at Harper. Mrs. Trunk, 37, has been a member of the faculty since 1967.

These award winners were nominated for the honor by Harper College officials. Selection guidelines include an educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, civic service and professional recognition.

Young and Crane react to latest revelations

New stink rising over Watergate

by GREG KINCZEWSKI

—Special to the Herald—

WASHINGTON — Politicians always try to get away with whatever they can, but some might have gone too far with the break-in of Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate Building. At least, that's the feeling here in the nation's capital.

The June 17 incident was an embarrassing but dead issue until late March when a series of revelations implicating past and present White House staff members close to President Nixon thrust Watergate back into the spotlight.

At least, the White House can't blame this one on the Democrats or the press. All the revelations have been supplied by Republicans.

Now suburban Reps. Samuel H. Young, R-Iowa, Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., and nearly every other Republican here is urging the President to help them get to the bottom of Watergate — and letting the chips fall where and on whom they may — end any possibility of a GOP cover-up.

For a start, they want the President to stop invoking "executive privilege" for present and past staff members implicated in recent testimony.

EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE is a hazy doctrine Presidents use to enable assistants not to testify before congressional committees on advice they gave concerning "our military security, our relations with other countries, our law enforcement procedures and many other aspects of the national interest..." Nixon said on March 12.

The President has said he will allow his aides to appear before a grand jury — which will be conducted in secret — but he has not revised his stand on executive privilege.

Young, who was just named March "Freshman Congressman of the Month" by House GOP leaders, doesn't think the Watergate burglary and "bugging" meets that lofty definition.

"I'm against blocking any kind of testimony in general," he said. "The whole problem with Watergate is that there's been an awful lot of intimidation and not enough identification. Let's clear it up."

Crane also doubts the appropriateness of executive privilege in Watergate and thinks the President ought to do any housecleaning before Congress does.

"If people in the White House know nothing about Watergate, they have nothing to fear by testifying. If they do know something, it should be made public no matter who's involved," Crane said.

"I THINK the President should do this on his own, or at least cooperate. He should have done it a long time ago," he added.

Why didn't he? If some of his staff were involved it would seem the best thing he could have done was to fire them in a wave of shocked indignation.

One explanation is the President's loyalty hang-up. Washington knows the one common denominator of the White House staff is a fierce, unquestioning loyalty to Richard Nixon.

Peter Peterson, Nixon's commerce secretary, likes to say he was eased out of his job because his calves were so thick he couldn't click his heels together when the White House beckoned.

Loyalty, of course, is a two-way street. Would Nixon turn on people who might have gotten a little too overzealous in trying to help him? It's a possibility, but so far not even Jack Anderson has accused the President of knowing about Watergate or the involvement of his aides.

There are other explanations. Young thinks the reason is the President, like most of the country, initially dismissed Watergate as "just politics" by seven misguided supporters — three of whom happened to be employed by the Committee to Re-Elect the President (CRP or CREP, depending on your politics and sense of humor).

"I DON'T condone spying in politics, although it is a practice that has been going on since the political system began," Young said.

"In my own campaign my opponent's supporters came into my headquarters and stuffed envelopes in hopes of finding out something they could use," he said.

"I never mentioned this before because that's just politics. Watergate showed very poor judgment and whoever authorized it should be punished, but it too is just politics, not something a politician gets excited about," he concluded.

Rep. Samuel H. Young

Crane's theory is that the President was and possibly still is being deceived by some of his staff. Credence is given to this since John W. Dean III — the man Nixon had heard a White House Watergate investigation — is now implicated in the case.

"The latest revelations raise the possibility that some people might not have been wholly candid on Watergate. That's why I think the President should start his own housecleaning," Crane said.

Another explanation is that public opinion was so apathetic about Watergate the President simply didn't feel compelled to do anything about what could turn into a sordid, embarrassing scandal.

HIS ADMINISTRATION was able to attack speculation about high White House staff members being involved in Watergate as either partisan rhetoric in an election year or as the "ideological bias" of an "Eastern, liberal establishment press."

But now Watergate is back, bigger than ever, and the men who have brought it back belong to neither of these hostile camps.

Judge John H. Sirica, a lifelong Republican who was appointed to the bench by President Eisenhower, presided over the trial of the seven Watergate conspirators.

He repeatedly expressed his disgust during the trial over what he felt was the lack of vigor by the prosecution in questioning witnesses and determining if anyone besides the seven defendants was involved.

L. Patrick Gray III, a longtime Nixon campaign aide and the administration's choice for FBI director, told a Senate confirmation committee Dean, "apparently" lied to FBI agents when they asked if one of the conspirators had a White House desk.

The same committee also discovered Gray had given Dean confidential FBI reports on the Watergate investigation even though it was obvious Dean and other White House officials might have been involved in the break-in.

JAMES W. McCORD Jr., however, is the man who provided the blockbuster. McCord, an ex-FBI and CIA agent, was security chief for CRP when he was caught red-handed in the Watergate on June 17 with four others (all Cubans who claimed they thought they were on a CIA mission).

These five men and two other Nixon campaign officials (E. Howard Hunt Jr. and G. Gordon Liddy) were all found guilty of various charges of burglary and eavesdropping.

McCord dropped his bombshell when the men appeared for sentencing. He handed Judge Sirica a letter which claimed:

"Others involved in the Watergate operation were not identified during the trial, when they could have been by those testifying."

"Perjury occurred during the trial in matters highly material to the very structure, orientation and impact of the government's case..."

"There was political pressure applied to the defendants to plead guilty and remain silent."

"I cannot feel confident in talking with an FBI agent, in testifying before a grand jury whose U.S. attorneys work for the Department of Justice, or in talking with other government representatives..."

LATER, in supposedly secret testimony before a select Senate committee on Watergate, McCord illustrated his lack of confidence in the integrity of persons responsible to the White House.

According to leaks to the news media, McCord accused the following of having advance knowledge of Watergate:

• John Mitchell, former attorney general and Nixon's campaign manager, who resigned shortly after Watergate.

• H. R. (Bob) Haldeman, White House chief of staff.

• Dean, the White House counsel, head of the President's Watergate investigation and architect of the President's executive privilege policies.

• Charles W. Colson, former special counsel to the President.

• Harry H. Dent, former White House assistant.

• Jeb Stuart Magruder, another former White House assistant and Nixon's deputy campaign director.

All these men have denied any knowledge or involvement in the Watergate.

Young is leery of giving immediate credence to McCord's name-naming because McCord has been promised a more lenient sentence if he cooperates in various Watergate investigations...

"SINCE HE faces a fairly lengthy jail term and is trying to get a better deal for himself, I think he might be inclined to irresponsible accusations," Young commented.

McCord admits he has "personal considerations" but claims his motives are much "broader than that."

Casting more doubt on McCord's accusations is that he has offered only hearsay evidence. McCord, reportedly, has promised the select Senate committee he will bring documentation to this week's hearing.

If he can't, yet another Republican — Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Conn., a member of the select committee — says he has proof that Haldeman probably "knew about" Watergate and other similar activities in the 1972 election.

Young and Crane are unsure what effect the latest Watergate revelations will have.

"I don't think the public will react against other Republican candidates because voters are interested more in what their state or local candidate has to offer, not if he's in the same party a scandal is connected with," Young said.

CRANE AGREES Watergate hasn't had much of a "spillover" effect on Republicans so far, but he thinks it might if the latest revelations are true.

"The public can accept some minor, faceless characters breaking into Watergate. But if some really important, well-known White House people — say Mitchell — were involved, it'd be different. I don't think it'll be that bad," he said.

George Bush, chairman of the Republican National Committee, tends toward the Crane view. He told newsmen Watergate would have no adverse effect if "promptly and fully cleared up," but might if it dragged on.

Indications are, however, that Watergate will drag on. The President has studiously avoided the subject and CRP has announced it is hiring more lawyers for future court action.

The White House, with its Nixon loyalty has bucked the party's congressional wing before.

During the 1972 campaign, state and local Republicans complained loudly too much money and effort were being concentrated on Nixon's re-election at their expense.

WHEN THE final vote was in Nixon has rolled up a near-record landslide, but against stiffer competition there was only a minor GOP increase in the House and losses in the Senate and governorships.

Then in January the White House tried to get Rep. Bob Wilson of California to resign his post as chairman of the House Republican Campaign Committee — which spends more money and is more active than any other GOP campaign organization except the national committee.

The White House was supposed to be disenchanted with Wilson's opposition to their orders not to contest the seats of 55 House Democrats who were friendly to the President's policies.

Wilson was reelected but, feeling he had made his point, resigned. Reps. Robert H. Michel of Illinois and Clarence Brown of California ran to replace him.

Word got out the White House preferred Brown. Michel promptly became a 2-to-1 favorite. The actual vote was secret but Michel won and supposedly by a comfortable margin.

YOUNG, who has only been in Washington since January, has had little contact with the White House and says he has not witnessed any tension between it and GOP congressmen.

Crane, who has been around longer, feels differently.

"I don't agree with those who claim the President himself is willing to let the party suffer for his own gain, but I do believe that would apply to significant elements of his staff," Crane said.

Imperfect Color

by Ed Landwehr

Anyone that services appliances and claims to give a hundred per cent satisfaction at all times is reaching for the moon. Or should we say Mars. But in this case we gave better than a hundred per cent.

An old bachelor was giving us the third call complaining that the color adjustment on his TV didn't seem to be correct. Finally, in making the adjustments, we asked him on the spot about the colors and found out that red wasn't recording, not on the TV screen but in his sight. This man had a color blindness for red and never knew about it. He confirmed this with an eye examination at his oculist.

So, we're trying our best. We use the latest electronic servicing meters and keep up with all the new improvements in TV, radio and sound equipment. Your phone call to 255-0700 will get a service that you will like. Try us.

You can bring your set to our shop at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights and save the home call. And while you are here, look over some of the new color TVs — we carry many nationally-advertised lines.

Alexian names panel members

Members of the medical executive committee of Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village were announced this week by Brother Ferdinand Leyva, hospital president.

The committee advises and assists the hospital's medical-dental staff and its officials, management and the board of trustees. Dr. Sheldon Cohen, chief of staff, is committee chairman.

Serving on the committee with Dr. Cohen and Brother Ferdinand are the following department chairmen: Dr. Salvador Barrocas, medicine; Dr. Ronald Boduch, pediatrics; Dr. Bernard Moore, family practice; Dr. Donald Froehke, dentistry; Dr. Lawrence Concannon, radiology; Dr. Donald Fox, pathology; Dr. Edward Gordon, rehabilitation medicine;

Dr. R. Buckland Thomas, psychiatry; Dr. Harold Labinsky, surgery, and Dr. James O'Leary, obstetrics and gynecology.

Also members of the medical executive committee are the elected representatives of the staff, Dr. Fred Neal, president, and Dr. John Kozak, president-elect.

The clinical department chairmen are members of the medical-dental staff who devote half their time to the hospital in salaried, medical administrative posts. The chairmen report to Dr. Cohen, who is responsible for the daily operations of the entire medical staff.

Dr. Cohen reports to the board of trustees through Brother Ferdinand, president of the corporation.

Illinois may join

One-third of U.S. now has no-fault

More than one-third of the U.S. population is now covered by some form of no fault auto insurance, reports the American Mutual Insurance Alliance. Illinois could join the ranks of the 16 states now offering no-fault insurance in the near future, as several reform proposals are considered in the Illinois legislature.

Among these proposals is S.B. 416, given a favorable nod by the Illinois Senate's Insurance Committee. Sen. William Harris, R., Pontiac, chief sponsor, expects action by the full Senate "fairly quickly" on the measure.

In addition to the insurance industry-backed Harris bill, others have been introduced with the support of the Illinois State Bar Association and trial lawyer groups, and the Chicago Bar Association. Another proposal may be forthcoming from the Illinois Insurance Study Commission, says Thomas Reynolds of the Illinois Insurance Information Institute in Chicago. In any case, a hearing on all no-fault bills is slated before the House Insurance Committee on April 30, he said.

NO-FAULT PROPOSALS generally provide for basic mandatory coverage which would ensure prompt payment, regardless of a fault, for injuries resulting from an auto accident. The bills differ in the type of suits which could be filed for pain and suffering, the basic required coverage and the amount of compensation.

According to the American Mutual Insurance Alliance, Kansas is the most recent state to enact a modified no-fault insurance bill. New York, Arkansas, Utah, and New Mexico also adopted no-fault plans this year. Thirty other states have this type of proposal under consideration.

In Illinois, an earlier no-fault plan was ruled unconstitutional in 1972. Current proposals are aimed at correcting the problems which were cited in the ruling.

"THE PROGRESS OF the states in considering and adopting some form of no-fault must impress even the most thoughtful critics," said Paul S. Wise, president of the Chicago-based American Mutual Insurance Alliance. The alliance is a national trade association of more than 1,000 mutually owned property and liability insurance companies, many of which provide auto insurance coverage in all 50 states.

"States legislators in growing numbers are aware of the motoring public's demands for reform of the present auto accident reparations system," continued Wise, "and they are also aware that the public in general supports a modified no-fault approach as the most reasonable and equitable solution — that is, one which the right to sue is preserved, at least in serious cases."

Federal enactment of no-fault insurance would be premature at this time, added Wise. States are seeking experience in no-fault coverage, still a relatively new statewide concept.

Rehabilitation workshop set

The rehabilitation medicine department at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village is having a workshop on rehabilitation April 18 at the Niehoff Pavilion, 956 Bisner Rd.

Designed for health professionals from Chicago area general hospitals, the workshop will focus on early rehabilitation nursing procedures that should be initiated when patients who have suffered strokes or debilitating diseases are first admitted to the hospital.

The registration fee is $5 to cover educational materials and a luncheon. Reservations may be made by telephoning the hospital at 437-5500, extension 689.

Speakers for the seminar are Maryann Fischer, registered nurse and nursing instructor at the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, Peoria; Perry Chonocholas, clinical director of Pilsen Mental Health Center and consultant to general hospital stroke units for the state of Illinois; and Dr. Edward Gordon, chairman of the rehabilitation medicine department at Alexian hospital.

Soviet Union exhibit set at Prospect High

An exhibit of souvenirs from the Soviet Union will be displayed today at 7 p.m. at Prospect High School.

The souvenirs, including musical instruments, toys, posters and a chunk of the Kremlin wall, were brought home by 27 Prospect students who visited the Soviet Union last summer.

The exhibit is open to the public and Russian food will be served for 40 cents.

Narcotics enforcement agency expansion OK'd

A $631,000 federal grant to expand the operations of the largely undercover Metropolitan Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs Enforcement Group (MEG) was endorsed yesterday by the Chicago-Cook County Criminal Justice Commission.

The expansion calls for new communities to join MEG including Des Plaines and Schaumburg.

In addition, the grant will transfer coordination of the group to the Cook County Sheriff's office. The sheriff will provide clerical employees and other non-agent employees for MEG under the new plan.

MEG would still be controlled by a council of chiefs representing each municipality member. Each community participating in the program contributes one policeman to serve as a MEG agent on a full-time basis.

Local communities already members of MEG include Arlington Heights, Bu-falo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, and Wheeling. Palatine recently decided to drop its membership.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE Commission spokesmen said that the Sheriff's police and policemen from approximately 26 communities participating in MEG would each be deputized by Sheriff Elrod to give them county-wide jurisdiction.

Local contributions including the costs of salaries for participating policemen bring the total cost of the program up to $1.6 million. As compared to the $631,000 grant sought this year, last year MEG received a $240,000 federal grant. Final approval of this year's grant must come from the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission.

Two other county-wide programs which the criminal justice commission endorsed for federal grants yesterday were Criminal Justice Center of Cook County and second-year funding for the Cook County Sheriff's Youth Services Coordinating Service Project.

The $481,000 sought in grants for the criminal justice center would be used for manpower development including training, recruiting, placement and in-service training of employees for various criminal justice agencies such as courts and police departments. The Cook County Board is seeking the funding for the $687,000 project.

For the Youth Services project, the Sheriff is seeking $137,000 in grants to continue a $211,500 program. Under the project, area seminars for youth service agencies are held, local communities receive assistance in developing youth resources such as consultation services and youth centers, and crisis intervention and counseling are provided for suburban areas which do not have local programs.

Host families needed for European teachers

Area families are needed to host English-speaking European teachers in their homes for one or two weeks this summer.

The program, American Host, is a non-governmental program designed to show the American way of life to foreign teachers by pairing them with American families. Now in its eleventh year, American Host has set up visits for over 4,000 teachers.

Host families will have an opportunity to correspond for at least a month before meeting their European guest. All that is required of the host home is a private room for the teacher and a week or two of free time to show the guest around. All transportation is provided.

Interested persons should write to The American Host Program, Hotel Commodore, Suite 2100, New York, N.Y., 10017.

The old story: supply and demand

Farmers air boycott reactions

by LEA TONKIN

The recent national meat boycott has not forced down retail price levels, say farm industry leaders. But the whole ruckus has brought some good to the consumer as the basic economic principles are brought out of the closet and dusted off for public scrutiny.

Just yesterday, for example, a group of farmers and their wives participated in a Chicago press conference hosted by the Illinois Farm Bureau Federation in an effort to explain price trends. "They're here to tell their story," said the federation's assistant to the president, Dick Wright.

What's left to tell in the story of rising food costs, particularly on the meat price scene? According to Wright, the story is the basic law of supply and demand. Farmers want to let consumers know that the "emotionalism" of the meat boycott accomplishes nothing when the supply of beef is limited and the demand for beef keeps increasing, he said. A corollary of this law would be the higher cost for an item resulting from the pressure of would-be purchasers.

"Being slapped down" by the consumers during the boycott "has irritated them, frankly," Wright said yesterday. The whole idea of the press conference was to explain what's behind rising costs, he said. This includes rising cost of production accelerated by inflation.

ANOTHER MESSAGE the farmers want to get across is that rollback of prices to Jan. 10 levels, will work at cross-purposes with the farmer's ability to increase production and in turn, work toward stable prices. A bill to roll back prices to Jan. 10 levels (H.R. 6168) was voted out of the U.S. House Banking and Currency Committee and is expected to be moved to the House floor on Thursday of this week for debate.

"Rollbacks would tell the farmer, 'You'd better cut back on production,'" said Wright. This is because rollbacks would not allow the farmer to pass along increases in their cost of production, such as labor and equipment.

Creston Foster, director of communications for the American Farm Bureau Federation, agrees with Wright that the answer to rising meat costs and other price boosts does not lie in boycott or rollback moves. "A rollback would be disastrous," he said on Tuesday. It would be almost impossible to apply, due to the large number of producers and distributors involved, he said. Price posting is already a difficult task for meat retailers, he added.

"Rolling back prices would disrupt the whole marketing and distribution system," he said. Black market operations might be encouraged under such a system, added Foster.

"IT'S HARD to say what will happen on food prices later this year," he continued. "I think inflation will continue to cause higher prices because government spending will not slow down this year," Foster said. With union settlements still to be negotiated and other unknown costs to be experienced, "it's anybody's guess" whether food costs will stabilize this year, he said.

Rising wages and prices are only a symptom of the problem, says Foster. Getting at the basic cause will require a reduction in government spending by 1974, he said. The federation supports president Nixon's budget cuts with two exceptions in this effort to rein in federal expenditures. Agricultural research and a portion of the Rural Environmental Assistance Program are the exceptions.

Farmers can live with the loss of subsidies for land set-aside programs and other projects, he said, as long as U.S. and world markets remain strong.

Boycott leaders "say we're intimidating housewives," says Foster. "But when we're talking about what it takes to produce beef, you can't repeal the law of supply and demand very easily."

Another factor in beef supply is the weather, as this week's severe storms hampered the shipment of cattle from the West and Southwest to Midwest packing plants. A spokesman for Swift and Co. said Tuesday the combined impact of the weather and the boycott resulted in a 20-30 per cent decline in meat production.

Eating habits may be improved

High meat prices could be 'a blessing in disguise'

by AILEEN CLAIRE

NEW YORK — "Meat prices must not go higher," President Nixon said in announcing the price ceiling on beef, pork and lamb.

It was a classic case of underlining the all too painfully obvious for consumers who had been trying to hold the price line on their own by every means from boycotts and co-op buying to some occasionally strange experiments with substitutes.

The one remaining horsemeat market in Portland, Ore., for example, recently developed such a thriving business that it presented the police with a crowd-control emergency. Budget-conscious shoppers were suddenly willing to line up for something less expensive in the meat line which most Americans long passed by as fit only for dogs.

As for dog food, two Oklahoma State University seniors ate nothing but for a week and wags-gishly reported the products not only inexpensive but reasonably tasty. It was a prank, but with a point.

Everyone — President, consumers and even producers, the farmers and ranchers themselves — can certainly agree that prices of all foods, not just meats, are up sharply.

BUT IT IS asking why and what to do about it, or whether anything should be done, that can start arguments.

Demand, of course, is very much involved. If meat prices are up, so is per capita consumption. Twenty years ago, Americans annually consumed 56 pounds of beef per person. In 1973, per capita consumption had more than doubled — to 118 pounds a year.

As for pork, per capita consumption is now 65 pounds a year. Pork, as most shoppers are already well aware, is not a promising price-beating substitute for beef. The shorter span between grower and market for hogs than for cattle makes pork prices more volatile day-to-day, week-to-week than beef.

The higher prices on beef and pork in markets is a response to the increasing demand of the carnivorous American for his favorite meat. The American Meat Institute reports a 10-pound supply increase in 1972 was needed to meet the demand. It actually amounted to only two pounds.

A BAD GROWING season last year and a reduction in grain supply because of foreign sales added to the cost of feeding animals for market. There also is a world-wide shortage of meat and an extremely high demand.

One solution to rising prices may come if the continued high demand and the high prices keep stimulating production. An oversupply may result, pressuring prices down.

If an expected 10 per cent increase in cattle slaughtered in 1974 occurs, then meat prices may lower by five to 10 cents a pound. Ranchers then would respond by cutting their herds and produce less beef, thus pushing prices upward again. However, the American Meat Institute says it does not see a substantial enough increase in marketable beef to meet growing demand until 1975.

Consumer boycotts are no more a solution to rising meat prices than controls. But they could have beneficial long-run results.

A week of meatless meals can show more American families that it is possible to enjoy a variety of nutritious menus. The ingredients cost less than expensive cuts of beef, yet no one need feel deprived.

Nutritionists report Americans eat more meat protein each day than they need while skimping on other healthful food sources such as fruits, vegetables, grains, dairy products, fish and poultry.

High meat prices just might bring about a reversal in American eating habits which nutritionists and doctors have been preaching for more than 30 years.

Price controls at this time will ease the immediate pressure on the consumer, but may only delay the possibility that the meat industry will shake itself down and that consumers will develop new buying and eating habits, in which the long-term solution lies.

So it boils down to the ultimate question of whether the majority of Americans is willing to change eating habits in such a way that the supply would level off to a plateau. This would mean more stable prices rather than the current inflationary situation which reflects the attitude of getting at the market will bear. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

The Almanac

Today is Wednesday, April 11, the 101st day of 1973 with 264 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Saturn and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.

American statesman and orator Edward Everett was born April 11, 1794.

On this day in history:

In 1947, Jackie Robinson became the first Negro in major league baseball when he played for the Brooklyn Dodgers against the New York Yankees in an exhibition game.

In 1966, Guam-based B52s bombed Vietnam for the first time.

In 1968, President Lyndon Johnson ordered 24,500 military reservists called up, half of them for duty in Vietnam.

In 1970, the Apollo 13 spacecraft headed for the third U.S. landing on the moon. The attempt was aborted when a faulty oxygen tank exploded. The astronauts returned to earth safely.

A thought for the day:

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur said, "There is no substitute for victory."

Employment survey to aid area students

For the second year career counselors in Dist. 214 high schools are conducting a survey of employment opportunities for high school students.

A questionnaire has been sent to industrial and business firms in the area requesting a listing of summer job opportunities, on-the-job-training, permanent full-time work for seniors, work-study programs, part-time and opportunities for handicapped students. After the questionnaires have been returned a master list of jobs will be compiled and will be available in each of the schools.

Harper speech team 6th in tournament

Harper College's speech team placed sixth in a recent regional tournament at the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn. There were 28 schools in the competition.

Gloria Kozlowski of Mount Prospect placed second, and Sue La Dore of Palatine placed third, both in persuasive speaking.

Other members of the Harper team, who gave oral interpretations, were Kim Beedy of Des Plaines and Candy Morris of Palatine.

The regional tournament of the National Junior College Forensics Association includes schools in a five state area. Regional winners go on to the National Junior College Tournament in Tennessee later this month.

Patricia A. Smith, Harper Speech instructor, coaches the speech team.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT

Marvin Frank announces that Frank Jewelers is holding the line on prices of gold and diamond jewelry. The recent devaluation of the American dollar abroad has brought drastic increases in prices of diamonds and gold in the market throughout the world. Today Frank Jewelers is holding the line on prices in spite of these increases. If you plan any purchases of diamonds, gold jewelry or gem stones within the next few months as a hedge against inflation, and devaluation of your dollars, it would be wise for you to make your purchase at this time, before price increases take effect.

Frank Jewelers recommends the purchase of diamonds, emeralds, rubies, and sapphires, jade and other gem stones for investment.

Buy with confidence at Frank Jewelers.

Our choices: Dist. 211

We endorse Robert Creek and Edward Perry for the High School Dist. 211 board of education.

qualified for reelection because of it. Creek has served the district well and deserves another term.

These two men are our choices to be elected on April 14 to the two three-year terms on the Dist. 211 board. In that election they will be competing against five other candidates.

One of the five, John Kennedy, is also well qualified for the board even though we do not endorse him.

Creek, a resident of Inverness, is incumbent president of the Dist. 211 board. During his three-year term, Creek has led the district toward fiscal responsibility. He is a powerful voice on the Dist. 211 board and most often a voice for good.

In his 1970 campaign, Creek promised to work for elimination of the district's budget deficit. The deficit has been eliminated. Now Creek says he wants to focus the board's attention on the district's educational program. We believe he will be as effective in that regard as he was in finances.

As board president he has sometimes acted in an autocratic manner, sometimes overpowering fellow board members and members of the public who should be more involved in discussion than they are.

We hope that Creek will be aware of this problem in his style on the board. However, we do not believe that he should be dis-

Perry, a resident of Palatine, has never held elective office. He is a retired Air Force officer and has worked in the aerospace industry.

We believe that Perry, with his wide background (his children attended many different schools while he was in the service) and maturity will be a definite asset to the board. He shows the thoughtfulness and care in judgment that every school board member needs.

Kennedy, also a Palatine resident, is an appealing candidate who falls short of the standards set by Creek and Perry. However, he shows concern and understanding for the business management problems of the school district. In a weaker field Kennedy, an IBM salesman, would be a much stronger contender. In this field, he is well-qualified for the board.

The other candidates for Dist. 211, Orland Vangness, John Heuman, Dianne Marks and Robert Weseman, though clearly interested and well-intentioned, seem to be either the candidates of special interest groups or to lack the depth and knowledge of the other three.

The election will be this Saturday. Whoever is elected will have to grapple for the next three years with the problems of a rapidly growing school district.

We trust the voters will make the best possible choices.

Dist. 214

We endorse Jack Costello and Donald Hoeck for election to the High School Dist. 214 board in this Saturday's voting.

They are competing with three other candidates for three three-year terms on the board, and we support them with confidence.

For the third vacancy, we endorse no one, finding that the remaining candidates offer voters a dismal choice.

Costello, an incumbent from Mount Prospect seeking his second three-year term, has shown he is a thoughtful, intelligent board member. He has an ability, during discussion, to cut through rhetoric and highlight the essence of an issue.

We have in the past disagreed with Costello on specific issues and will, we are sure, disagree with him in the future. However, he has much to offer the Dist. 214 board and should be re-elected.

Hoeck, a resident of Arlington Heights, has been involved with Wheeling High School through the Wheeling Instrumental League. In addition, during the campaign he has shown originality in suggesting advisory councils to the board that would be formed in each high school attendance area.

telligent, clear-thinking and definitely the kind of candidate who will adapt easily and quickly as a board member.

The other three candidates are Warren Schabinger of Mount Prospect, Don McGlothlin of Wheeling and Ruth Helbig of Elk Grove Village. We are unable to choose one of them to endorse.

All three show a rigidity of thought, a simplistic view on the issues facing the school district and a lack of depth.

We realize, even as we refuse to choose among these three, that voters will have to choose and that one of these candidates will win. We urge voters to study their views presented in this paper and to choose the best, or least offensive, of the three.

We also feel that, because of the poor choice, the voters of Dist. 214 have a right to feel cheated this year. The largest high school district in Illinois ought to have better candidates than those running.

When you go to the polls this Saturday, Costello and Hoeck should be automatic choices for the board, as they tower above the rest of the field. Picking the third board member, we believe, will be a much more difficult task.

The public's issue

Elections and more elections...

The only issue this week, in many readers' minds, are village and school elections coming up next Tuesday.

The Herald's received its customary avalanche of letters supporting this candidate or attacking that candidate. As a "Public's Issue" column this week, we're publishing a random selection of those letters.

Running a letter supporting one party or candidate is, as usual, not an endorsement but merely one reader speaking out on something that concerns him. We'll publish as many as possible before the election.

We voters in the village of Hoffman Estates were fortunate to have fairly responsible village government in the past four years. Better by far than the preceding four years. Various estimates of our population within five years run as high as 80,000 souls. To a machine politician that means lots of contracts to be let, village services to expand, patronage favors and the dissipation of our tax dollars to maintain the tentacles of a national political party and make more rich politicians on the order of Mayor Daley's "cabinet" in Chicago. We don't — repeat, don't — want any national party politicians operating here in the village of Hoffman Estates.

Democrats have not slated any candidates, but ROOST (Republican Party of Schaumburg Township) has fielded a slate under the phony name of Republican Party of Hoffman Estates, an extension of ROOST's fingers ultimately, they hope, into the village treasury.

ROOST already has its tentacles in the Hoffman Estates Fire District, with the help of the Palatine Republican Organization, and is flexing its muscles further to control the Hoffman Estates Park District. The same people who nominated Mr. Lyderly at the ROOST convention are the same group from Hoffman Estates Athletic Assn. who have the guts to use HEAA funds in mailing requests to members of the association on its newsletter, plumping for George Rush to be park commissioner for six years. If elected, George will see to it that more taxes are levied on home owners, because George has rich tastes.

The Civic Party has slated people who will consider Hoffman Estates' citizens first, and national party politics second, who will see that we get a municipal fire department for representation for all people in Hoffman Estates. Vote Civic Party April 17.

As the attorney for Michael H. Minton, independent candidate for mayor of Mount Prospect, I take exception to the inaccuracies which have appeared in the articles in your newspaper relative to the disposition of Mr. Minton's case in court.

First, the ballot at issue clearly failed to comply with the statutory requirements that the name of the office for which the independent candidates were running appear above their names. Our Tomorrow...

EDITORIAL: Our choices for the Harper and Oakton College boards of trustees.

Supreme Court, in the case of Sanders v. Salem Township, held that: "Failure to observe the provisions of the statute renders the election void."

Secondly, Dr. Herbert Stenson, a perceptual psychologist from the University of Illinois, who appeared on behalf of Michael Minton, gave the opinion that the ballot was perceptually unfair to all of the independent candidates, and was slanted in favor of the entire Village Party slate of candidates.

Thirdly, Mr. Minton's allegations that Mayor Teichert was responsible for the distorted ballot are confirmed by the use of good, hard common sense: Mayor Teichert is the highest elected official in the Village of Mount Prospect, the chief administrative officer of the village and the head of the Village Party ticket. He professed his total ignorance with regard to the structure of the ballot, and blamed Deputy Clerk Marie Hard for the error. Can we really believe that Mayor Teichert was quite so innocent, or that he was possessed with such a total lack of knowledge about what was going on beneath his nose? Donald Goodman, the village clerk, who is charged with the legal obligation of preparing this ballot, is unopposed in this election. Mayor Teichert is the only candidate of the Village Party slate who is engaged in a serious contest. He is the only one who had anything to gain from the distortion of the ballot.

Fourthly, Judge Comerford made his position very clear when he told the attorneys for the village, Goodman and Teichert to "change the ballot or I will rule in favor of Minton."

Finally, when Judge Comerford asked me to withdraw my complaint, I did so voluntarily, based upon the word of Bernard Lee, attorney for the village, that the changes would be made in accordance with the statute and our agreement. I know Mr. Lee quite well, trust him and consider his word good. Judge Comerford went on to state that if the ballot was not changed in accordance with the agreement, he would instantaneously reinstate the suit and require the village to print still yet another ballot.

It is unfortunate that Mr. Minton was forced to file this lawsuit and spend his own money in order to insure a fair election. On the day that the first sample ballot was made available, I called both Mayor Teichert and Clerk Goodman and left messages requesting an appointment with them to discuss the form of the ballot. They chose not to return my calls nor to meet with us.

I hope that this clarification is useful to the people of Mount Prospect.
John P. Biesiek, Jr.

EDITOR'S NOTE: What Biesiek regards as "inaccuracies" are, instead, his interpretations of what happened in a court room.

Biesiek is partner in the law firm in which Minton is employed.

The ongoing campaign for the office of mayor has taken on a proportion which poses a great danger to the citizens of Mount Prospect. That danger is evidenced by irresponsible criticism by a rather eager young man who does not concern himself with fact — merely an insatiable desire to win. His reasons are best known only to himself.

As an 18 year resident of the village, and one who has been somewhat involved with our government, and, also, one who has not taken a position up to this writing, I feel duty-bound to speak out about this irrationality.

I would like to point out that this candidate sought my endorsement. I talked to him for several hours and asked him pointed questions about the basis of his charges against the present administration, and the facts to support them. I received no answer other than additional general charges of graft, corruption, pay-offs, self-interest, low-income housing, suppression of police records, a biased press, the threat of high rise development, and a current criminal activity. I have yet to receive an answer to support those statements.

If the young man is correct in his representations, he has several duties:

—Take the information to the state's attorney where a crime is, or might be, involved;

—Document the remarks for the benefit of this community so that the voter may be knowledgeable as to the right person to elect;

—If untrue, admit those untruths so that the voter may be equally informed.

At the open forum of April 2, much of the content of this letter was put in the form of a challenge of this young man by his opponents. Again, he did not answer, nor did he provide any documentation.

The ambition and vitality of this candidate is commendable; however, that ambition and vitality must have a firm foundation in fact and evidence.

Mr. Minton — please come forth with the facts to support your charges and you will find great endorsement for your candidacy. If you fail to present those facts, and continue on a "scare" platform, you deserve no endorsement or support. Be honest with the voter!

I have been watching with some interest, the developments in the upcoming Mount Prospect mayoral and village board elections and I feel one point needs to be brought out. Although the board has done a relatively good job the past few years they seem to be stuck in a rut. All they seem to think about is more ways of spending the taxpayers money.

The village tax rate has almost doubled under the present administration. This fact coupled with the expanded tax base accomplished through annexations has given the present administration a tremendous increase in revenue. I do not feel that services have increased anywhere near the same proportion. It would appear that no one in the present administration is looking for ways to save the taxpayers money but only for new ways to spend it, and possibly not in our best interests. For this reason I feel we need an independent serving on the board. Leo Floros is that man. He has proven himself as a watchdog while serving on the Dist. 57 school board. He would not have to answer to any political cronies if he voted no on an issue but would only have to answer to the taxpayers of Mount Prospect. I feel that as an independent he would act as stabilizer on the village board. Possibly keeping them from raising our taxes even further before checking into areas where costs could be reduced.

I urge all the taxpayers in Mount Prospect to give this same serious thought before voting in the coming elections. One other point I would like to bring out is that the present administration has joined together as the Village Party so all one has to do is check off one box to give each of them a vote. I urge all vot-

Hunting clubs need fee rules

I am a very avid hunter. During pheasant hunting season I go hunting twice a week. I have looked all over in Des Plaines and surrounding areas and there are no places within 30 miles unless you join a hunting club. These hunting clubs are very expensive to join and difficult to go to every week.

There should be regulations put on these clubs as to the fees they charge.

The nearest place I can find is on the other side of Wheeling, but still 75 per cent of the land is marked "No Hunting." Even the railroad tracks are marked "No Hunting" and it is a known fact that pheasants stay around tracks for directional purposes.

We, the hunters believe that there should be land spaced out around the state to accommodate the open hunter. This would make the sport much less frustrating and much more enjoyable.

Recently I was asked to meet with a group of citizens from another school district who are forming a nominating committee for their area. Hearing the problems that others encounter in finding qualified people for their school boards, my opinion of the value of a nominating committee was reinforced.

The Nominating Committee for School Dist. 25 consists of two delegates from approximately 50 civic organizations throughout the school district. The makeup of the committee changes every year. It is not a continuing "clique." Delegates are interested and concerned people who are willing to devote the necessary time to accomplish the primary goal, to seek out qualified candidates for the school board. All candidates are considered and final selections are made by ballot by a majority of the voting body. The candidates selected this year as the best qualified are Mr. William Beck, Dr. Richard Schlott, and Mrs. Edith Jolly.

These candidates are unencumbered by any "party platform" and represent the community at large — no special interest groups. They are independent thinkers. They have been selected because they are the best qualified in areas such as experience, awareness and understanding of school board concerns, ideas concerning educational goals, motivation and ability to communicate.

I have listened to in-depth interviews with all those whose names appear on the ballot. Mr. Beck, Dr. Schlott and Mrs. Jolly have an understanding of the educational system which far surpasses the others. They are well informed and dedicated to the best interests of the total community.

Saturday, April 14 is Election Day and I urge you to consider carefully your vote to elect responsible, responsive members to our school board.

Business Today

by DEAN C. MILLER
UPI Business Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two telephone calls from conscience-stricken former employees revealed an insurance scandal that may go down as the nation's worst.

Where state, federal and stock exchange regulatory agencies and high-priced auditors and lawyers had failed to detect anything wrong, the calls revealed how a California financial conglomerate got away for two years with one of the most incredible business hoaxes in American history.

They told how Equity Funding Corp. of America, Beverly Hills, manufactured phony death claims, policies and invoices at "office forgery parties."

Hundreds of millions of dollars were bilked out of small investors around the country as well as some of the biggest banks, brokers and financial institutions in the world.

UPI correspondents in Los Angeles, Chicago, Washington and New York investigated.

Their reports on the still-unfolding scandal first Tuesday, March 6, as the day the bubble started bursting for Equity Funding and its four insurance subsidiaries, two savings and loan associations, oil and gas ventures and land and cattle operations in Phoenix, Tucson, Southern California and San Francisco.

ITS INSURANCE subsidiaries had listed at the end of 1972 $8.5 billion in policies in force, half of them held by Equity Funding Life Insurance Co. (EFLIC), storm center of the scandal.

It all began March 6 when the telephone rang in the office of Raymond L. Dirks, 39, insurance analyst for the Wall Street research firm of Delafield Childs, Inc. Dirks could hardly believe what the caller said but promised to investigate.

Three days later, Fred Mauck, director of the Illinois Department of Insurance, fielded a similar call. He also was staggered.

Those calls touched off investigations still going on in a dozen states, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Justice Department and the New York Stock Exchange.

Until they put the Equity Funding jigsaw puzzle together there is no accurate way to assess total monetary loss. Estimates range from hundreds of millions to billions in real and paper losses.

Bogus insurance policies uncovered so far — many of them sold to re-insurers around the country at $1.00 on the dollar — have a face value of $2.17 billion.

Insurance stocks have lost heavily in paper value because of the scandal.

Some $25 million in convertible bonds Equity Funding was supposed to have deposited as collateral in a Chicago bank turned up missing when Illinois officials drilled open the safety deposit box.

PAPER LOSSES on Equity Funding stock, which dropped more than $10 in an eight day period before sales were stopped, run into the millions.

It was Ronald H. Secrist, a former officer at EFLIC, who called Dirks. Now working for an Atlanta insurance company, Secrist told the astonished New York analyst that he believed one third of the EFLIC business was "fake."

He told Dirks of fake death certificates being issued, computer runs being doctored to fool inspectors, bogus policies being sold to other insurance companies — the whole incredible story, including the charge that scores of EFLIC employees not only helped in the swindle but often laughed and kidded about it as they forged documents.

On March 12 he told one client, believed to be the Boston Company Institutional Investors, Inc., about his findings. Two days later he told another client, and rumors started flying on Wall Street.

Five days later Dirks notified a third client. By then the floor of the New York Exchange was buzzing as big institutions unloaded Equity Funding holdings.

ONE WEEK before the NYSE halted trading in the stock Dirks received a call from Stanley Goldblum, then president of Equity Funding, who resigned on April 2 along with other officers. Goldblum denied everything and suggested a meeting in Beverly Hills. They met at Dirks' hotel and Goldblum again denied everything. They adjourned to the Equity Funding headquarters nearby, and Goldblum again said the report was incorrect as associates testified.

Mauck, the Illinois insurance director, received his call from a still unidentified former Equity Funding employee late in the afternoon of March 9, three days after the Dirks call.

"Initially," said Mauck, "we didn't know what to look for even though the scheme had been outlined to us. It took our examiner, a certified public accountant, two full weeks to figure out just how the scheme worked in theory."

Illinois officials finally visited the American National Bank in Chicago, drilled open the company's safe deposit box supposed to contain $25 million in bonds and found nothing. Not a cent.

How could such a thing happen, especially when so many employees had been in on the alleged fraud?

One investigator was willing to talk without attribution.

"We do know that many Equity employees were doing a discreet job they knew was improper," he said. "So, say a supervisor goes up to a guy and says 'the examiners are coming and want to see a copy of such and such a policy file. I can't find it anywhere and we'll be in trouble if we don't find it.' The guy covers up for what he thinks is a minor mistake by the boss. It could have gone something like that."

AFTER PINNING down the source of the Equity rumors on March 27, the New York Exchange stopped trading in the stock, according to Chairman James Needham.

The SEC followed with a total trading ban.

Class action suits asking for damages totaling more than $5 billion have been filed against the company.

And on April 5 Equity Funding filed for bankruptcy under Chapter 10 of the bankruptcy laws.

Tomorrow: Impact of the Scandal.

Nixon seeks sweeping trade powers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon asked Congress yesterday for sweeping powers to expand trade with Communist nations, negotiate new foreign trade agreements, and retaliate for unfair restrictions on American exports by other nations.

In a message to Congress outlining the first major U.S. trading reforms since the mid 60s, Nixon also proposed tighter restrictions on American-owned firms whose operations abroad are deemed to threaten employment at home.

The trade bill, Nixon said in a short broadcast statement, "can mean more jobs and better jobs for American workmen." He added, "It can help American consumers get more for their money."

Under the proposed legislation, "most favored nation" treatment could be extended to the Soviet Union and China, putting their exports to this country in a competitive position with products of free world nations entering the U.S. market.

Nixon urged rejection of congressional moves to deny most-favored-nation status to the Soviet Union until it lifts an emigration tax on Soviet Jews wishing to emigrate to Israel.

"I DO NOT believe that a policy of denying most-favored-nation treatment to Soviet exports is a proper or even effective way of dealing with this problem," Nixon said.

"Most favored nation" tariff treatment means a foreign trading partner can import its goods into the United States at the lowest existing legal tariff in this country.

Poland and Yugoslavia are the only Communist countries at present enjoying this status, which also extends to the free world countries with whom the U.S. is joined under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The legislation would give Nixon power to decide when a trading nation appeared to be discriminating against American goods, and to retaliate with temporary higher tariffs or quota restrictions against products of that country entering the United States.

At present such retaliation can be imposed only against a country violating international trade agreements.

ON THE OTHER hand, Nixon would be able to cut import restrictions temporarily in order to lessen inflationary pressures at home by putting foreign goods in price competition with domestic manufacturers whose price seemed too high.

The proposed legislation also would:

- Liberalize unemployment benefits for domestic workers displaced by imports.
- Impose new taxes on overseas subsidiaries of American companies, particularly those which ship finished products back to the United States.
- Grant trading concessions to underdeveloped countries.

• Authorize temporary import restrictions to help correct extraordinary deficits in the U.S. balance of payments.

Subject to approval by Congress, Nixon envisions using his new authority in the first comprehensive trade negotiations since the so-called Kennedy Round between 1962 and 1967.

The outcome of those talks was a reduction of about 35 per cent in total free world tariffs on nonfarm products — lifting a $40 billion burden from international business.

Despite the late 1960s cuts, Nixon said, "a wide variety of barriers to trade still distort the world's economic relations, harming our own interests and those of other countries."

He said preferential trading arrangements — most of which he said discriminate against the United States — have spread across Europe and Africa.

"These barriers to trade, in other countries and in ours, presently cost the United States several billion dollars a year in the form of higher consumer prices and in the inefficient use of our resources," Nixon said. "Even an economy as strong as ours can ill afford such losses."

TO DEAL with nations which he concludes have unfairly restricted American imports, Nixon requested discretionary authority to retaliate — either through higher tariffs or quota restrictions.

Present law permits retaliation only for restrictions that violate international agreements. The Nixon proposal would permit actions against practices the President considers unfair as well as illegal, and would simplify the procedure for using sanctions.

Nixon said he hoped the provision would induce other nations to remove restrictions but he said he would consider using the new power "whenever it becomes clear that our trading partners are unwilling to remove unreasonable or unjustifiable restrictions against our exports."

First employe-owned locomotive

The first suburban locomotive to carry an employe-owned emblem, a diesel operated by the Chicago and North Western Transportation Co. (C&NW) recently completed its maiden voyage from Chicago to Kenosha, Wis. It is among 11 powerful diesel locomotives formerly used in hauling transcontinental passenger trains to be used in C&NW services as of June 1.

The 160-ton diesel units, each rated at 2,250 horsepower, will replace an equal number of 1,500 horsepower suburban locomotives. "The heavier power will substantially strengthen our ability to maintain the high dependability and on-time performance of our suburban train fleet," said Larry S. Provo, president of the C&NW.

The 11 diesels cost approximately $1,500,000 to purchase and refit for suburban service. New locomotives of the same type would cost about $3,500,000.

Ordinance No. 848

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING ARTICLE XV, SCAVENGERS, OF CHAPTER 22, OF THE MUNICIPAL CODE OF THE VILLAGE OF ELK GROVE VILLAGE

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED, by the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Elk Grove Village, Counties of Cook and DuPage, Illinois, as follows:

Section 1: That Article XV, Scavengers, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"Article XV - Scavengers.

22.1501. Definition. The term "scavengers" is hereby defined to mean any person engaged in the removal and disposal of refuse, or animal or vegetable matter, usually known as "garbage" from hotels, restaurants, cafes, boarding houses, caterers, refreshment stands, commercial or industrial establishments, and any other place within the Village wherein food is served or is obtained upon the premises; or the removal and disposal of combustible refuse, including, but not limited to, paper, cartons, boxes, barrels, wood, excelsior, tree branches, yard trimmings, or the removal and disposal of non-combustible refuse, including, but not limited to, metals, tin cans, metal furniture, diet and other mineral waste, street wastes and ashes.

22.1502. License required. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to engage in the business of a scavenger without first having obtained a license therefor. The annual fee for such license shall be $500, if only one vehicle is used for scavenger purposes. If more than one vehicle is used, the annual fee shall be $500 plus $50 for each vehicle over one used in the Village.

22.1503. Issuance of License. One license shall be issued for scavenger service for the entire Village, including residential, commercial and industrial zones; all other licenses issued shall be for scavenger service in the industrial and commercial zones of the Village. The character of the license shall be designated on the application and on the license document itself. Said license shall not be vested interest in the licensee and may be renewed or revoked at the discretion of the President and Board of Trustees at the end of any licensing period with or without cause. The licensing period for scavenger license shall commence on May 1 and end on April 30 of each year.

22.1504. Applications. All applications for scavenger license shall be made in writing on forms provided by the Village to the Village Clerk. Applications shall be reviewed by the Village and the applicant notified of issuance or non-issuance of a license within ten (10) days. Applications shall be accompanied by a surety bond guaranteeing adherence by the applicant to all Village ordinances and regulations, said bond to be approved by the Village Attorney. No such license shall be issued to a person who is not a person of good character, and it shall be the duty of the Clerk to make or cause to be made an investigation into the character of each applicant. Applications for such license shall contain the number of vehicles to be used for the removal and disposal of garbage within the Village.

22.1505. Vehicles. Any vehicle used for such scavenger in its business shall maintain all safety equipment and proper weight licenses as required by the State of Illinois, and shall be water tight and equipped with all light covers, for such portions as are used for the transportation of refuse. It shall be unlawful for any vehicle to be driven over or through any street in the Village during or on a Sunday.

22.1506. Insurance. The scavenger shall carry both general and auto liability insurance and shall include the Village of Elk Grove Village as an additional named insured on both policies. All insurance premiums shall be paid by the scavenger with no cost to the Village.

22.1507. Collection. It shall be unlawful for a scavenger while collecting or transporting garbage or refuse in the Village of Elk Grove Village in scatter or allow to be scattered any garbage or refuse in such a manner as to create a public health hazard.

22.1508. Disposal. It shall be unlawful for any scavenger to dispose of or store any refuse in any place within the Village limits or within one mile thereof, except with the permission of the President and Board of Trustees. The scavenger shall disclose the location of the disposal site and shall comply with all laws of the State of Illinois and of the corporate authorities of the area within which such sites are situated.

22.1509. Penalty. Any person, firm or corporation violating any provision of this article shall be fined not less than $50.00, nor more than $500.00 for each offense; and a separate violation shall be deemed committed on each day during or on which a violation occurs or continues.

Section 2: That this ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval and publication, according to law.

PASSED this 3rd day of April, 1973.

APPROVED this 3rd day of April, 1973.

The Lighter Side...by Dick West

Brando was justified in Oscar refusal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — I come before you today, slightly red of eye but with other faculties unimpaired, to bear witness respecting Marlon Brando's recent indictment of the film industry.

When Brando refused to accept an academy award this year he was protesting, among other things, the treatment of American Indians on "TV movie reruns."

Seeking to determine the validity of his allegations, I have since spent many hours viewing old westerns on the late, late show, not to mention the early early show and the middle, middle show.

And I am now prepared to testify that Brando had ample grounds for remonstrance.

In addition to "degrading the Indian and making a mockery of his character," as Brando charged, these films also insult Indian intelligence.

TAKE, FOR EXAMPLE, those scenes in which the pioneers crossing the prairie in wagon trains are attacked by Indians. These sequences are presented in two phases.

In Phase I, the pioneers try to outrun the Indians. But notice something weird about this. As the wagons race across the prairie, the wheels sometimes turn backwards.

Obviously, the pioneers are trying to confuse their pursuers. Which certainly isn't giving the Indians credit for having any brains. No Indian would be dumb enough to believe those wheels were really spinning counterclockwise.

Even the most stupid Indian would soon realize it was all a trick to try to fool him into thinking the wagons were running in reverse, causing him to chase off in the opposite directions.

The Indians, of course, may not have been smart enough to figure out how the trick was done, and I'll have to say I'm not either.

I'VE HAD PEOPLE tell me the back-spin is an optical illusion, but I don't buy that. It's my theory the wagons had two sets of wheels, one of which could be rotated counterclockwise.

This brings us to Phase II of the attack in which the pioneers again show contempt for Indian mentality by drawing their wagons into a circle.

Invariable, in the movies, the Indians are depicted as being such blockheads they ride around and around the ring of wagons, making big fat targets of themselves until they finally get picked off.

Indians of today quite properly resent having their ancestors represented as complete dunces.

In real life, the Indians were bright enough to ride in the semi-circle, thus forcing the pioneers on the other side to waste their ammunition.

Try to keep this in mind the next time you stay up for a rerun. It will ease your conscience and make you sleep better.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — My son is almost 27 years of age. Recently when he gave blood at the Red Cross he was told that his pulse was 60, blood pressure 117/70, and his temperature was one and one-half degrees below normal. He's had similar readings on other medical examinations.

On another examination his blood pressure was 123/56 and pulse 64. He is 6'4" and weighs approximately 190 pounds. He doesn't seem to be in a hurry about anything he does. He is an engineer and is active in volleyball and basketball in the evenings immediately after work and doesn't eat until late at night.

The doctors here don't seem to be alarmed by his readings. They call him a "cool cat." Please let me know what is the cause of these abnormal readings and if he should have medical attention.

Dear Reader — Your son does not have abnormal readings and that's why the doctors aren't concerned about him. His relatively low heart rate is more an indication that he's in good physical condition. Individuals who get reasonable amounts of exercise and do not smoke or drink excessive amounts of coffee tend to have low heart rates. To illustrate the point, Roger Bannister had a resting heart rate in the 70s before he trained to break the four-minute mile and at the peak of his training his resting heart rate was below 40 beats per minute.

Likewise, the relatively low but normal diastolic, or lower reading of the blood pressure is indicative of someone in good physical condition. And incidentally, individuals with low, or low-normal blood pressure on this basis, tend to live longer than individuals with higher blood pressure readings. Also statistics show that men who are on the tall side live longer than those who are on the short side.

As far as temperature is concerned, the body temperature will normally vary in many individuals as much as one and one-half degrees during a 24-hour period. It's usually lowest in the morning and some people tend to have relatively low readings at that time without it having any medical significance whatsoever.

In summary, it sounds to me far from your son having abnormal readings or a medical problem, that he is probably in excellent physical condition.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I once read that sweets are changed to alcohol within the body. If this is true, does this alcohol have the same effect on the liver as whisky?

Dear Reader — More pure hokum in the food-fare department. If by alcohol you refer to the ethyl alcohol found in alcoholic beverages, there isn't a word of truth to this statement. Incidentally, all sweets and other carbohydrates, plus fats and even proteins can be processed eventually in the same metabolic cycle in the body. By that I mean simply that proteins can be converted to carbohydrates and fats and that fats and carbohydrates can all go through the same cycle of chemical changes in the body's metabolic process.

The metabolic machinery of the body is really quite unique. It can handle just about all of the different kinds of foods we give it. One of the major defects though, is it's not able to handle all of the excess food that it's commonly asked to process, whether it's sugar, fat or protein.

NIPC backs mass transit demonstration project

A $1 million demonstration project that could lead to a public transportation system for the elderly and handicapped in the eight-county Chicago metropolitan area was endorsed by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) last week.

The project application, submitted by the Chicago Department of Public Works, seeks two-thirds federal funding, or $700,000, from the U.S. Department of Transportation's Urban Mass Transportation Administration.

The two-phase planning and demonstration proposal is intended to lead to the development and implementation of a specialized transit system for Chicago's mobility-limited residents. It is hoped the project can eventually be expanded to include the entire eight-county metropolitan region, including Lake and Porter counties in Indiana.

A six-month planning study is to put specifications on a physical system and method of operation. These will be turned over to the Chicago Transit Authority for an 18-month demonstration project in the four adjacent Chicago neighborhoods of Uptown, Lakeview, Lincoln Park and Near North.

IN THIS 14-square-mile area, 13 per cent, or 53,815 people, are age 65 or over. Its estimated handicapped population is between 12,000 and 25,000. One fourth of the elderly are below the poverty level and one half of the disabled are unemployed.

A NIPC spokesman said the commission hopes to initiate in the coming months a regionwide study of the public transportation needs for the elderly and handicapped. In favorably reviewing Chicago's grant request, NIPC commissioners asked the City to make its experience and data available as a prototype for other communities in the region.

The spokesman said the project represents a major step in meeting stipulations of the 1964 Urban Mass Transportation Act. The act calls for provisions for moving the elderly and disabled in all capital improvement applications.

The Hollywood Scene...by Vernon Scott

Lynde's TV image accurate

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Paul Lynde's stop-and-go grin of ecstasy and agony are as much a part of him in private life as they are on his weekly situation comedy show playing a harried suburban lawyer.

He is a study in contrasts and unraveled nerves.

Lynde's hillside home once belonged to the late Errol Flynn, a man with whom Paul has almost nothing in common.

When he moved into the New Orleans-French style home, Paul had it completely renovated, mistakenly believing he would save money. In the end it would have cost half as much to build a new house.

A native of Mount Vernon, Ohio, and former resident of New York, Lynde felt compelled to build or buy as high in the hills as possible to obtain a city lights view. He succeeded. The house is built on six separate levels and each room has a balcony with an iron railing.

"Many of my friends only visit once," he says with misgivings.

"Those with acrophobia never come back. They can't stand the height."

There is plenty of room for bachelor Lynde, including three bedrooms, one of which has been transformed into memory lane. It contains pictures, awards and other memorabilia collected over the years.

"I have my whole career in that room," Paul says, flashing his toothy grin. "I don't want that stuff spread all over the house."

Paul is a passable cook, depending on beef stew or steaks and salad when he entertains. But recently he's hired a cook for those evenings when he entertains six or eight friends for dinner.

Today's TV highlights

Hallmark Hall of Fame. "The Small Miracle." New production for television, of the Paul Gallico story about an orphaned Italian boy who seeks help from the Pope for his ailing donkey. Vittorio de Sica plays a kindly priest and Raf Vallone a practical father superior, and the Italian boy is portrayed by an 11-year-old American, Marco Della Cava, who is not a professional actor. The story was filmed in Rome and Assisi. 90 minutes. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5.

Today, Scheduled: explanation by an endocrinologist about the latest methods of stimulation for children whose growth is retarded; discussion with the author of "The Wonderful Crisis of Middle Age," Eda Leshan. 8 a.m., Channel 5.

Disah's Place. Guests include opera singer Dorothy Kirsten and golfers Ken Venturi. 9 a.m., Channel 5.

"Notorious." Another rerun of the famous movie, directed by Alfred Hitchcock and written by Ben Hecht, combining international intrigue and a love story, with Cary Grant, Ingrid Bergman, Claude Rains, Louis Calhern, Leopoldine Konstantin. Two hours. 7 p.m., Channel 7.

When you expect a headache, take a couple of aspirin; when you have a sore tooth, get it treated; when you have to make a painful discard, make it quickly and gracefully.

South decided to play dummy's deuce of spades at trick one. West might have led from jack-10. He also decided to take East's 10 with his queen and run his diamonds quickly.

East dropped the nine of hearts as his first discard and followed with two spades. West threw the deuce of hearts and the four of clubs without any signs of torment but his third discard presented a terrific problem. He finally solved it by chucking the seven of hearts.

South, who had jettisoned four clubs and a heart, played the five of hearts from dummy. East did the best he could by ducking and West was in. He cashed his three spades and then had to lead away from his king of clubs.

East and West discussed the possibility of beating the contract by West holding just two spades but agreed that the club end-play would have worked irrespective of which defender led the suit.

They were right about that and also about the fact that if West had unguarded his king of clubs declarer could have played his ace and picked it up but that unguarding of the club king represented West's best chance. If he chucked his four and six of clubs and then the deuce of hearts South might have gone wrong. He didn't against the actual defense.

DuBrow on TV...by Rick DuBrow

Abbott and Costello: tomorrow's fad?

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—There's a new book called "Who's On First?" about the great comedy team of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, and it includes an introduction by CBS-TV's Carol Burnett, whose view as a comic artist is pertinent.

"I think that they're classic," she says. "Possibly they are not up there now with the Marx Brothers, and with W. C. Fields because there hasn't been enough time. Usually, it happens quite a few years later."

She adds: "The word 'genius' is too loosely used in our business, but I don't have the slightest reluctance to apply it to Abbott and Costello... I am convinced that in the years ahead, when their movies and television shows are re-used and re-issued, they will be recognized as classic artists in their field... They will become tomorrow's 'in' thing."

THE TITLE "Who's On First?" comes from the name of the famous Abbott and Costello baseball routine. And the book, published by Darien House Inc. and distributed by W. W. Norton & Co. Inc., is made up primarily of photos and accompanying dialogue that re-create choice routines from Abbott and Costello movies, edited for publication by Richard J. Anobile.

"I HAD A particular love for Costello," says Miss Burnett in her introduction. "Maybe I was drawn to him because he was the underdog... there was an innate sweetness he had that drew me to him... and I think I'm right in saying this, that Abbott was about the best straight man that ever lived."

Miss Burnett says, "there are very few performers around who remind me of Abbott and Costello. One who does is Tim Conway, whose potential has not been realized. The man is a comedy genius. I think Tim, had he been in silent films, would have been as big as any of them. He comes up with incredible pieces of business."

THE COMEDIENNE says Costello told an interviewer he almost became a dramatic actor in films once, that he recounted "Charles Chaplin was his houseguest, escaping from the press," and add: "Charlie told me he planned to remake 'The Kid,' with me playing the role he created. Then I guess the thing was dropped because he got involved in this political situation, and left the country."

Miss Burnett shows genuine affection for Abbott and Costello in her introduction to "Who's On First?", and it is an effective tribute to the enormously popular comedy team from an intelligent, literate entertainer who has a human, clear-eyed view of her profession.

At last: live television comes to the Yukon

WHITEHORSE, Canada (UPI) — Up here in the Yukon, the biggest show in town these days is live television which has finally come to Whitehorse and a dozen other towns in the far north, thanks to Anik 1, Canada's first communications satellite.

Designed and developed by Hughes Aircraft Company, Anik 1 is the world's first domestic synchronous communications satellite. A sister ship, Anik 2, is scheduled to be launched April 19.

Whitehorse began receiving Anik's signals early in February and one measure of its success are sales of color television sets.

At Houghton's Department Store in Whitehorse, Anik has set off a small sales boom of such sets, according to store manager Don Jones.

"People are coming in from all kinds of places out in the country," he said. "They weren't much interested in buying new sets when we had the frontier package taped material. Now all that is changed."

NELLIE COUNOYEA, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation northern service station manager at Inuvik, reported the Hudson Bay store there sold 17 color sets in two days.

But one elderly viewer was not impressed with the color reception she received on her set and called to complain about the quality. It turned out she owned a black-and-white set.

"She didn't understand she had to get a color television set to get a color picture," said Raoul St. Julien, manager of the station at Whitehorse.

What are some of the favorite programs being seen for the first time in the Far North? "Sesame Street," "Cannon," and adventure-type shows rate highly.

There are complaints, too. Not about the quality of reception, but in programming.

"We don't get the late movies from Anik yet," said St. Julien. "At the last count we had more than 100 complaints about the matter. People don't think that it is fair that we should get everything except the late movies. But I'm told that is going to change soon."

And Yukon residents aren't particularly pleased about the number of commercials.

"That's new to almost everybody," said St. Julien. "The frontier package never had any ads — now we are seeing things advertised that we can't even buy up here."

RECEPTIONIST

Over the years we have been very fortunate in our receptionist. The type we have had the best luck with is as follows:

- 1.) A "housewife" with excellent intelligence and rusty office skills — light typing, little or no shorthand.
 - 2.) Live reasonably close to our office.
 - 3.) Good "sparkplug" personality.
- The work is varied and interesting. When the phone isn't ringing like mad (usual), you type "easy stuff" (envelopes or addressograph plates) and, of course, greet and assign all incoming applicants, both male and female. Later you will learn to run several other office machines. The hours are 8:20 a.m. to 4:40 p.m. with an hour for lunch. We can pay from $2.00 to $3.00 per hour (depending on prior experience and current skills) and we have Blue Cross-Blue Shield available. Other raises and benefits as per performance. But above and beyond all else, the people are fascinating and the day just flies.
- I am going to run this ad for two weeks — Until April 13 — and make a decision that afternoon. We would like our gal to start Monday, April 16. If you are sharp, available and interested, call —

Jim Cook

FOR THE PAST five years, St. Viator's cup of tea has been going from tee to cup.

During that half-decade, Lion varsity golfers were impregnable in 50 successive matches, exhibiting mortality only twice when Barrington and Bishop McNamara somehow earned ties with the Arlington Heights fairway flyers during the 1972 season.

But Barrington also holds the distinction of becoming the Lions' first victim in the amazing streak — way back in the spring of 1969.

Since that April Fool's Day at Thunderbird Country Club, Viator didn't fool around in disposing of four full schedules of challengers.

Perhaps one of the roughest and least logical of all sports to dominate over a period of five years, Viator's swingers manipulated their home course at Rob Roy like a puppet. But there were no strings attached. The Lions were an annual sharp-bladed lawnmower.

Hersey finally stabbed Viator's Achilles heel Thursday at Rob Roy. The Huskies cemented a lid on the Lions' beanstalking skyscraper, 152-154.

"I guess it had to end sometime," a somewhat relieved Viator head coach

From Carter's standpoint, the scores on Rob Roy's 3,200-yard par 35 front nine were "extraordinary" in the face of the conditions — both mental and physical — surrounding the meet.

"There was some water and a lot of wind that must have been distracting for the kids," he explained. "And, of course, we had the incentive to stop their streak."

Ken Peck

but I was just amazed both teams scored as well as they did."

How does a team win 59 straight golf meets?

The hint of a St. Viator dynasty came during the 1968 campaign when the Lions earned Chicagoland Prep League crowns on both the varsity and frosh-soph levels.

The varsity Lions compiled a 12-2-1 log while the freshmen and sophomores earned the loop's top credentials off an 11-2 season.

Then it began.

Never bothering to look over their shoulders, the 1969 Lion swingers ran up a perfect 13-0 campaign (including Hersey) for its second successive conference title.

Paced by Jim Dawson, Andy Gore, Ken Mattini, Don Weber and Ed Valtely, Viator putted past a tough schedule that allowed them the luxury of a home course advantage just three times all season.

Mario Vitale and George Ciacio took up the hunt in 1970 as Viator duplicated another 13-0 campaign and still another conference championship — this time in the Suburban Catholic League. Postscripting this team's season was an astounding round of 142 it posted against St. Patrick.

The surging 26-meet bundle was dropped into the capable hands of such standouts as Rich Evans, Mike McDonald, Steve Carroll and Frank Fenton in 1971.

The quartet outdid their predecessors by romping through a 14-meet test unscathed, capturing a share of a district title with Arlington and finishing fourth in the state sectional.

The 40-meet inheritance next bounced to the likes of Terry McDonald, Vic Incinelli, Greg Muech, Jim Weber, Mike Brawley and Mick Fliton in 1972.

There was no stopping the Viator express behind talent like that, although both ties did develop during the long 17-meet dual schedule. The Lions opened their 1973 exhibition in impressive fashion — stunning youthful Rolling Meadows, 152-172.

Then came Hersey.

"All good things come to an end," Peck reiterated. "There's no sense brooding about it. We have no hard feelings. Maybe in the long run, it will work to our benefit. The kids know they're going to have to start playing better and that they're not infallible. Maybe we can start another winning streak."

Maybe Hersey's already started one.

Medalist in the Viator upset was junior Jeff Kallman who needed just 11 putts to card a one-over 36. Counting their 1972 season-ending triumph over Wheeling, that's two in a row for the Huskies!

Ken Carter

Ken Peck sighed "It wasn't a fluke or anything. Hersey was the better team Thursday. They played better than we did although I thought they shot well enough to win."

Hersey's soft-spoken head coach Ken Carter wasn't overly shocked at what his chippers had accomplished.

"We played Rob Roy all week and were shooting well," he said. "In fact, (captain) Ray Peterson and Bruce Conroy were shooting even par."

The role of upsetting high school golf's kingpins was nothing new for Carter's Huskies. Two years ago, this same group halted the Prospect frosh-soph team's 55-meet skien!

"You know," Peck began to level, "the atmosphere on our team was getting automatic. You really can't blame the kids, but they were so accustomed to winning that they almost felt assured of it even before they played."

"They started losing some of their competitive skills because of it and may be they weren't trying as hard because they had the idea that it wouldn't make any difference. They felt they were going to win anyhow."

"No I don't think pressure ever entered into it," Peck continued. "I never heard any talk about pressure, but Thursday, I think I remember someone mentioning they were a little nervous before the match."

"We knew that Hersey was a good team — a steady team — and that they got the same kind of talent we do. I think we only beat them by a couple of strokes in last year's district meet, so the caliber of their team didn't really fool us."

One thing Peck was quick to mention was Hersey's graciousness after the stunning scores came trickling in. "They almost seemed apologetic," Peck said. "They were perfect gentlemen."

HURRYIN' HUSKIES Jim DiLenge (left) and Dave Jones push toward the finish line in helping Hersey to a triangular victory over Elk Grove and St. Viator that opened the outdoor season. Jones placed second in the two-mile run and DiLenge was third in the 100-yard dash and fourth in the 220.

Striking Lanes clinches 2nd half crown in Paddock Women's Classic

by GENE KIRKHAM

Led by Lu Schoenberger who grabbed individual honors at Rolling Meadows Bowl, the Striking Lanes team fired games of 968, 944, and 919, for a 2831 team series and five points over Franklin-Weber Pontiac in the Paddock Women's Classic Traveling League.

Franklin-Weber rolled 919, 947, and 813 for 2679, winning their two points with the 947 second game by three pins.

Lu Schoenberger fired games of 191, 225, and 213 for a 629 series as she helped her team close the gate on the other contenders as only one week remains and Striking leads by 12 points over first half winner L-Tran Engineering.

Other fine Striking scores included 583 by Bette Brelle with a 234 first game, 576 by Alice Schroder with a 213 game, and Judy Croston's consistent 585 series.

For Franklin-Weber Pontiac, all five bowlers scored over 500 with Joan Plywack rolling 563, Gloria Lucchesi 546, with a 201 game, Betty Peterman, 543, Lee Winski, a 217 game and a 515 series, and Marge Lindenberg, a 512 series.

Morton Pontiac was a big factor in Striking's second half win as they defeated L-Tran Engineering Corporation five points to two.

Winning the first two games with 930, and 939, they rolled a 2736 team series to win the series point as L-Tran won the third game with 894 for their two points.

Morton was led by Ruth Baurhyte who had a 579 series with a 209 and a 212 game while Lou Lass had a 211 game and a 576 series. Betty Parkhurst rolled 550 and Emily Dagoon added 547 for Morton. L-Tran was led by Marlis

Lu Schoenberger

Pleickhardt who had 544, Toshi Inahara with 514, and Vi Douglas with 500 even.

The co-sponsored Doyle's Sports Shop - Des Plaines Lanes team defeated Hoffman Lanes five points to two, winning the first two games with 924 and 920 and the series point 2696 to 2541.

Hoffman Lanes rolled 876 to win the third game and their two points. Peggy Harris of Hoffman Lanes led the scoring in this match with a 608 series including games of 203, 234, and 171.

All of the Doyle's-Des Plaines Lanes bowlers rolled 500 or better as Ann Neumann had 585 with a 212 game, Dee Harris had a 212 and a 553 series, Winnie Lohse rolled 540 and Bonnie Kuhn had 517 with a 200 game.

Thunderbird Country Club won five of seven points over Arlington Park Towers by winning the final two games with 919 and 933 and the series point with 2643.

Arlington Park won the opening game with 873. Jean Sicilian led the scoring in this match for Thunderbird as she fired 588 with a big 255 final game. Dee Kachelmuss had a 214 game and a 560 series, Marge Carlson rolled a 205 and a 515 and Mary Yurs had 511.

For Arlington Park Towers Donna Lohse rolled 543 with a 202 and a 200 game while Peggy Wales fired a 553 series.

April 14 is the final position round before the playoffs with the following teams scheduled at Hoffman Lanes: Striking Lanes vs L-Tran, Doyle's-Des Plaines Lanes vs Hoffman Lanes, Morton Pontiac vs Thunderbird Country Club, and Franklin-Weber Pontiac vs Arlington Park Towers.

Team Standings

Striking Lanes	74
L - Tran Engineering	62
Doyle's - Des Plaines Lanes	57

Thunderbird Country Club	39
Franklin - Weber Pontiac	38
Arlington Park Towers	35

Hersey, Meadows post net victories

St. Viator's tennis team has to be happy about one thing — there's only one more meet left on the schedule against a Mid-Suburban League team. And that's not until May 18 (Fremd).

The Lions, losers to Elk Grove by a 5-0 score on Thursday, suffered the same fate the succeeding days against Hersey and Rolling Meadows.

HERSEY ROLLS

The Huskies won their five matches with the Lions in straight sets Friday. Letterman Dave Schaunk easily defeated Mike Revnes by 6-1 scores.

Mark Johnson had a little more trouble before putting away Bruce Fischer by 6-3, 8-6 scores. Keith Rayner handled Russ Fliton 6-0, 6-1.

John Hastings and Al Myers did the job at first doubles with 6-2, 6-3 victories over Jim Bernadini and Don Barnack.

The team of John Walsworth and Bruce McAlister defeated Mark Gentuso and Steve Carrol 7-5, 6-2.

Lothar Peistrup, Hersey's coach, called his team an "inexperienced squad." He added that because of just one varsity letterman, he "hated to predict" where his team would finish in the MSL.

MOVIN' MEADOWS

The Mustangs, opening up on their home courts for the first time, had a close call at second singles Saturday, but Mark Shannon came through. After splitting the first two sets with Tom Wenzel, 7-5 and 1-6, Shannon won the third set 6-2.

Meadows' Don Bohac and Stan Hilty only gave up seven games between them in the other singles matches. Bohac won first singles with 6-3, 6-0 verdicts over Revnes. Hilty defeated Fischer 6-3, 6-1.

Curt Andersen and sophomore Chuck Fischer, the only non-senior in the starting lineup, handled Bernadini and Barnack 6-0, 6-1. Larry Pressl and Paul Germano nearly had identical scores with their first doubles teammates by beating Fliton and Carrol 6-0, 6-2.

Others out for Coach Neal Peterson's team are juniors Craig Glover, Brad Hammernsmith, Scott Skogen, Lee Capper, Jim Peterson, Ed Sholly and senior Jim Park.

"I don't know yet," said Peterson of his team's chances in the MSL. "We're pleased with our showing today. We'll just have to wait..."

With his whole team returning from last year's first season ever, hopes have to be fairly high for a good year by this more experienced Mustang team.

International headliner

Virgin accepts meet invitation

Illinois' best distance runner the last two years, the cream of an outstanding crop of hurdlers, and California's best performers in the discus and the long jump have become among the first athletes to accept invitations to this year's International Prep Invitational Track and Field Meet.

Meet Director Joe Newton made the announcement, and said entries this year have exceeded all expectations. "We've been pleasantly surprised by the number of invitations accepted so quickly," Newton said, "but word must have gotten around as to the quality of the meet."

The meet again will be held on the eight-lane Uniroyal all-weather track at Prospect High School, starting at 1 p.m. June 9. Sanctioned by the Central Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, the meet will bring together the top high school seniors in this country and the best of an unusually strong field of performers from foreign lands.

Among the first athletes entered were: Craig Virgin, Lebanon, Ill., winner of the state cross-country championship the last two years, who already has a 4:08 clocking in the mile and 8:45 in the two-mile this year indoors.

Reggie Blackshear, Metuchen, N.J., who has a national record of 1:08.9 in the 60-yard high hurdles; and Phil Stapp, Louisville (Ky.) Stuart High School, who holds a prep mark in the 70-yard high hurdles, '07.9.

William Dabney and Royd Lake, both from Boys High, Brooklyn, N.Y. As juniors last year Dabney turned in a slick 1:51.8 time in the half-mile and 4:10.8 in the mile. Lake had a 47.8 clocking in the 440, stamping him as one of the best quarter milers in the country this year.

Jay Pushkin, Los Altos High School, Mountain View, Calif., has a 189-foot, 11-inch toss in the discus. Last year, Pushkin's teammate Scott Overton set a national record of 204-5 in the event and was a winner in the first I.P.I. meet.

Gerald Hardeman, who already has gone 25-feet, 9 1/2-inches in the long jump while competing for Fresno (Calif.) Edison High School.

Bill Edwards, Homer, Ill., 181-8 in the discus.

Jerry Shnay, Public Relations, 183 Shabbona Dr., Park Forest, Ill., AC 312, 747-3671.

TOM STEPHANI of Palatine races his Nicky Chevrolet Formula Vee, which will see action in at least 10 of the Sports Car Clubs of America's National Championship races this summer. The car reaches 125 mph.

New boys baseball forms

A new form for boys baseball reports will be used this year by the Herald.

In the past the Herald sports department typed all the information as submitted by the various leagues.

Because of the time this involved, and because the area keeps growing every year, it was necessary to make new boys baseball forms.

If the forms are filled in properly, there will be no need to do any retyping and the forms can be sent directly to the typewriters.

It is urged that each boys baseball league supply the Herald sports department with the name, address, and phone number of the person in charge of publicity for 1973. It is also important that the Herald knows how many games each league will play during the upcoming season. In the past leagues have taken more sheets than they have needed.

Send this information as soon as possible to Herald Sports Department, 217 W. Campbell, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

All league publicity people will be notified as soon as the new forms are available.

Grant joins tennis staff at new club

John A. (Jack) Grant, 422 Wisner, Park Ridge, president of the Des Plaines Tennis Club, has joined the staff of the new Woodfield Racquet Club under construction in the Schaumburg Industrial Park.

Grant's association with the 10-court indoor tennis facility was made by Ann K. Workman, Wheeling, general manager of the club.

Grant, a veteran tennis player and enthusiast, is widely known in the northwest suburban tennis circles. "We are pleased to have a person of Grant's caliber join us," Mrs. Workman said.

The club will open Sept. 1. Information on membership may be obtained by writing to P.O. Box 7, Roselle, Ill. 60172 or by calling 884-0678.

At Beverly Lanes

NIMS, Quade and Gutwein swept all seven points from their opponents in the Parkway Men's League. Haanel remains three points in the lead but Quade and NIMS are making the race interesting.

Al Karsten's 664 is high for the league this season. His NIMS teammate, Bill Larson scored 541. In Quade's victory Bud Mills scored 533-214 while opponent Otto Heimann rolled 542 for Haanel. Fred Turcotte had a 216 game for Haanel and George Meyer rolled a 202 game for his team.

Grove defeats Forest View in net quad

Elk Grove came out of the Forest View hosted quadrangular better off than the Falcons last weekend.

The Grenadiers blanked Rich East 5-0, edged out the Falcons 3-2 and lost to York — the winningest team at the meet — 4-1. In the latter contest, Len Greenberg outlasted York's John Wu 15-13 and 6-3.

However, the Grove took on Forest View right after that grueling match and Greenberg lost to Joe Karwinski 8-6, 2-6, 6-1. Greenberg defeated Frank Van Boldrik of Rich East 8-6, 6-2.

A double winner for the hosts was Greg Meyer. He beat Elk Grove's Ken Pollitz 7-5, 6-3 and Rich's Larry Kozil 6-1, 6-0. The latter helped his team to a 3-2 victory over East.

Forest View lost to York by a 5-0 score.

FOREST VIEW QUADRANGULAR
York 5, Forest View 0

Taste Windsor instead.

Just taste Windsor—and you may never go back to your usual whisky. Windsor is the only Canadian made exclusively with Canadian grain, with water from glacier-fed springs, and aged in the clear dry air of the Canadian Rockies.

Very remarkably priced.

The smoothest whisky ever to come out of Canada.

International K.C. results --

A perky little West Highland White Terrier was Best in Show at the International Kennel Club show held at the Amphitheatre, March 31 and April 1. Owned by Mrs. B. G. Frame of Indianapolis, Ind., the dog, whose name is Ch. Purston Pinnmoney Pedlar, was a popular choice of the thousands of spectators who watched the final judging.

We had a lot of winners in our area. Jim and Jo Rosser of Barrington Woods, Palatine, had their English Setter, Ch. Rossmoors Captivat'n Carrie, take a third place in the Sporting Group. From Long Grove, Tony and Jackie McMurray's two Alaskan Malamutes, Ch. Frostland's Big Shot and Ch. Fende of the Frostland, won the brace class in the Working Group.

Marilyn Miller from Palatine entered a Keeshonden, Keelane's South Paw, which won Winner's Dog. Other winners included: Thomas Laurie, Des Plaines, Italian Greyhound, Laura's Rouetta of Kashan, Best of Opposite Sex; from Schaumburg, a Cocker Spaniel, Ch. Rinky Dinks Lanel's Cinnamon owned by Roland E. Lavelle Jr. and Bruce A. Nelson, also won the Best of Opposite Sex class for A.S.C.O.B. Spaniels.

Another Best of Opposite Sex winner was a Pug, Ch. C.J.'s Sea Sprite, owned by John T. Aquino of Long Grove. Patricia and James Besander of Palatine entered their Pulk, Gooseberry Hill Zsa Zsa, and won Best Opposite Sex for the breed.

The Bloodhound, Hylbillie's HyNote

Peggy, owned by Pat Woodruff and Hylda Owen, Palatine, won the Winner's Bitch class. A smooth coated Dachshund, Creekside's Krackin Good, owned by Lucy L. Huck of Palatine, won Best of Winners. Scott H. Blotica of Wheeling won a Best of Opposite Sex with his entry, the Bulldog, Serenade's Encore.

The McMurrays from Long Grove who had the winning brace in Working Group also had one of the dogs, Ch. Fende of the Frostland, win the Best of Opposite Sex title for Alaskan Malamutes. The Boston Terrier, Toy Town Hi Stepping Star Trek, owned by Elaine H. Newbecker of Des Plaines, won the Winner's Dog class for the breed.

Even some of the youngsters entered in special events for them did pretty well. Jeff Guelzloff of Des Plaines won third place in the children's obedience demonstration. Also winning a third place was Patty Greco of Palatine, who showed a Sheltie in the Open Junior class of Junior Showmanship.

Spring field trial -- The Western Irish Setter Club will hold its Spring Field Trial on April 28 and 29, at the Joliet Wildlife area, Joliet. Open to Irish, English and Gordon Setters, ribbons and trophies will be awarded.

For more information call Irene Johnson at 312-439-5229.

Barks and Bays -- It finally happened. They have a "Dating Game" for dogs, or you might say a computer mating service. A young man in New York City has started such a service for dog owners who want facts via computer about possible mates for their dogs.

Paddock Classic Traveling League

Morton's bowlers sweep with 3019

by GENE KIRKHAM

Des Plaines Lanes saw the Paddock Classic Traveling League again tighten the screws as Morton Pontiac fought their way to a seven point sweep over Des Plaines Ace Hardware.

With games of 1040, 988 and 991 for the night's high 3019 series, Morton jumped into a tie for the second half leadership with Gaare Oil leaving Ace Hardware and Kula's Five only one point behind.

Bob Glaser led the league with 233, 206, and 204 for a 643 series to aid Morton's cause and continue his league leading av-

950, and 889 for a 2839 Gaare won the first two games and the series as Uncle Andy's had 967, 889, and 910 for 2766, winning their two points in the final game by 11 pins. Gene Folkes led the scoring for Gaare Oil with 211, 227 and 183 for 626 while Gene Kirkham added 603 including a 233 game.

Hoffman Lanes came out on top of Kula's Five winning four points to Kula's three. Kula's won the first game with a big 1019 while Hoffman won the next two games 910 to 904, and 976 to 884. Kula's won the series point 2807 to 2747 with Fred Hansen leading the scoring with 225, 195 and 202 for a 622 series to help Kula's stay in the race.

Bank of Rolling Meadows defeated Don-Lor five points to two as they won the first two games with 891 and 963 and the series point with 2705. Don-Lor won their two points with a 908 third game.

With only one regular week and a position round remaining, and only one point separating four teams, the following match games at Hoffman Lanes could prove very interesting. On Saturday it will be Bank of Rolling Meadows vs Hoffman Lanes, Kula's Five vs Don-Lor, Uncle Andy's Cow Palace vs Morton Pontiac, and Des Plaines Ace Hardware vs Gaare Oil Company.

Also at this time the Paddock Classic League bowlers would like to wish fellow bowler Ernie Koche a full and complete recovery from his recent illness.

Palatine cast as golf choice

Meet the favorites of the Mid-Suburban League golf circuit.

That's what Fremd will be doing when it visits Palatine (weather permitting) this afternoon at 3:30. Opposing coaches have tabbed the Pirates the team to beat this year off a strong returning force that finished 8-3 in the loop in 1972.

Experienced is the word that makes Palatine a top choice. The Pirates qualified in the state district tournament last year before bowing out in the sectionals. The Pirates averaged only 165.5 strokes per dual-meet outing last year and compiled a 9-6 overall mark including a one-stroke setback to undefeated Prospect.

Head coach Marc Denny has already circled Friday, April 27 on his calendar. That's the date the Pirates are scheduled to bump heads with Prospect and Hersey in what could be a crucial early-season showdown.

PALATINE GOLF SCHEDULE

Morton's Bill Smith also fired 600 with games of 194, 215, and 214 for a 623. Ace Hardware never really got going as they rolled 937, 976, losing the second game by 12 pins, and a final 897 game for a 2810 series.

Gaare Oil Company and Uncle Andy's Cow Palace went down to the wire in a couple of games with Gaare Oil coming out on top with five points. Rolling 990,

FAN FARE

Wistar, Finis Pace Fremd

Fremd collected six first places, four seconds and an abundance of thirds and fourths to win a triangular track meet, the Vikings' 62½ points topping Crystal Lake's 55 and Elgin Larkin's 42½.

Jerry Finks and Tom Wistar were two-time winners, and all four of their marks were good ones. Wistar turned in a :22.3 in the 220-yard dash, best in the area through the weekend and better than any time in that event all last year, and added a fine :52.9 in the 440. Finks registered the best shot put mark thus far with 56 feet, 4¼ inches (he had one toss better than that indoors) and also won the discus throw with 148-6.

Other wins came on John Sheputis' 5-10 high jump and Mike Vasquez's 12-0 pole vault.

Ken Vale was runnerup twice with 49-10¼ in the shot and 119-6 in the discus and Dave Scott was second in the 800 with 2:07.

The Viking frosh-soph won with 60 points to 52½ for Larkin and 39 for Crystal Lake.

Attention, golf league secretaries

Golf league officials, this concerns you.

The golf season for both men and women is fast approaching and the Herald sports department would like to publish as much newsworthy information as the leagues can turn in.

The following eight suggestions should be passed along to your league secretaries, handicap chairmen or publicity officials so that they can use these items as a guide in compiling their information:

1) First and last names of the players mentioned.

2) Names of the low gross and low net players, the scores they shot along with the par of the nines they played.

3) Names of the birdie, eagle and hole-in-one shooters along with the holes. For the latter two include the yardage of the hole, the names of the other witnesses, what club the ace shooter was using, how the shot went in, what he had for the round and if it was his first hole-in-one.

4) Names of the golfers on the team that is leading the league.

5) The standings with the names of the sponsoring companies and the points each team has accumulated.

6) Names of golfers who scored chip-in shots, the hole it was accomplished on, the distance of the chip, the score for the hole and the par of the hole.

7) Oddities, such as a golfer shooting par, bogey, par, bogey for nine holes; firing all fours, all fives, all sixes, et cetera. And also strange shots or happenings on the course.

8) Names of the leading regulars and top alternate in each flight and their records.

After this information is gathered together, here are some tips for turning it in to the Herald:

*Just give sports the straight facts, you need not write the story.

*Please type or print the information clearly so that names will not be misspelled.

*League information must be turned in early enough so that it will appear before the next league meeting the following week.

*The sports department will accept golf league information one of two ways — either drop it off at the Arlington Heights office (with the receptionist during office hours or in the mail slot to the left of the front door after hours) or send it to the Herald Sports Department, 217 W. Campbell St., Arlington Heights, Illinois 60006.

*The sports department will not take golf information over the phone unless it pertains to a hole-in-one. If an ace should be shot, call the Herald as soon as possible at 394-2300.

Racing car on display at Rolling Meadows mall

Bryant Air Conditioning Company has announced that the team of driver Tom Bigelow and car designer-builder Rolla Vollstedt will carry the Bryant banner at the "500" races at Indianapolis, Pocono and Ontario — the United States Auto Club's Triple Crown circuit.

The announcement was made by William L. Hall, manager of Bryant's Chicago branch, which is co-sponsoring the car with the company's Detroit branch. 1973 marks the 15th year that a Bryant Heating and Cooling Special will be seen at the Indianapolis 500, the second year the Bryant Gas Air Conditioning Special will join the competition at the California 500, and the debut of a Bryant Special at the Pocono International Raceway.

One of Rolla's cars will be displayed at the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center mall on April 13-14-15. Bigelow will appear in person at the mall from 4 to 9 p.m. on April 13 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday to sign autographs and talk about racing.

Bigelow, one of only two drivers to win events in three USAC divisions in 1972, will pilot a Vollstedt turbo-charged Offenhauser machine which its builder, Vollstedt, has described as the "limousine of race cars." The "limousine" characteristic is a wheelbase which exceeds 102 inches and provides the car with increased stability at high speeds. Indianapolis cars usually have a wheelbase of 98 to 100 inches.

Hall commented, "Just as Bryant is first in the heating and air conditioning industry, we feel that with the vast experience of Tom Bigelow as driver and car owner-builder, Rolla Vollstedt, Bryant will continue to be first in the "500" Triple Crown. From first on the track at Indy, to first at the finish of California."

Bryant has made the "500" an integral part of its marketing program since 1958. Bryant dealers throughout the country are now racing for increased sales volume to earn the privilege of being at trackside May 28. The company expects to distribute more than 1,000 tickets for the 57th running of the Speedway classic.

Forest View golfers debut

Forest View head golf coach Art Klein will be searching for some stamina on this year's team when it kicks off the 1973 season (weather permitting) in a Mid-Suburban League challenge at Rolling Meadows today at 3:30.

Last year his Falcons flourished with an opening four-meet winning streak only to run into the likes of Prospect, Hersey, Conant, Palatine, Wheeling and Fremd to finish with a 6-5 league slate and an 8-6 record overall.

Forest View averaged less than 170 strokes per meet last year and were within 10 strokes of the winning team in each of their losses.

The Falcons will test Maine West in a non-conference encounter before opening its home schedule against Elk Grove, Wednesday, April 18. If they do peak at the right time, they'll have a chance to better their district-qualifying position that the View reached at Hersey in the state tournament.

FOREST VIEW GOLF SCHEDULE
Wed., April 11 — At Rolling Meadows,

At Rolling Meadows

Ms. E. Striber took top game and series honors in the women's Classic league at Rolling Meadows-Fair Lanes Bowl recently when her 595 series included a 257 effort.

Other series-high games scores were Rosemary Nugent 567-202, J. Andrich 550-191, Vera Hackett 547-210, Audrey Goldbogen 543-204, Mary Lou Kolb 534-197, Gladys Freeman 532-200, Mabel Heine 531-205, Esther Urso 530-197 and Bobbie Thomas 520-192.

Joe Hartmann's 593 series, including a 214 game, was high mark in the Palatine Majors League at Rolling Meadows Bowl. Jim Carrier came up with 576, Howard Freeman had 573 with the evening's high game of 224, Bob Greenlees rolled 574 and Herb Sherrner 568 for the other top scores.

Pro wrestling show tonight in Fremd gym

For the first time, Herald area fans will get a chance to see professional wrestling without traveling more than a few miles from home.

The occasion will be an exhibition at Fremd High School, 1000 Quentin Rd., Palatine, Wednesday night, April 11. There will be four events beginning at 8 p.m.

Seats cost $3 (ringside), $2 (general admission) and $1 (children under 12). Tickets can be purchased at the high school or at C & S Printing, 230 Hicks Place, Palatine or by calling 359-3485.

Purpose of the program is to raise funds to pay for lights at the football field, installed in 1970. All that is still owed is $2,000. With a good crowd, Fremd hopes to cancel the debt and move on to other athletic improvements.

In the past, the colorful spectacle of pro wrestling has been viewed only on television by most fans. At Fremd will be the usual attraction with such names as Crusher Derek (a 296-pounder from Chicago), Wild Man Alexi, Killer Duke, the world tag team champions, Paul Christy (World Wrestling Association champ), Angelo Poffo (a Downers Grove man who did a record 6,033 consecutive sit-ups), and two female wrestlers — Sheri Lee (U.S. champ) and Candy Kane.

The main event will be a tag team match between the duo of Graduate Poffo-Killer Duke and Paul Christy-Crusher Derek. A semi-final event will be between Proforio Longario and Wild Man Alexi. Sheri Lee and Candy Kane will square off in a women's match and there will also be one other match on the card.

Lathrop captures two trophies in net action

Defending doubles champion Dak Lathrop of Park Ridge came close to a double triumph in the second annual Chicago District men's 60-and-over tournament Sunday at River Trails Tennis Center but settled for winner and runner-up trophies.

The 63-year-old Lathrop paired with Nate Ganger of Ottawa, O., to win the doubles handily without the loss of a set. The duo whipped Bob Crook of Evanston and Al Winston of Wilmette, 6-4, 6-1, after drubbing a tired St. Louis pair, Ward Parker and Ray Wiese, in the semifinals.

In singles Lathrop avenged two previous losses by upending the second-seeded Wiese, 6-2, 6-2, in the semis. He was rated an even bet against top-seeded Clare Riessen, 64, Northwestern University coach and father of noted pro Marty Riessen, in the finals but bowed, 6-4, 6-1.

Former Arlington Heights resident Charles Close, now playing out of Tupelo, Miss., was one of the tourney's brighter stars. With his deep slices working exceptionally well, Close led Lathrop, 4-1 in his second quarterfinal set against Lathrop before succumbing, 6-3, 7-5. He and Art Ohnesorge of Western Springs extended Parker and Wiese to an 8-6, 7-9, 6-4 marathon victory in a doubles quarterfinal. Observers predicted a high national ranking for Close in his new age/ranking category, 65 and over.

Perhaps the most amazing player in the tourney was hard-hitting Wade Storer of Park Ridge who is over 70, yet played a strong quarterfinal against Ganger-Lathrop.

Cold water can kill

Cold water can kill you — if you fall into it.

The Mid-America chapter of the American Red Cross has warned early-season boat users and fishermen that warm weather during the spring is deceptive, because open waters are still dangerously cold for someone falling in.

"Many drownings — especially in Lake Michigan — in April and May can be blamed on sudden immersion in cold water," local Red Cross water safety chair man Dr. Jan Gund said recently.

The water has a numbing effect, preventing the victim from getting to shore quickly. Even expert swimmers can drown if near-icy water makes them immobile.

"Most rivers and lakes in the metropolitan area will not warm up until June, and Lake Michigan doesn't warm sufficiently until late summer," Dr. Gund continued.

According to the U.S. Coast Guard 1972 figures, the water temperature in the lake during April ranged from 34-45 degrees and from 46-54 in May. Immersion in water under 40 degrees can cause exhaustion and unconsciousness in less than 30 minutes.

Fatal cooling of the body is more likely to occur in water than air, since rapid immersion decreases the insulating effect of clothing. Loss of body heat in cold water occurs two to four times faster than in air.

A person who frequently engages in water-related activities should expect to find himself accidentally in the water on some occasion. "More than 60 per cent of the people who drown in this country each year had no intention of being in deep water," Dr. Gund added.

At Hoffman Lanes

The Blue Angels scored the highest team series of 2136 in the Hoffman Lanes HI Flyers. Jo Jaworski scored the highest individual series of 486. Helen Bamber 477, Jean Moses 462, Ardy Heuer 452, Jeanne Fulton 448, Marilyn Miles 442, Jan Hyder converted the 3-10-7 split and Ardy Heuer the 5-10.

Speedway opener postponed

The opening night late model sportsman stock car races at the Waukegan Speedway were postponed until next Saturday night after temperatures dropped some 20 degrees, to below 40, and a stiff wind kicked up from the northeast.

The practice session scheduled before Saturday's races was run as Speedway officials hoped the winds would die down; however at 6:00 p.m. the decision was made to postpone the races until next Saturday. The sportsman will run in a 25-lap feature then and the hobby class will also compete.

Gates will open at 6 o'clock next Saturday evening with time trials at 7:00 and the first race at 8:00. Sunday night racing featuring the late model super stock class will begin May 6.

There were several mishaps in the practice sessions Saturday, but none caused serious damage to the cars. Dennis Topcik hit the pit wall and Phil Mass took a wild spin after his throttle stuck wide open. Ted Richter also took several wild spins in the fourth turn.

Defending champion George Dukas ran well until encountering engine trouble in his Mercury and Bill McDonald tore out his transmission in a few laps.

Although official times were not kept, Joe Francisco of Island Lake appeared to run the quickest and Waukegan's Chuck Clark also turned some good laps.

At Rolling Meadows

In the Thursday Eye Openers the Indiscreets rolled a 2674 series and the Blue Jeans a high game of 748. Individual high scorers were Irma Reasler 530-222; Willa Funk 522-191; Darleen Eaves 520-193; Sharon Harrod 505-177; Esther Soukup 489-177; Red Oravetz 488-172; Dottie Bendis 487-177; Pam Snell 471-172; Claire Bakowski 470-184; Marilyn Klug 181, Norma Amato 177; and Meg Easterwood 173. Split conversions were made by Elsie Senesac 5-7-9; Shirley Thuerk 5-10; and Ro Klebosits 5-7.

Schaumburg blanks Crown netmen

Schaumburg head coach Jeff Buchik is calling the 1973 tennis season a building year, but Crown doesn't believe it.

The Vikings found the hosting Saxons too tough to handle in losing the season opener, 5-0, Friday.

Buchik's junior dominated team (there are only two starting seniors) was led by Mike O'Laughlin's pair of 6-3 wins over Lee Williams at first singles.

Senior letterman (the only one) Pete Viohl disposed of his second singles foe, Warren Miller, 6-0, 6-2. Mike Passaglia handled Ken Hassler at third singles 6-1, 6-0.

Senior Jon Kalkwarf and Jim Brennan took the first doubles team of Mike Zehm and Bob Cherry 6-3, 6-4. Juniors Tim Neno and Gary Lavine stopped Lyon Wellington and Jim Dawson 6-1, 6-3.

The Saxon frosh-soph team also blanked its opponent, 5-0.

Steve Bach is the only other senior out for the team. Also competing for starting spots are juniors Ed Amatis, Steve Mullen and Roger Hendrickson.

"If our season's a success, it will be more or less on improvement and not necessarily in terms of wins and losses," said Buchik. "Most of the guys will be back next year."

A MODIFIED BIKINI is the answer for a girl who wants the freedom of a bikini but more coverage. Gathers

Weekend wardrobe

One for the beach

The big news on the beaches this summer won't be the bikinis themselves but what women choose to wear over them.

A swimsuit, matching shirt, palazzo pants and long halter dress easily rolled up and tucked into an overnight case are all one woman will need for an entire weekend vacation. That is, if the weather holds out.

Suits to swim in, from the littlest bikini to one-piece classics, are being colorfully coordinated with long skirts, sleeveless coats, long and short shirts and an endless array of pants and dresses.

A STEP-IN SHIRT can be worn over a swimsuit as a cover-up, tucked into a skirt to make a complete outfit for streetwear, then teamed with a pair of palazzo pants for evening.

It's the lightest way yet to travel. A woman can conceivably get by for days on just a few ounces of clothing.

While there are no big visible fashion innovations this season in women's bathing suits, certain improvements have been made to make shopping for the summer necessity a pleasure instead of drudgery.

Swimwear manufacturers finally got the hint and have started treating two-piece bathing suits for what they really are . . . separates. Tops and bottoms are more often being sold individually. Other suits are available in cup sizes.

JERSEY AND NYLON bikinis, fashioned with halter necklines, are tied around the neck instead of buttoned. When teamed with a matching long skirt or pair of pants, the entire ensemble looks complete and coordinated . . . not as if a woman just didn't have time to change her suit.

And although it is most difficult for bikinis to be reduced much more in size without losing their coverup function, sexier looks are always being achieved.

The crocheted look is the one to watch this summer. And those adept with the crochet hook will find it takes little more than scraps of yarn to make a suit.

But don't despair if you need more coverup than a bikini can provide. The one-piece swimsuit is decidedly up in popularity, particularly the braless tank suit that offers both a natural and sleek line.

(More information about these swimwear fashions is available through Readers' Service, 394-2300, Ext. 252.)

MULTI-STRIPES MAKE COLORFUL attire. The short shirt coverup is sleeved in border-print poppies and has stripes of pink, navy, green and red to match the one-piece bathing suit. Shirt coverups can be teamed with pants or a long skirt for wear off the beach.

'The male mystique'

Teacher wants to liberate men

by SARA FRITZ

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Warren Farrell, a shy, serious political science teacher, believes in the women's liberation movement.

But he says that women cannot truly be liberated until men are freed of what he calls the "male mystique" — violence, aggressiveness and the "star syndrome."

Farrell is organizing a "men's liberation movement" so the sexes can be liberated together.

"This is the logical time for it to happen," said Farrell, 29, who already has organized a few male "consciousness-raising" groups around the country.

"The women's movement is beginning to hit Middle America and a lot of women do not want to make a choice between their own selfhood and men. There is a need for a parallel movement among men. What I'd really like to see is a whole sex role movement."

Farrell, who is married and teaches at Rutgers University, began his own "liberation" in 1969 when he joined the feminist National Organization for Women (NOW). He said he joined because he was disappointed that his college girl friends were not liberated from the old fashioned roles.

BUT FARRELL soon decided that women could not be liberated until men were.

"My interest from the beginning has been to get men to rethink their problems of masculinity," he said in an interview recently in Washington. "We should not be trying to make women into men, but instead to get men to adopt some of the healthier female characteristics."

Farrell said he decided to organize a men's liberation movement while he was writing a book titled "Beyond Masculinity," which will be published this fall. He described it as a "handbook" for the movement.

The book advocates such things as quotas for male secretaries, male birth control research, an end to war-like toys for boys and children's books with pictures of men crying.

"My first instinct was to attack the most apparent manifestations — war, the Pentagon, West Point, Hugh Hefner, football and the like," Farrell said.

"HOWEVER, my experience in working closely with men in each of these areas leads me to believe that a feeling of self-righteousness would be the only outcome of attacking the disease at this level.

"The problems with masculinity start in many of the same areas where the discrimination against women occurs."

Quotas for men in "women's jobs" — secretary, nurse, elementary school teacher and telephone operator — will help liberate both men and women, Farrell believes.

"Men must hold these positions before women get out of them," he said. "Men considering some of these jobs inferior is part of the problem of women considering some jobs superior." He predicted that pay also will increase as men begin to take these jobs.

"Our approach to children's books must be two-pronged," Farrell said, "fighting for pictures of men in the home, men cooking, men crying, men being dependent rather than just women 'making it' in industry."

"OUR ACTIONS against children's toys might also consider the masculine mystique of toys such as Mighty Mike, Astro trains and of guns and tanks as well as Suzy Homemaker sets."

Farrell estimates there already are 30 or 40 male consciousness raising groups in the country, most of them on college campuses. "From that," he said, "we will evolve a whole series of new role model males."

Speaking of . . .

Changing sex roles

by KAY MARSH

Kids have always talked about what they'd be when they grow up. Now, according to at least one feminist leader, women are asking themselves, "What do I want to be when my children grow up?"

The speaker is Betty Friedan, author of "The Feminine Mystique" and organizer of the National Organization for Women (NOW). Talking recently on a Midwestern college campus, Mrs. Friedan recalled that it was just 10 years ago that she was putting the finishing touches on her book. And it was her book, published in 1963, that constituted the first clear note of change in the prevailing views about women and ushered in the modern women's movement.

All of us who have lived through the last 10 years are well aware of at least some of the changes brought about by that movement, but it's hard to realize just how far the pendulum has swung.

Mrs. Friedan struck a responsive chord with the older women in her predominantly college-aged audience when she reminisced about the women of that not-so-long-ago. Then, she said, a woman was made to think she was crazy and needed psychiatric counseling if she didn't get total satisfaction from making peanut butter sandwiches and scrubbing the kitchen floor. The speaker noted, too, that just a decade ago, a woman was made to feel guilty of neglecting the children if she had a job outside the home.

BETTY FRIEDAN pointed out the impossibility of a woman's defining her identity in terms of motherhood, since women's life expectancy is more than 70 years. NOW, formed in 1966, stressed that "motherhood was no longer the primary fact of womanhood."

Mrs. Friedan emphasized, however, that the movement does not mean the end of the home. In fact, she says it is absolutely false that equality for women will destroy the American family. As she puts it, "We need the strength, warmth, and support of the family, especially in our changing mass society."

She does believe that "the family must evolve and restructure itself." In her view, the enemy is not "man, household chores or children." It is, rather, society and society-oriented roles.

Betty Friedan says that both women AND men must break through obsolete sex roles. Just as women are moving away from traditional stereotypes of femininity, so are men "breaking loose from the definition of masculinity . . . they are becoming strong enough to be gentle."

SHE BELIEVES, TOO, that pursuing changes in sex roles will benefit the family. As she puts it, "Men won't have to repress tears or tender feelings. They will be able to be sensitive and compassionate . . . And they won't die 10 years earlier than women because of suppressed feelings."

Mrs. Friedan, in short, preaches a gospel of change for both men and women. As she puts it, the real fight is for human rights. We are engaged, she says, not in what is usually meant by a revolution, but in a true evolution of society. "Both men and women," in short, "must be free to be themselves."

Meanwhile, women continue to fight for legal equality.

As previously noted here, the proposed 27th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution provides: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the U.S. or by any state on account of sex." At last count, 30 of the necessary 38 states had approved the bill. But it has been rejected for this year in several states. Although it was turned down by the Illinois House last week, its supporters plan a legal challenge to the action.

Despite impressive support, the measure is by no means certain of passage.

Easter pets? Forget it!

CHICAGO (UPI) —If the Easter Bunny at your house is toying with the notice of giving baby rabbits, chicks and ducks to your kiddies this Easter, tell him to forget it.

The American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA) reminds parents that the "living presents" are not likely to survive in the home atmosphere. A young child's enthusiasm over the new pet often results in unknowing cruelty as legs are broken and wings crushed.

If the animal dies or is injured, it's not just bad for the poor thing. It is also a traumatic experience for child. Now if the animal survives, the outlook isn't much brighter. Usually it will end up in an animal shelter.

The AVMA says because such a large number of rabbits, chicks and ducks are left at animal shelters during the post-Easter season, all can't be placed. Many have to be destroyed. But that's not all.

Even if the animal should reach maturity, many local ordinances would prohibit a family from keeping it.

These other points were made by the AVMA:

—Ducks, rabbits and chicks are outdoor animals. They cannot be housebroken and may cause serious housekeeping and health problems.

—Many of these Easter gifts are disease carriers. The National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta and other public health authorities warn that children and adults in close contact with these animals may be exposed to salmonellosis, a severe gastro-intestinal infection. Salmonellosis is rarely fatal but often requires medical treatment, including hospitalization. In addition to the family, other pets in the household may become ill.

To keep the kiddies happy at Easter give stuffed toy animals or chocolate ones.

THE EASTER BUNNY and the happy clown will welcome guests Saturday at the Easter Bunny Luncheon sponsored by Palatine Jaycee Wives. Linda Benedict and Pat McCarthy of the Jaycee Wives give Dee dee Bendict and Kevin Kemble a preview of the Saturday fun. The luncheon will be held in the Sanborn School, Palatine, with Mrs. Don Bailey as chairman.

speaking of Beauty

by Armand Gentile

Q. My natural hair is a medium dark brown. For one year, I've been bleaching it blond with fairly good results. But lately, the front is coming out much lighter than the back. What am I doing wrong?

A. Hard to tell without seeing you. If you're doing it yourself, chances are you're not saturating the back hair as much as you are the front. Have a friend do it for you; or better yet, go see a professional colorist.

Q. I'm 34 years old and already I have deep bags under my eyes. I use a good (I think) eye cream nightly.

A. Are you in good health and getting enough sleep? All the cream in the world can't correct skin problems if the rest of you won't cooperate. You may eventually require some corrective surgery, but see your regular doctor for a check-up first.

Q. I have a rather peculiar problem. The hair in the front of my head just won't grow more than 2 1/2 to 3 inches long. The rest of my hair grows considerably longer and since I'd like to wear my hair medium long, I don't know what to do.

A. Is your hair excessively oily? If so, it's quite possible that oil is forming a hard scale and preventing the hair roots from breathing properly. You'll need scalp massages to break up the scales and probably special shampoos to correct the oiliness.

Forest invites area nurses to "Total Care" program

"Total Patient Care and You" is the subject of a special nursing program to be held Monday, April 16, in the professional building at Forest Hospital, 555 Wilson Lane, Des Plaines.

The program will open with registration at 9:30 a.m. and continue until 4:30 p.m. Bea Sapir, R.N., will lead a discussion dealing with "Integrating Mental Health Concepts in Caring for Patients in the General Hospital." Leonard Kessler, M.D., will speak on "Recognition of the High Risk Patient" and Robert Simon,

M.D., director of Forest Hospital's methadone center, will discuss "Drug Abuse — Meaning and Consequences."

Other Forest Hospital staff members responsible for the program are Ruth Gast, R.N.; Cathy Enos, R.N.; and J. Joan Kaiser, R.N. Staff members and participants will break into workshops for the balance of the day.

The program is open to all area nurses. Advance registration is requested, if possible, by calling Forest Hospital, 827-8811, ext. 361.

Women's Day on campus

Children and the courts, zoning and environmental action, a computerized teaching system and what the campus looks like today will be featured at the second annual Women's Day on Campus April 27, at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Open to all women in the state, the one-day concentrated program will offer sessions on the theme, "Never Underestimate the Power of..." It will be held in the Illini Union and be sponsored by the U. of I. Alumni Association. Women do not need to be U. of I. alumnae or members of any alumni group to attend.

The program begins with a coffee hour and welcome from Mrs. John E. Corbally Jr., wife of the university president. Following a newly released color slide presentation, "The Campus Today," architecture and planning experts will present what's new in housing, zoning and environmental change. A panel of three specialists will head an in-depth discussion of the rights of the young, ranging from child abuse and paternity support to juvenile offenders.

PLATO, the teaching system invented at the U. of I., will be demonstrated, and mini-exhibits will be on display from the Krannert Art, World Heritage and Natural History museums and the University Press.

Reservations for the meeting may be made with the Alumni Association, 227 Illini Union, Urbana 61801. Total charge for the conference, including luncheon and entertainment by the "Medicare Eight," a popular faculty-staff Dixieland jazz group, is $6.

Abortion films now available

To help educate citizens of Illinois on the facts about abortion a new film, "Abortion: A Woman's Decision" is available for purchase or rent, according to the Illinois Right to Life Committee.

The film is recommended for high schools, colleges, doctors, nurses, social workers, PTA groups and churches. It is available by calling 271-1030.

A public showing of the film, along with Planned Parenthood's film, "Each Child Loved," will take place May 6 at 2:30 p.m. in the Airie Crown Theater. Tickets, at $2, are available by calling 255-4716.

Scholarships await Maine West students

College-bound seniors from Maine West High School are urged to apply for the scholarships awarded by the Maine West Mothers' Club. Recipients are chosen on the basis of scholarship and need.

A student must complete an application form and return it to the school before May 1. These forms are available at Mr. Killam's office at Maine West.

Pamphlet discusses homosexuality

by PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — Are homosexuals sick, well or what? Among the what's is this question: Are they a beleaguered minority whose difficulties stem largely from society's punitive attitude toward them?

The questions are among many asked and answered in a new Public Affairs Pamphlet by Elizabeth Ogg. The writer has done other Public Affairs pamphlets — When a Family Faces Stress, Tell Me Where To Turn, among others.

You may wonder — is this pamphlet about a usually hush-hush subject necessary? According to the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit educational organization, it is or it wouldn't have been done. Actually, the committee has been responsible for nearly 500 pamphlets since 1935 — all helping to meet the goals of the organization. The purpose goes like this: "to develop new techniques to educate the American public on vital economic and social problems and to issue concise and interesting pamphlets dealing with such problems."

THE PAMPHLET on the controversial subject of homosexuality is in good company when it joins the list of Public Affairs Committee booklets. In the family life category, some recent titles include: Your First Months with Your First Baby, Talking to Pre-teenagers about Sex, New Styles in Young Marriages, Building a Marriage on Two Altars, How to Cope with Crisis, Funeral Costs and Death Benefits, What Can You Do About Quarreling.

In the social problems category there are pamphlets with such titles as Women's Rights — Unfinished Business, The Fight Against Water Pollution, Money for Our Cities, A Career in Social Work, Hunger in America, The Responsible Consumer.

In the bracket of health and science, Public Affairs Committee pamphlets have included Women and Smoking, Peptic Ulcer — The Quiet Epidemic, Your Menopause, The Challenge of Transplantation, We Can Conquer Uterine Cancer, Overweight — A Problem for Millions.

THE PAMPHLET "Homosexuality in Our Society" — as all others — is available for 35 cents from the Public Affairs Committee, 381 Park Ave., South, New York, N.Y., 10016.

In it, Miss Ogg considers the possible causes of homosexuality, homosexuality and the law, myths and stereotypes about homosexuals, life in the homosexual subculture. She also offers some thoughts for parents about their children and sexuality.

She reports that homosexual behavior has existed since ancient times and has been accepted by many cultures.

In her report, Miss Ogg says "... the facts do seem to bear out the theory that certain kinds of family situations tend to nip some children's heterosexual interests in the bud, and lay the groundwork for a homosexual pattern."

"But many similarly disturbed families produce no homosexuals at all. And the families that produce female homosexuals apparently are as varied as those that produce heterosexuals. Some researchers believe that the second class status of women in our society creates a stumbling block in a girl's path to womanhood."

THE NEUROSIS theory of homosexuality, according to Miss Ogg, "must remain moot because it rests on appraisals of small samples of homosexuals who have entered therapy, and who do not necessarily represent homosexuals at large."

In considering myths and stereotypes, Miss Ogg finds that the "widespread belief that male homosexuals are effeminate in body build, mannerisms, and speech, while lesbians are mannish ... is far from the truth. Homosexuals are just as varied in appearance as heterosexuals, ranging from he-man types to the ultrafeminine."

Miss Ogg notes that parents, particularly, are concerned about the stigma that is likely to follow their child if he or she becomes a homosexual in today's society. She says too little is known about how homosexuality and heterosexuality develop. Nevertheless she suggests to parents:

—"Support enlightened sex education for all children and adolescents. See that it includes sound information and rational discussion about homosexuality."

—"ALLOW YOUR children to express their feelings without fear of reproach. Don't downgrade either sex as such. Try to be open and unembarrassed in discussing sex with your child."

—"Accept your sons and daughters as they are. Don't insist that your son be a 'muscle man.' Don't make your daughter feel ashamed if she's blessed with mechanical aptitude. When sex roles are flexible and to some extent interchangeable, men and women who don't fit easily into the stereotypes of these roles can still feel comfortable in themselves."

—"Look to your own marriage. Do you show love, care, and respect for one another?"

"Homosexuality in Our Society" is No. 484 in the Public Affairs Pamphlet series, now in its 37th year.

Effect of environment on learning researched

by DAVID A. LAWSKY

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Some children who don't listen in school may have spent their infancy falling asleep to soap operas, the six o'clock news and Johnny Carson.

But it wasn't sad stories, bad news or tired jokes that turned them off. What happened, theorizes Dr. Kathryn Barnard, was that as infants they learned to block out a bombardment of sound so they could fall asleep. As children, they never quite tuned back in.

The process is only one of dozens Dr. Barnard is exploring for the National Institute of Health's Division of Nursing, to find out how environmental differences affect learning.

So far preliminary work shows environmental differences are so important in learning that children from some environments do worse in school than even brain-damaged children.

NONETHELESS, although scales exist for measuring what babies can do, there is no standardized measure for infant environment.

So Dr. Barnard set out to develop one. She knew that the children of poorly educated parents usually did poorly in school, while children of highly educated parents usually did well there. And highly educated parents were generally also the ones with the money.

Such broad indicators told her little about how parents raised their babies. To find out more about the specifics of baby learning, she decided to videotape mothers with their babies.

Borrowing her approach from research done over the last 10 years, Dr. Barnard asked mothers to teach their babies tasks just beyond the children's achievement levels. Each lesson was recorded behind a one-way mirror.

The mothers knew they were being taped, but the mirror prevented intrusions by technicians and equipment on mothers and children.

THE RESEARCHERS studied the tapes with great care, sometimes spending up to eight hours viewing and reviewing a single segment.

But all work since the study started in July, 1971, has been preliminary to the major understanding that begins this spring. Dr. Barnard and her associates will follow 200 children from birth until at least the age of six.

Dr. Barnard will attempt to predict how each of the 200 infants will do as school children.

Dr. Barnard believes from her work so far that "we can find out more from listening to parents than by examining a child. Parents know if their children have a problem."

Listening to parents is exactly what Dr. Barnard's team plans to do, but as a control the babies will also be given development tests and be examined by a pediatrician. Dr. Barnard believes she'll be able to catch problems like mental retardation long before the pediatrician finds them.

FOR EXAMPLE, it would not be a doctor but a parent who notices that a baby prefers to learn by tasting and touching instead of by seeing and hearing. If questions catch that tendency, parents can be warned that trouble may lie ahead, because school learning of course depends on what a child sees and hears.

It's important to catch such tendencies young because, according to French child specialist Jean Piaget, a child learns the process of taking in information by the age of two.

If the study confirms Dr. Barnard's work so far, she'll compile her questions into a scale for parents. The parenting scale will reveal any problems the baby might have and pinpoint environmental problems.

Someone has to interpret the scale to parents once it's given, and Dr. Barnard believes that someone should be a nurse.

"NURSES ARE concerned with the nitty gritty problems," said Dr. Barnard, herself a professor of nursing at the University of Washington. "What other professional is concerned with teaching a mother how to bathe her baby?"

Should nurses be chosen to explain the parenting scale, they can expect an expanding role. Dr. Barnard believes the scale will become more and more important as the emphasis on health care continues to shift from treating illness to health maintenance and preventive care.

For A Happy Life

It's Fun in April To:

1. Make an effort to know the candidates in local elections this spring.
2. Paint drab wastebaskets a bright buttercup yellow.
3. Consider if this is the year to call a tree expert and have your trees trimmed.
4. Get in the habit of making regular trips to the public library when you and the children are out on errands.
5. Decide what causes you the most aggravation. Think of ways to help overcome it.
6. Put money aside to buy an original painting that thrills you!
7. Establish a brief but effective beauty routine — one that you will follow.
8. Note this by Joseph Joubert: "Words, like glasses, obscure everything they do not make clear."

Maureen
Gordon

Maureen Anne Gordon's engagement to Thomas R. Vaughn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vaughn, 5 W. Sunset Road, Mount Prospect, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon, 224 N. Clark Drive, Palatine.

No wedding date has been set.

Both Maureen and Tom are seniors at Illinois State University. Tom majors in biology and Maureen in speech pathology. Tom is a '69 graduate of Forest View High School and Maureen is a '70 graduate of Sacred Heart.

Sharon Weickart

Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Weickart of Chicago announce the engagement of their daughter Sharon Lee to Robert John Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, 218 Hi Lusi, Mount Prospect.

The couple plan an October wedding. Sharon, a graduate of Taft High School, will soon complete requirements for her Associate in Arts degree from Wright Junior College. She is employed at the Edward Fox Studio, Chicago. Robert, a graduate of St. Viator High School, is head receiving clerk at York Container, Elmhurst.

Jane
Dempsey

An Aug. 26 wedding is planned by an area couple, Jane Dempsey of Rolling Meadows and William D. Tweed of Mount Prospect. Their engagement and marriage plans are announced by Jane's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ervan M. Dempsey, 3504 Brookmeade Drive.

The bride-to-be will graduate this spring from Sacred Heart of Mary High School and also works for Sears at Woodfield. Her fiancé, son of the George B. Tweeds of 101 W. Orchard Place, is a '71 graduate of Forest View High. He attends Harper College and works for Imperial Eastman Corp., Niles.

Vickie
Love

The engagement of Vickie Ann Love to Thomas P. Cromwell Jr. is announced by her parents Mr. and Mrs. James D. Love of McKinney, Texas. Tom is the son of former Palatine residents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Cromwell who now make their home in Peoria.

Tom and Vickie are planning a July 21 wedding.

The bride-to-be is a freshman at Grayson County College in Denison, Texas, and Tom, who studied at Palatine High School and was graduated from a Peoria high school, is with J. R. Purtscher Co., Peoria.

Lennie
Crom

There will be an Aug. 18 wedding for Lennie Beth Crom and Richard Russell Knight, who are both students at the University of Arkansas.

Their engagement and marriage date are announced by Lennie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Crom, 904 Barbary, Mount Prospect. The nuptials will take place in the First Baptist Church in Fayetteville, Ark.

Richard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wood D. Knight of Fort Smith, Ark.

Candice
Lohren

The Elmer Lohrens of 1011 W. Palatine Road, Arlington Heights, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Candice Sue to Ronald A. Ort, son of Mrs. Aleta Ort of South Bend, Ind., and the late Mr. Ort.

The couple plan to be married on May 19. Candy graduated from Arlington High School, then from Missouri Valley College this year and is living in Evansville, Ind. Her fiancé is a '72 graduate of Missouri Valley now working for the Associates Co. in Houston, Texas.

Boy next door romance leads couple to altar

It was a romance with the boy next door that led to the marriage March 17 of Elizabeth Ann Irwin to Scott M. Bremner. Elizabeth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Irwin, now live at 2515 E. Olive in Arlington Heights, but before the move were next door neighbors of Scott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bremner, 107 N. Elm St., Prospect Heights.

The couple's St. Patrick's Day wedding was held at 2:30 p.m. in St. Alphonsus Church, Prospect Heights, with a buffet dinner reception following in the Swedish Glee Club of Waukegan.

For the double ring service Elizabeth wore an ivory crepe gown of Victorian styling made by her mother. Alencon lace trimmed the high neckline, the sleeves and panels on the skirt. She wore her sister's veil, which was also trimmed in Alencon lace and seed pearls, and she carried a cascade of yellow roses and lilies of the valley.

KIM HEROLD, Wilmette, was Elizabeth's only attendant, wearing a floral print cape gown and carrying a bouquet of mixed spring flowers.

Ed Haase, Prospect Heights was Scott's best man, and Dave Zelinski, Prospect Heights, was usher.

The Irwins are also former residents of the New Trier High School area, and although she lived in Prospect Heights and Arlington Heights Elizabeth finished her high school years at New Trier. Scott is a graduate of Hersey High School and is now attending Harper College for an associate degree in firefighting. He is employed by Palatine Park District and Elizabeth is employed by Culligan, International, Northbrook.

For their honeymoon, Elizabeth and Scott went to Antigo, Wis., and they are now residing in Mundelein.

Here's how to announce an engagement in Herald

Paddock Suburban Living department is often called by those seeking information on submitting announcements for publication. We print the following for the reader's information and help.

The announcement of an engagement is always made by the parents of the engaged girl, who may either fill out an engagement form at our office or submit their own information along with a wallet sized picture of the bride-to-be.

If a wallet sized photograph is not available, a larger one can be used.

Bring or mail picture and copy to the Herald office in Arlington Heights or mail to Paddock Publications, Box 200, Arlington Heights, Ill., 60006.

Parents not using one of our forms may either write or type the information. If the announcement is submitted in hand-writing we ask that all names be printed to avoid errors. We also request that a phone number accompany the signature at the bottom of the announcement.

A glossy picture is preferable although a dull finish is acceptable. Color photos are used at the discretion of the editors depending on contrast and depth of color.

There is no charge for engagement pictures and announcements. Usually they will be printed within a week after reaching our office.

All announcements must be in our office at least a month before the wedding date.

BREATHLESS WITH plans for their April 28 dinner dance are Holy Family Hospital Auxiliaries. Proceeds will purchase equipment such as this respiratory life support ventilator. Carol Hoinack, staff therapist, explains its use to Mrs. M. Ishkanian, Arlington Heights, and Mrs. D. Byrne, Mount Prospect, chairman of the gala affair.

Pledge 'breathless' gift

Holy Family Hospital Auxiliary is buzzing with plans for its spring dinner dance at Itasca Country Club, to be held Saturday, April 28.

Friends of the hospital are invited to join members and their husbands for an evening of cocktails, dining and dancing to the music of Win Buettgen and his orchestra.

The affair is a benefit to swell the funds of the Auxiliary's "Breathless Gift" program, a pledge to purchase inhalation therapy equipment for the hospital.

Mrs. Donald Byrne of Mount Prospect, chairman of the event, promises a "good time, party-type evening" beginning with cocktails at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7.

Donation is $8.50 per person. Reservations may be made with Mr. J. T. Morrow of Mount Prospect, 827-3632.

CCW district meet April 24

District 3 of Vicariate 1 Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women will hold its spring district meeting April 24 at 7 p.m. at St. Joseph the Worker Parish Hall, 181 W. Dundee Road, Wheeling.

The spring meeting honors all out-going parish presidents when they report on projects accomplished by their members during the past year. This year there will be an election of district officers as well as a leadership workshop.

All women of District 3 are invited. Parish members of District 3 include residents of Buffalo Grove, Deerfield, Elk Grove, Mount Prospect, Highland Park, Highwood, Prospect Heights, Wheeling and the northwest section of Des Plaines. Mrs. John Trunda, 537-1335, may be called for more information.

Man is hunting answers to history's most puzzling scientific questions..

VIKING'S SCOOP TAKES its third sample of Martian soil in this painting. The antenna beams its findings toward a waiting Earth. The NASA spacecraft will land on the red planet in 1976 to begin man's first serious attempt to look for life beyond Earth. This represents our best information — from Mariner 9 and other spacecraft — of what Mars looks like.

Life on Mars?

Man is preparing his first serious attempt to look for life on Mars.

He may also find answers to some of history's most puzzling scientific and philosophical questions.

Scientists believe the best chance for finding life in the solar system — besides Earth — lies with Mars.

In early 1976 two man-made objects will land on the red planet. They will scratch, dig and probe the surface, then swallow and examine Martian soil samples for hints of biological activity.

These are the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Viking landers. They are being developed and built for NASA by Martin Marietta Corp. in Denver.

THE SEARCH FOR life on Mars some call it the wish for life on Mars — got a big boost in 1977 when Italian astronomer Giovanni Schiaparelli reported seeing "canali" on the planet.

Canali translates to channels — not canals. Schiaparelli believed Mars had oceans, and that the channels ran inland from the shores.

Mars appears to undergo seasonal changes: each winter the polar ice cap grows and temperate latitudes appear to dry up. Summer dust storms can be seen through telescopes. In spring the polar cap melts and a greenish-blue tinge seems to spread toward the equator.

The greatest advocate of canals was Percival Lowell, a writer with an abiding interest in planetary astronomy. He was enchanted with the possibility of life on Mars.

LOWELL'S IMAGINATION outran scientific objectivity. He and his colleagues drew hundreds of maps of Mars. They identified and charted more than 300 canals — connected by what Lowell called oases. They even identified the Martian capital — and named it Elysium.

Lowell told the world that Martians were irrigating their farmland on the dying planet.

A few scientists — and a large segment of the public — agreed with Lowell. Others held out for a dry, lifeless rock that loops around the Sun every 687 days.

Neither, it turns out, was correct. NASA's Mariner 9 photographed Mars for almost a year. It found no cities, highways, canals or farms. Instead, it saw a geologically active planet, with volcanoes, Marsquakes and even signs of rivers and streams.

LOWELL'S DESIRE to find life on Mars was different from the motives of today's scientists. "Sympathy," Dr. Norman Horowitz of California Institute of Technology says, "is not the reason to search for life beyond Earth."

Dr. Horowitz, a member of the Viking biology team, says man searches for life beyond Earth to find out if we are a unique, accidental phenomenon or one of many life systems in the universe.

Today some scientists believe a primitive form of life might exist on Mars — lichens, viruses or bacteria, perhaps. The argument rages unabated, but we can separate scientific opinion from crackpot ideas.

VIKING'S TESTS will run a minimum of 90 days. Even if they find no signs of life, scientists say it may only mean there is no biological activity in the landing area.

Plan probes of 5 planets

Jupiter is the first target

by AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science writer

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn have one thing in common — they all will be visited by American space probes to be launched within five years in a stepped up effort to explore the solar system.

Only the three outermost planets will escape the scrutiny of cameras and other reconnaissance instruments aboard robot spacecraft now on the drawing boards or in extra clean assembly buildings. Uranus, Neptune and Pluto will have to wait until NASA has more money.

JUPITER, THE almost star-like colossus 480 million miles from the sun, is the first target of the new series of planetary explorers. One little spacecraft is more than halfway there, and a twin, Pioneer 11, launched last week is now on its 620-million mile journey to Jupiter.

Jupiter stands at the gateway to the outer planets, and will serve as junction point on route to Saturn.

The job of the two pioneers is to pave the way to the fifth planet out from the sun and give man his first closeup look at its brilliantly striped atmosphere and its deadly radiation belts.

Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter Dec. 3. Pioneer 11 should reach the planet Dec. 5, 1974. Both will take 10 pictures of Jupiter and examine its atmosphere and environment with a dozen other experiments.

JUPITER STANDS at the gateway to the outer planets and will serve as a junction point for future spacecraft en route to Saturn and the planets beyond. Pioneer 10 improved the outlook for such flights when it passed safely through the debris-filled asteroid belt last month between Mars and Jupiter. None had gone that far before.

"I think we're firmly convinced now that the asteroid belt presents little hazard to future spacecraft going out to explore the outer planets," said Dr. William H. Kinard, meteoroid specialist from the Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va.

The key to the rapidly expanding interest in the planets is the question that has intrigued thinking men for centuries — is Earth the only place to harbor life?

Many scientists think there must be some kind of life somewhere else and they say Mars is the best place to start looking. This idea was buoyed recently when photographs taken by the Mariner 9 showed that Mars is a dynamic, evolving planet with what seems to be unmistakable evidence it once had great volumes of water flowing across its surface.

THERE ALSO HAS been speculation that life might exist in Jupiter's thick and colorful atmosphere. And Cornell University astronomers reported recently they have found that Titan, the largest of the 10 moons of Saturn, has an atmosphere that might support life.

"Our research has shown that at the very least," Dr. Carl Sagan said, "Titan should be littered with the kind of organic molecule which, in the early history of the Earth, led to the origin of life."

The investigations now planned will concentrate on a direct search for biological substances on Mars. Two large unmanned Viking spacecraft will be launched toward the Red Planet in 1975 and land in the warmest, dampest places available there in July and August of 1976.

Each Viking will scratch, dig and probe the Martian surface, then swallow and analyze soil samples for signs of biological activity. The landers also will carry television cameras, Marsquake detectors and weather observatories.

BUT BEFORE THE 7,500-pound Vikings reach Mars, the United States will have completed the two Jupiter missions and will have sent a television scout past Venus and Mercury, the two inner planets between Earth and sun. Then, in 1977, two Mariners will be sent on a picture-taking voyage to Jupiter and Saturn.

Russia, too, is active in planetary exploration and the Soviets accomplished the first unmanned landings on both Mars and Venus. The Martian lander, however, failed seconds after touchdown in a raging dust storm in late 1971.

RUSSIAN SCIENTISTS are expected to take advantage of the next Mars launch opportunity next year and send two more spacecraft on Martian landing missions. The United States and Russia agreed in Many scientists think there must be some kind of life elsewhere, and Mars is a good place to start looking.

February in Moscow to exchange information on potential Mars landing sites.

The Mariner that will explore Venus and Mercury is set for launch Oct. 10. It will be the first spacecraft to visit two planets.

The plan is to aim Mariner 10 so it passes about 3,300 miles from Venus and then, with an assist from the Venusian gravity, swings out to travel to little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun. The probe is expected to pass within 625 miles of unexplored Mercury and take pictures that should be able to show surface objects as small as a football field.

MERCURY IS SO close to the sun that it is hard to see with Earth telescopes and only general shading characteristics are known. The satellite's pictures are expected to tell man as much about Mercury as the first telescopic observations told man about the moon.

Venus also has never been photographed from up close although it has been explored by seven American and Russian spacecraft over the past 10 years. The Mariner will take several thousand pictures of Venus' dense blanket of clouds and scientists hope the probe will find some openings in the atmospheric veil so it can see through to the Venusian surface.

Mariner 10 should reach Venus in February, 1974, and pass by Mercury in late March. It will circle the sun after passing Mercury and will return to the little planet in September, 1975.

AFTER THE Viking Mars expeditions of 1975 and 1976, the space agency plans to devote more attention to Jupiter and Saturn.

Saturn's rings "must be considered an extreme hazard to spacecraft sent into or near the rings."

Two 1,600-pound Mariners will be launched in August and September, 1977, to scout Jupiter first and then fly on to Saturn using the cosmic billiard ball technique that will be tried out by the Mariner Venus-Mercury flight. It will take the probe more than 1 1/2 years to reach Jupiter and about two more years to fly to Saturn, the huge ringed planet that is sixth out from the sun.

One of the two Mariners' objectives will be to look at the mysterious rings around Saturn. They are generally believed to consist of gas, ice and dust, although two astronomers at the jet propulsion laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., reported earlier that radar examination of the planet showed its rings are made of solid chunks of something.

DR. RICHARD M. GOLDSTEIN said Saturn's rings, girdling the planet from 57,000 to 87,000 miles out, "must be considered an extreme hazard to any spacecraft sent into or near the rings."

Saturn itself is about 72,000 miles in diameter, yet it is believed to be a gaseous body lacking a solid surface and with a density less than water.

NASA's definite planetary exploration plans and with the Mariner Jupiter-Saturn mission, but the agency hopes to begin work next year on another program to explore Venus in 1978 with small Pioneer spacecraft.

Two Pioneers would be launched with one designed to orbit Venus while the second shoots small instrumented probes into its thick atmosphere.

ARTIST'S CONCEPT shows how hurls four atmospheric probes into space planners envision a Pioneer Venus' dense cloud cover before the Venus mission. The Pioneer "bus" bus itself enters. leaves Earth, traverses space, then

U.S. plans return to torrid planet

For a heavenly body, Venus is hotter than Hell.

Temperatures on the planet are high enough to melt lead; atmospheric pressure would crush the steel hull of a submarine; and the air is a mixture of poison gases.

Thirty years ago astronomers called Venus the twin of Earth. It is about the same size mass and density as Earth. But spacecraft sent there — two by the United States and six by the Soviet Union — show it is nothing like our planet.

A mask of white clouds keeps Venus in perpetual twilight. The Venutian day lasts longer than a Venutian year, because the planet circles the Sun faster than it rotates.

THE ANCIENTS thought Venus circled Earth just beyond the moon. Not until 1610 did anyone know for sure that Venus — and all the planets — circled the Sun.

Venus comes nearer Earth than any other planet — within 25 million miles. It is the second planet from the Sun, orbiting between Mercury and Earth.

Until the 1960's man's only knowledge of Venus came from telescope observations: We could determine how long it took to orbit the Sun: We could see no satellites: We calculated its mass and density. But we couldn't even see its surface.

Then NASA sent Mariner 2 and Mariner 5 winging past Venus. Russia sent its Venera screaming into the Venutian atmosphere. The first Soviet probe, Russian scientists said, landed safely.

"NOT SO," AMERICAN observers contradicted, and they were right: the spacecraft was crushed while still 106,000 feet from the surface.

The Russians kept trying. Soviet craft got heavier and stronger. But each bored into the dense, boiling atmosphere and died from pressure and temperature.

Finally Venera 8 approached Venus. Soviet technicians commanded a tank of supercold liquid to spill over the spacecraft, freezing it to several hundred degrees below zero.

Venera 8 reached the surface and survived to send scientific data to Earth for 54 minutes. Then it, too, died of heat stroke.

Now America is planning to visit the planet again.

"IF THE RUSSIANS would concentrate on the surface and if we (the United States) were to study the atmosphere, we might work out a nice piece of international cooperation," one scientist says.

NASA has asked TRW Inc. of Los Angeles to study two missions to explore Venus and its atmosphere. The first, planned for 1977, would be an instrumented bus carrying one large and three small atmospheric probes like a mother kangaroo carries its babies. Upon arrival the bus would hurl off its four probes to study the Venutian atmosphere at widely separated locations.

The probes would reach the planet's surface. The instrumented bus would blaze into the upper atmosphere, taking readings there before it burned up.

The second mission, in 1978, would orbit Venus for one year, taking readings of clouds and other atmospheric phenomena. NASA and the European Space Agency, ESRO, may make the orbiter a joint venture.

Scientists are certain that whatever they learn about Venus in the next five years will be different from what they have learned in the last five centuries.

"EVERYTHING WE knew about Mars was wrong — all wrong," Dr. Norman Horowitz of California Institute of Technology said in a moment of candor. No one expected to find volcanoes on Mars — much less any signs of running water.

And before men landed there, few people truly believed there were volcanoes on the moon.

Our very first satellite — Explorer 1 — discovered the Van Allen radiation belts which protect us from deadly solar radiation.

Teachers set to consider revised contract

by JILL BETTNER

School Dist. 21 teachers are set today to consider the proposed 1973-74 contract as revised Monday by representatives of the Wheeling Faculty Council (WFC) and the school board.

Dist. 21 Assistant Supt. John Barger, chairman of the school board negotiating team, said yesterday the new contract is a compromise.

"There are some things we would have preferred to have in it and some things I'm sure they would have preferred to have in it, but when you negotiate, you have to compromise," he said. "I think the contract is fair for both parties."

Barger refused to elaborate further and would not disclose the terms of the agreement worked out Monday. Margo Richter, chairman of the WFC negotiating team, also refused any comment when contacted yesterday.

Miss Richter said last week the WFC executive committee rejected a proposed multi-year contract that had earlier been agreed upon by the bargaining representatives.

ACCORDING TO Miss Richter, the teachers planned Monday to ask the school board negotiating team to accept the terms of that proposed multi-year contract as a one-year agreement. Both Miss Richter and Barger refused yesterday, however, to verify that the contract going to the teachers today is a one-year agreement or that it contains the same terms as the proposed multi-year contract.

If the teachers approve the revised contract today, Barger said the agreement will be considered by the school board Thursday night at its regular meeting.

Because the negotiations have been closed this year, information on the terms of the contract package has been sketchy. Last year's sessions were open to the public.

Barger revealed several weeks ago some of the points that were discussed by bargaining representatives. They included:

- The 1973-74 school calendar.
- Extra duty salary for teachers.
- Basic salary for teachers.
- Insurance coverage for teachers.
- Contract duration.

IT IS NOT known if the bargaining teams have reached agreement on these issues or if additional terms are being discussed.

Last year, representatives of the Illinois Education Association (IEA) bargained for local teachers. The 1972-73 contract, when it was finally approved last September, included a 6 per cent hike in annual teacher salaries.

The 6 per cent pay increase was split up among the teachers according to a pay schedule devised by the WFC. The contract provided $3,825,352 for the pay schedule as compared to $3,608,823 allotted in 1971.

Other terms included in the present contract that is set to expire in June are:

- The procedures for negotiating contracts.
- 10 days sick leave for teachers, one day personal leave with the approval of the district and one day personal leave without approval. All sick days and personal leave days not used can accumulate to 100 days.

- The board of education will pay group health and accident insurance for all full-time employees.

Miss Richter said when the talks ended last year she was pleased with the contract. Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill also said he felt the settlement was "a good one." He said the 6 per cent pay raise was competitive with increases in other districts at that time.

Gill has not commented on this year's talks and was unavailable for comment yesterday.

MASKED DANCERS will be part of the show "Double Exposure," to be presented by the Wheeling High School Orchestris dance troupe Friday and Saturday. The program will feature twenty-six dances and will start at 8 p.m. at the school. Tickets for the annual event are $1. The show will be presented in the Little Theater.

Office building on Dundee Road 3, 4 months off

Construction of a new office building on Dundee Road will probably begin in three to four months and should be completed by the end of the year, local real estate broker Stan Lieberman said yesterday.

The Buffalo Grove Village Board Monday night approved a zoning change for the 1.07-acre site which is located on the north side of Dundee Road west of Golfview Terrace.

The board's action overruled the plan commission who rejected the request by Lieberman two months ago. At that time the plan commission said they were not in favor of changing the zoning of the property to business use because it contradicted the village master plan.

The master plan calls for residential development along Dundee Road. Some members of the plan commission said the zoning change could set a precedent for unlimited commercial development of Dundee Road.

Lieberman, of Stan Lieberman Realty Inc., 150 W. Dundee Rd., told the board at a public hearing in February that he wished to move his realty office to the new building. His present office is no longer adequate due to expansion, he said.

Lieberman said he wished to remain in Buffalo Grove, but would be unable to unless the change was granted. "We feel

Rezoning decision to be made Monday

Village to vote on fire station annex

by JOE FRANZ

The Buffalo Grove Village Board is scheduled to vote Monday night on the proposed annexation and rezoning request for a new fire station on Dundee Road.

The board held a public hearing this week on the request and directed Village Atty. Richard Raysa to prepare the final agreement. The project was approved by the plan commission last week.

The Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District has proposed to buy 6.49 acres of land on the south side of Dundee Road west of the Kingswood Methodist Church. If plans to keep two acres of the site for the fire station and sell the remaining 4.49 acres to a private developer for construction of a bank, medical center and office building.

The board voted unanimously to approve the project despite stiff opposition from several members of the plan commission who were against changing the zoning to business use. The village master plan calls for residential development along Dundee Road.

Commissioner Howard Mendenhall said he opposed the project because he thought it would set a precedent for unlimited commercial development along Dundee Road. Mendenhall said that while he does not favor single-family residential development there, he thinks there is a place for multi-family homes, such as condominiums.

COMR. BURT HARRIS said he thinks it was practical for residential development on Dundee Road. "What we're really being asked to do is scrap the master plan entirely in regard to Dundee Road," he said. "I don't think we can just throw Dundee Road down the drain as far as residential development goes."

Harris suggested the fire station obtain the two acres of land it needs through condemnation rather than by purchasing the entire tract and reselling the additional land.

Buffalo Grove Fire Chief Wayne Winter, however, said condemnation would take two years. "We need the fire station and we need it now," Winter said. He said the fire district has to purchase the entire 6.49 acres because the owner of the property refuses to sell them just the two acres they need.

Winter said the site is the only available place for a fire station on Dundee Road within service boundaries designated by the Illinois Inspection and Rating Bureau. "Without that land there will be no fire station," Winter said.

Trustee Randall Rathjen, who is handling the real estate transaction for the fire district, did not participate in discussion or voting at Monday's board meeting.

THROUGH RATHJEN, employed by Homefinders Realty, the fire district received an option to buy the land for $352,000. Some residents have said a conflict of interest exists because Rathjen stands to make sizable commissions on the sale and resale of the land, and is a board member.

Rathjen, however, said no conflict of interest exists as long as he abstains from discussion and voting on the matter.

Three area students on Carmel honor roll

Three area students are among pupils listed on the Carmel High School honor roll for the third academic quarter.

Michael Walz, a ninth grade student from Wheeling, was recognized for earning special honors. During the grading period, he received no grade lower than a "B."

Both Anna Campbell and Denise Malachowski, both of Buffalo Grove, made the honor roll by maintaining a "B" average during the third quarter.

Sales tax redistribution bill voted down in State House

by BOB LAHEY

SPRINGFIELD — An Illinois House committee yesterday voted down a bill aimed at sharing the sales tax wealth from giant shopping centers among all cities and villages.

The measure would have caused the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars each year for several Northwest suburbs by redistributing the one per cent sales tax municipalities keep on purchases made at local stores and businesses.

By a vote of 13 to 1, the House cities and villages committee gave the bill a "do not pass" recommendation, a move that generally means the death of proposed legislation.

The measure, introduced by State Rep. Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, was the object of intense lobbying pressure by suburban officials.

Several northwest suburban mayors were here yesterday to express their opposition to the bill which, as one legislator said, "would take the money from the towns where the problems are and put it out with the pigs and cows."

LONE COMMITTEE member voting was State Rep. Eugene Schlickma, R-Arlington Heights. He said his vote came only because he supports establishment of a commission to come up with a sales tax redistribution formula.

"I would like to turn the clock back to the time before the sales tax formula was devised" and start again with a more equitable formula, Schlickman told the committee.

However, he said changes proposed in the bill would have a "convulsive effect" on communities that depend on sales tax revenue.

The bill would have given only 20 per cent of the one-cent municipal sales tax to towns where it is collected. The remaining 80 per cent would have been distributed statewide on a per capita basis, in the way gasoline and state income taxes are given to local governments.

Figures distributed by Rep. Donald L. Totten R-Schaumburg, showed that all Northwest suburban communities in his district would lose revenue under the bill, with the exception of Palatine and Hoffman Estates, which would have more than doubled their sales tax revenue.

Of 10 cities and villages in the Northwest suburbs, total sales tax revenue would have dropped from nearly $10 million to slightly over $7.3 million.

AMONG THE officials present were mayors Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect, Robert Atcher of Schaumburg, Nicholas Blase of Niles and Roland Meyer of Rolling Meadows. Also present were George Passolt, village manager of Wheeling and Richard Eppeley, village manager of Mount Prospect.

Most were from communities which have large shopping centers and need the money from sales tax for services to these areas, according to their testimony.

Meyer told the committee that in Rolling Meadows sales tax revenue totals $1.2 million coming mostly from industries which the village has labored to attract in order to build its tax base.

Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, drew applause from the crowd jammed in to the small hearing room, saying "there will be no reduction of taxes in the communities which benefit from this bill, and

Under the formula proposed by the bill, Rolling Meadows' sales tax revenue would have plunged from $1.3 million to $612,000.

In Des Plaines, the drop would be from $2.1 million to $1.4 million; Elk Grove would go according to a partial estimate, from $1.1 million to $661,000, according to figures given to the committee.

The figures would have been less drastic in Arlington Heights, $1.5 million to $1.4 million and Mount Prospect, $1.5 million to $1.1 million.

Palatine would have benefited slightly with an increase in revenue from $567,000 to $580,000. Hoffman Estates, would have enjoyed an increase from $211,000 to $440,000.

Prospects Heights

Two state panels give incorporation a chance

Despite objections by the Illinois Municipal League, two state legislative committees have recommended passage of bills that would give Prospect Heights a chance to incorporate.

The Illinois House of Representatives Committee on Cities and Villages voted 6-5 to recommend passage of a House bill that would allow Prospect Heights to become a city without consent of neighboring villages. Arlington Heights and Wheeling have objected to the proposed city of about 10,000 residents.

The Illinois Committee on Local Government voted 10-2 to recommend passage of a similar Senate bill. Both bills, introduced into the Illinois General Assembly last month, would permit unincorporated areas of 7,500 or more residents to incorporate without approval of nearby villages. For an area of less than 7,500 persons, the bill requires consent from municipalities within 1½ miles.

Before voting, both committees listened last week to testimony from the Illinois Municipal League, opposing the bills, and the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA), in favor of the bills.

Tom Fitzsimmons, assistant director of the League, said the group is opposed to the bills because they would create more units of local government.

"WE ARE OPPOSED by policy to the proliferation of further units of local government. We believe if they (Prospect Heights residents) want to live under the charter of incorporation it is available to them by annexing to surrounding communities. Why create another assembly of services which would be quite costly to residents? Besides, when those people decided to move in an unincorporated area they knew what the conditions were."

Fitzsimmons said he was aware Arlington Heights and Wheeling have formally opposed the bills, but that it did not influence the league's position. He said the league will work to defeat the two bills when they get to the House and Senate floors. The bills are sponsored by State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, and State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northfield.

Jack Gilligan, PHIA president, said he testified that the state statutes on incorporation are ambiguous and that the incorporation laws need to be modernized, as proposed in the bills.

The PHIA is also fighting in the courts for incorporation. After the Cook County Circuit Court and Illinois Appellate Court ruled against incorporation, the PHIA appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear its case. The high court turned down the appeal, but the PHIA has decided to petition again for a hearing.

Village approves land annexation west of Wolf

The Wheeling Village Board Monday approved as ordinance annexing land to the south of Hintz Road on the west side of Wolf Road to the village.

The board also directed the zoning board hold hearings for this property to consider changing the zoning from residential to industrial. Property owners also requested hearings for a special use permit to establish, locate and maintain motor freight terminals.

In other action, the board approved the payment of $3,948.58 for well repairs and $8,123.60 for new storm sewers in the Dunhurst area.

Bids were opened for a new animal warden's van and for the exterior refinishing of the village water tower on Old Willow Road. A decision on the bids will be announced at the next board meeting.

The board approved the final plat of a two lot subdivision for the Tara Village apartment development. The subdivision separates the land being developed for apartments from a parcel of land planned for other uses.

Trustee Bill Hein announced the village would let bids for the construction of a new Jeffrey Avenue bridge during the week.

there is a serious need in the village for office space," he said. "We have no choice but to build if we are to remain in Buffalo Grove."

Lieberman told the board he had spoken with all adjacent land owners and they seemed pleased with the proposed project. He said the site would be "well landscaped" and attractive.

"We want Dundee Road to be an attractive front door to the village," he said. "I'm an inside developer as opposed to an outside developer and am interested in making the buildings an asset to the village."

Lieberman said, as planned, the office building will be two stories. He said he has received "firm commitments from several doctors and professional persons who plan to rent office space in the building."

A one-story building which will house specialty shops will be constructed adjacent to the office building, Lieberman said. Final plans for the projects will be subject to review by the village appearance commission.

In other action Monday night the village board approved the annexation agreement for the 39.8 acre Swanson development to be constructed at the southeast corner of Arlington Heights and Checker roads. However, two other ordinances that are required with the annexation agreement were deferred until April 24.

THE THREE FIFTH-grade classes at Sandburg School recently took a class trip to the Chicago planetarium and aquarium. The trip was in conjunction with a science unit study.

THE THREE sixth-grade classes at Alcott School recently took an armchair tour of the Caribbean with the aid of Mrs. Kay Marquette.

Mrs. Marquette, an ex-stewardess, showed slides and discussed them with the students. The study of the Caribbean area is part of the sixth-grade social studies curriculum.

CHILDREN IN first-grade classes at Poe School in Arlington Heights are discovering Africa. Mrs. Joan Boudreaux's class recently made African animals out of boxes, spoons and construction paper. They also made witch doctors and other pottery pieces from salt and flour "clay."

Children in Mrs. Pat Menzel's class have enriched their study of Nigeria by learning words in Hausa, the language spoken in that country. They are also making African clay pots.

Students in Mrs. Cathy Haller's class are enjoying pictures and literature about Tunisia and Morocco. Mrs. Haller wrote to the ambassadors of the countries for the materials.

Miss Victoria Nelson's room is filled with artifacts from Africa donated by the mother of one of the students, Mrs. Morris. She has shared several pieces of her collection of African objects with the class.

Among the items loaned by Mrs. Morris are a piece of rhinoceros hide, a beautifully carved drum from Zambia, elephant tusks with faces carved on the inside, a purse made of elephant skin and biltong, original African beef jerky.

With the help of Mrs. Morris' African cookbook, the teachers plan to connect a feast of African delights for the children to enjoy before they finish their inquiry into life in that continent.

Ruling on opening Strong Street suit expected today

Judge Robert J. Downing is expected to rule today on whether to reopen the W. Strong Street zoning suit to allow the village to submit new evidence.

The suit, filed by several Strong Street homeowners, challenges last year's decision to zone 47 scattered lots in the area to allow apartments. Residents charged this action was spot-zoning because it ignored the present single-family homes in the area.

Shortly before Judge Downing was scheduled to rule on the case, the village asked to delay a decision so Wheeling officials could consider rezoning the entire area to allow apartments. The judge granted the delay, saying he would decide today whether to admit evidence on the rezoning.

The village board unanimously approved rezoning the entire area last week over the objections of numerous W. Strong Street residents.

Judge Downing, however, has recently been appointed to the Appellate Court. Since he will assume his new position around the first of the month, it is not yet known if Downing will continue to rule in this case or defer it until his successor is appointed.

The first judge assigned to the Strong Street case was also appointed to the Appellate court. Judge Edward J. Egan ruled on several pretrial motions before being moved up to the higher court.

Man arrested for car theft, other counts

Wheeling police yesterday charged a 32-year-old man with stealing two cars, possession of marijuana, possession of burglary tools and possession of stolen license plates.

Michael Joseph Wilson, alias Joseph G. Wilson, was arrested by Cook County Sheriff's Police after Wheeling police received a report of a stolen car from the Fireplace Restaurant on N. Milwaukee Avenue.

An employee of the restaurant reported her car stolen when she left work at 2:30 a.m. Nancy Bartels told police she had quarreled with her boyfriend and said he might have taken the car.

WILSON WAS arrested at Miss Bartels' residence by sheriff's police. He was found to be in possession of marijuana and burglary tools, police said.

Later in the morning, Wheeling police found an abandoned car in the parking lot of the Fireplace Restaurant. After checking the car's registration number, police found the car had been stolen in Portage, Ind., last month.

Police said they tied Wilson into the theft of this auto after investigation. He was charged with the theft and possession of stolen Illinois license plates.

Police said Wilson gave no address. He was being held on $22,500 bond.

Community calendar

In an effort to avoid conflicts caused by two or more organizations who plan events for the same evenings, the Wheeling Park District is putting together a community calendar of leisure, recreation and community activities.

Bill Maher, park district intern who is coordinating the project, said he is having trouble contacting organizations to find out their schedules of upcoming events.

The information from each organization will be compiled into a master calendar that will be distributed to all groups.

Maher said all groups interested in having their activities included in the community calendar should contact him at the Wheeling Park District office, 222 S. Wolf Rd., 537-2222.

Meet your candidates for village offices: Part 2

Charles Cushman: Progress needed on road repairs, attraction of industry

The function of village government should be the active pursuit of progress, according to Charles Cushman. Cushman is seeking election as village trustee on the Concerned Citizens of Buffalo Grove (CCBG) ticket.

Cushman, 810 Checker Dr., said he feels the present village board has failed to take initiative on several important projects. He cited the lack of local industry and the delay in repairing Arlington Heights Road as examples of a lack of aggressiveness by the trustees.

"Probably the biggest weakness of the present board is their failure to take action quickly enough," Cushman said. "I know for sure that because the board failed to follow up on an inquiry about industrial development, we lost a company to Bensenville. That was in the past year."

CUSHMAN, 40, SAID he is running for the board because he has a desire to serve and because he wants to protect the "vested interests of the citizens." He feels one way the trustees could more aggressively protect those interests would be to establish more effective links with other area agencies such as the school and park districts and the Lake County Public Works Dept.

Cushman said he would also try to stimulate more debate among the members of the board before action is taken.

"It's always bothered me that there appears to be very little independent thinking on this board," Cushman said of the present trustees. "I realize that when we're elected, I won't vote with the other people on the slate 100 per cent of the time, but dissension isn't always bad."

The other two candidates on the CCBG slate are Mrs. Betty Spence and Algimantas Kezelis. Cushman stressed that the three are committed to electing the entire slate.

"We want to present a united front," he said. "We're not running as individuals, we are a group."

CUSHMAN SAID if elected, he would

In the municipal election Tuesday, April 17, Buffalo Grove residents will elect three village trustees from a field of 10 candidates.

There are two party slates and four independent candidates seeking the available four-year terms.

Today, the Herald publishes recent interviews with the Concerned Citizens of Buffalo Grove Party (CCBG) candidates and two of the independent candidates.

personally take a firm stand with developers seeking to build in Buffalo Grove.

"I would rather not see violations of master plan as it was conceived," Cushman said.

If a developer wants to build in the village, he'd better build what we feel is acceptable in terms of flood control and density too," he added.

Disagreeing with the present village board's list of priorities, Cushman said he did not think the construction of a public works garage is of paramount importance.

Cushman said he would rather see federal revenue sharing funds used to help solve an immediate problem in the village such as the grading of White Pine Ditch.

CUSHMAN SAID he also does not feel the village board should be as concerned as it is about purchasing the Buffalo Grove Golf Course.

Cushman said he would like to see the board concentrate on establishing effective flood control, improving cooperation between local agencies and extending village services. This would include, he said, establishing a municipal fire department and building a public library.

Looking ahead 10 years from now, Cushman said he hopes the village includes some light industry or office and research facilities, a balanced number of single and multi-family housing units and adequate parks and open space.

Cushman said he also would like to see a full-service shopping complex in the village by 1983. He suggested a good location would be along McHenry Road.

Commenting on the issue of ethics, Cushman said he would definitely resign if any question of conflict of interest arose during his term as trustee.

A design engineer for Wilson Sporting Goods, Cushman is active in the father and son program at the Countryside YMCA in Palatine. He is lieutenant commander in the U. S. Coast Guard Reserve.

Algimantas Kezelis: Village board 'insensitive to public problems'

Algimantas Kezelis, 220 Stonegate Dr., Concerned Citizens of Buffalo Grove (CCBG) Party candidate for village trustee in the April 17 election said he is running because he thinks the current village board has been "insensitive to public problems."

"That's why the CCBG was formed," he said. "Recent happenings indicate many citizens are not getting a dollar's worth of service for every dollar they pay in taxes."

Kezelis said the village board lacks initiative and aggressiveness when dealing with problems that face the village. He also said the current village board has not worked successfully with other government bodies.

Kezelis cited the case concerning the repairs of Arlington Heights Road as an example. The project was needlessly delayed because the board was unable to work with other agencies, he said.

KEZELIS SAID funds to repair the road were always available to the board. The board did not do anything, however, until some residents applied pressure, he added.

The Cook County resident said, if elected, he will work with other government bodies to assure that village interests are protected. He said he will do this in respect to school districts, the park district, sewer districts, flood control and public transit.

Kezelis thinks flood control, the fresh water supply and growth are the most important issues facing the village.

Kezelis said he will work to alleviate present flooding problems, as well as working to prevent future ones. "We should assure that flooding problems are not added to or compounded in future developments," he said.

KEZELIS SAID the village should look into the possibility of obtaining fresh water from sources other than wells. "Every time we deepen one of our wells, we lower the water table," he said. "It gets lower every year."

He said he will explore the possibility of the village hooking up with Chicago or some other large water supply. He added that the cost would probably not be much higher than what residents are already paying.

Kezelis said he will work to control the family character of the community. "I would not like to see the character of the community changed," he said.

Stories by Joe Franz, Jill Bettner and Rich Honack

He explained that he will accomplish this by supporting low densities in residential developments and by assuring adequate open space in the community. He also said he will work to keep a balance of single-family homes.

KEZELIS THINKS the growth of the village should be carefully controlled by the village board. "The present board is hypnotized with growth," he said. "As far as I'm concerned expansion for expansion's sake is a low priority."

At the present time, Kezelis said he would not favor low-income housing in Buffalo Grove. He said the kind of employment conducive to low-income families is currently lacking in the village.

Kezelis said he will work to bring industry into the village to help broaden the tax base. He said he favors light manufacturing or research facilities. "Anything that would create environmental problems I would be opposed to," he added.

Kezelis would like to see a municipal fire department created in the near future. In the meantime, however, he said he will work to have a fire department paramedic program developed for Lake County Buffalo Grove residents. At present, only Cook County residents have the program.

Kezelis said he was concerned over the recent conflict of interest charges made against Village President Gary Armstrong and trustee Randall Rathjen. He said if his employment or outside interests ever conflicted with his duties as a board member he would not hesitate to resign.

The CCBG platform proposes an ordinance that would allow citizens to recall a trustee they think might have developed a conflict of interest. The platform also proposes an ordinance which would require a trustee to resign before filing for another elected public office.

Betty Spence: 'We have to ask each developer - if we let you in, what can you offer us?'

Mrs. Betty Spence, 37, Concerned Citizens of Buffalo Grove (CCBG) party candidate for village trustee, said because of her experience and because she has no other commitments, voters should elect her April 17.

"I have experience, time, interest and the desire to get involved," she said. Mrs. Spence served on the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission from 1970 through 1972. She was also a delegate to the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

Mrs. Spence, 901 Westborne Ln., feels that because of her experience on the plan commission she has insight into the problems in Buffalo Grove. "I also know where to go for answers to problems," she said.

MRS. SPENCE charged that the present village board lacks initiative and aggressiveness. "I don't think the board should wait for pressure from citizens. They should be aggressive without having pressure applied," she said.

She cited the case involving the repair of Arlington Heights Road. "They didn't do anything for several months when the means were there all along," she said.

Mrs. Spence said she feels there has been a lack of unity on the present board. "I think in the past two years there's been a lot of confusion and conflict on the village board," she said.

She said she thought charges of conflict of interest against Village Pres. Gary Armstrong and Trustee Randall Rathjen hurt the effectiveness of the current village board.

MRS. SPENCE said she would resign from the board if any of her other interests interfered with her duties as a trustee. The CCBG party platform proposes an ordinance where the citizens can recall a trustee they think might have developed a conflict of interest.

The platform also proposes an ordinance which would require a trustee to resign before filing for another elected public office.

Mrs. Spence said she feels flooding and growth are the biggest issues facing the village. She said she basically supports the village master plan on both issues.

Mrs. Spence said the village should carefully consider every new development before approving its annexation into the village.

"We have to ask each developer - if we let you in, what can you offer us?" she said.

MRS. SPENCE said she favors strict enforcement of flood ordinances. Every new development should be carefully considered by the village to make sure it is not a potential flooding problem, she said.

Although Mrs. Spence agrees with the resolution which requires developers to make land or cash donations to the school and park districts, she feels the village could ask for more. "I don't think we're getting as much from the developers as we could," she said.

The resolution, which was adopted as an ordinance in Naperville, is currently being tested in court as to its legality.

In regard to preserving open space, Mrs. Spence said, "I don't think you could ever get enough open space. I'd like to see us get as much as we could."

MRS. SPENCE promises to bring industry to Buffalo Grove. Industry will help ease the tax burden that is presently on the taxpayers, she said. She said she would favor only light, clean industry.

At the present time, Mrs. Spence said she would not favor bringing low-income housing into Buffalo Grove. "I don't think Buffalo Grove lends itself to that kind of development," she said.

She said Buffalo Grove currently does not have a job market for low-income families. They also lack public transportation which would be essential for persons living in low-income housing, she said.

Mrs. Spence said she feels the master plan is unrealistic in calling for residential development along Dundee Road. "I don't think Dundee Road lends itself to anything but commercial," she said.

SHE SUGGESTED federal revenue sharing funds be used for such projects as the repair of the White Pine or Aspen Court ditches. She said she is opposed to using them for construction of a public works garage.

"At the present time I certainly don't think that should be a high priority. Besides it would be a long-term project," she added.

Mrs. Spence said she will work to establish a municipal fire department. She said she would favor one as soon as the village could afford it. She added that she will also work to start a paramedic program for Lake County Buffalo Grove residents. Currently only Cook County residents have the program.

Independent:

John Ayers

John Ayers, independent candidate for Buffalo Grove village trustee promises to represent and communicate with his constituents if he is elected April 17.

"The people want representation," he said. "They want people on the board who will communicate with them. I feel I can do this."

Ayers, 403 Indian Hill Dr., who is employed as a manager of flexible products by De Soto Inc., said because he has been a resident of the village for more than four years, he thinks he is familiar with village problems.

Ayers thinks growth and flood control are the most important matters facing the village. "The present village board has done a good job in dealing with these problems," he said.

AYERS SAID he would not like to see the village grow to a population of 70,000, as some persons have predicted.

"If the village grows to 70,000 you're defeating what a lot of people moved out here for," he said. "I would like to see the population of the village reach a maximum of 25,000."

Ayers favors creating a "clearly defined" downtown area in the village where residents could gather. This would help unify the village, he said.

Ayers would like to see the village master plan promote this kind of area. He said he thinks the village carefully consider new developments before allowing them to annex into the village. This should be done in regard to flooding, open space, density and rental units, he added.

AYERS SAID he favors revising the village master plan to reduce the number of rental units. He said he also favors controlling the number of multi-family dwellings in relation to single family homes.

He said he does not favor bringing low-income housing into the village.

If elected, Ayers will work to preserve open space within the village. He said he would like to see the village buy the Buffalo Grove Golf Course at a later date.

He emphasized the need for recreation areas, particularly for teen-agers. Providing recreational facilities for teen-agers can keep them occupied and out of trouble, he said. "With teen-agers we always work after the fact," he said.

THE COOK County resident said it is important for the village board to assure new developments do not add to the flooding problems. "I think building in the flood plain should be investigated further before the village allows it," Ayers said.

He promises to promote better cooperation between Buffalo Grove and the communities surrounding it. "We have to work together because we are going to have adjoining properties," he said.

He suggested Buffalo Grove meet with other communities and discuss the possibility of developing a master plan for the entire area. "This way we could all work together for our common interests," he said.

AYERS EMPHASIZED the importance of Buffalo Grove attracting industry to help broaden the tax base and take some of the burden off the taxpayers. He said he would favor light industry and research facilities as opposed to heavy industry.

He feels a municipal fire department would help attract industry and business to Buffalo Grove. He said he would favor this as soon as it was economically feasible.

Although Ayers feels "the ethics of previous board members have been above reproach," he still thinks the development of a code of ethics for village trustees would help prevent conflicts of interest in the future.

Independent:

Donald Kearns

Donald Kearns, independent candidate for Buffalo Grove village trustee has the youth of the village as his top priority. "We need to help the youth of the community as much as possible. A good place to start is with the Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau," he said.

Kearns, 741 Middlesex Ct., is a vice president and founder of the bureau, which serves the youth of Buffalo Grove and surrounding areas.

"The village recently approved $13,000 for the bureau and I feel more help like this is needed. The youth of the community have nowhere to go that they can call their own," he added.

Kearns thinks the park district should work more with the village in setting up programs for the community. "Sure, the park district offers little league, but what about the kids that don't play baseball?" he asked. "I'm for getting more people involved."

THE COOK COUNTY resident said he thinks the current board is pro multi-unit development. "That's good for taxing and I'm not really against it. However, I think we should look toward the ideal of single-family homes," Kearns added.

He said if he had his way he would arrange the priorities of the board in the following manner:

- Solutions to flooding problems.
- Youth programs.
- Single-family development.
- Attraction of industry.

"We could use some light industry in Buffalo Grove. It would help us with taxes and would make the community more complete. An industrial park, like Wheeling's would be ideal," said Kearns.

Donald Kearns

The candidate also said he would support low-income housing if the zoning is there to support it. "I would never go for a change in zoning to accommodate the housing, but, if the zoning is there, I'm not against lower priced homes."

KEARNS ALSO said he'd like to see the village stop growing after it reached a population of 25,000 or 30,000. "I don't agree with the unlimited expansion of the master plan. I think we should remain small and have our own little community," he said.

"I would also like to see a downtown section built in the village. Something built around St. Mary's," he added.

On the subject of a municipal fire department, he said it is necessary. He added that the residents of Lake County should at least have the paramedic program to serve them. Currently, only the Cook County section of the village has that service.

"The paramedic program is one of the greatest things to happen in this village. It is a shame the Lake County residents can't use it," he added.

KEARNS, WHO lives in the Cambridge subdivision, said one of the faults of the current board was its late involvement in the Buffalo Grove High School boundaries. "They got involved in the debate too late to do the residents of our subdivision any good," he explained. Cambridge students will attend the high school. They will attend Wheeling High School.

He also said it looks as though the current board ignores other communities. "Whoever gets elected should try to get more cooperation in working with our neighbors. What good is our master plan if someone else is competing for our land?" he asked.

He then repeated his idea that the community should not be governed by the master plan and grow too large. He suggested that the master plan be used strictly as a guideline.

As for the development of Dundee Road, Kearns would not argue with the fact of constructing office buildings instead of single-family homes. "I would even be in favor of some nice research centers along Dundee Road," he said.

Kearns said however, "No matter how I feel about a subject I will do as the people ask. If I feel one way and they prove to me that a majority of the people see it another way, I would go with the majority. After all, we represent the people," he said.

Sales tax redistribution bill voted down in State House

by BOB LAHEY
SPRINGFIELD — An Illinois House committee yesterday voted down a bill aimed at sharing the sales tax wealth from giant shopping centers among all cities and villages.

Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, was the object of intense lobbying pressure by suburban officials. Several northwest suburban mayors were here yesterday to express their opposition to the bill which, as one legislator said, "would take the money from the towns where the problems are and put it out with the pigs and cows."

However, he said changes proposed in the bill would have a "convulsive effect" on communities that depend on sales tax revenue. The bill would have given only 20 per cent of the one-cent municipal sales tax to towns where it is collected. The remaining 80 per cent would have been distributed statewide on a per capita basis, in the way gasoline and state income taxes are given to local governments.

Hoffman Estates, which would have more than doubled their sales tax revenue. Of 10 cities and villages in the Northwest suburbs, total sales tax revenue would have dropped from nearly $10 million to slightly over $7.3 million.

Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, drew applause from the crowd jammed in to the small hearing room, saying "there will be no reduction of taxes in the communities which benefit from this bill, and we all know it. The towns which are hurt by it will simply have to go to the people for more taxes in other forms."

bill, Rolling Meadows' sales tax revenue would have plunged from $1.3 million to $612,000. In Des Plaines, the drop would be from $2.1 million to $1.4 million; Elk Grove would go according to a partial estimate, from $1.1 million to $661,000, according to figures given to the committee.

Wolf, Kosmen challenge Behrel in mayor race

Herbert Behrel: 1973 is a 'time and place in life where we must look toward changes...'

Mayor Herbert Behrel

In 1948 Herbert Behrel became a politician. He ran for alderman in a postwar Chicago suburb of less than 14,000 persons.

Behrel won a Des Plaines aldermanic seat that year. He was a city council member as construction boomed in the 1950s.

By 1957, when Behrel won election as part-time mayor, the population had tripled. Des Plaines was no longer a sleepy suburb. The city was part of Chicago's bustling metropolis and neighboring O'Hare Airport's expansion was bringing pollution and noise to Des Plaines' doorstep.

Behrel's true political forcefulness surfaced in 1961, when he successfully convinced voters to reject a city manager form of government and won election as Des Plaines' first full-time mayor.

TWELVE YEARS and four terms later, the task of city development is incomplete, but dreamed-about projects are near reality. Promises and yearly lists of goals are a spade away from construction.

At 57, the mayor has served Des Plaines for 25 years. He has met Presidents. He has influenced congressmen. Now, by running one last time, he hopes to retire on notes of major accomplishment.

"I want to stay and see some of this

This is the seventh in a series of candidate interviews for the Des Plaines city election, which will be held Tuesday, April 17.

Today's interviews feature the candidates for mayor. Incumbent Herbert Behrel will be challenged by Burton Kosmen and David Wolf.

finished," Behrel tells campaign audiences this year.

"I'm the incumbent. An incumbent runs on his record," the mayor adds.

That record — with its strengths and weaknesses — is under scrutiny as Behrel faces what may be his toughest election battle.

ON THE CREDIT SIDE, the mayor can list city water system improvements, new sewers and street paving, Weller Creek work, city council committee streamlining, hiring of a city planner and environmental controls officer, expansion of the engineering department, and the opening of Fire Station No. 1.

On the debit side, the mayor must answer citizens' questions about increased crime, flooding, taxes, mass transportation, airport noise, zoning and non-referendum bonds for financing of city projects.

In abeyance are the big headline-grabbers that Behrel has listed in the annual report for years — construction of a city hall-police complex, downtown redevelopment, possible purchase of United Motor Coach Co., senior citizen housing, an overpass at the Chicago and North Western Ry. Outer Belt tracks and a Des Plaines library addition.

BEHREL IS A cornerstone away from many of the proposals. Library addition construction bids were awarded last weekend; senior citizen building zoning was approved by the zoning board last week; redevelopment zoning was examined at a public hearing last night.

Final completion of the projects — which Behrel calls a "catalyst to a rebuilt Des Plaines" — is expected in two years. And, that's the middle of the 1973 mayoral winner's four-year term.

1972 was "not an exceptional year," the mayor has said, 1973 is "a place in life where we must look at changes."

Behrel's reelection platform includes pledges to continue unfinished projects. His new tidbits call for establishing a "friendship center for the community's young people" (to replace the former Place for People) and Des Plaines application for an All-American cities award.

"We propose to seek the award so that we can show people all over the country what Des Plaines residents already know ... that this is a wonderful city in which to live, work and raise their families," the mayor said. The award would be a crowning moment in a political career that has drawn national attention, including membership on the National League of Cities board of directors.

INCUMBENT Behrel carries the advantage of familiarity with local issues and a well-known name. An energetic golfer who often walks the backyards of flooded residents, Behrel's age has not been a campaign topic although opponents have questioned his "accountability."

Lack of city initiative is the main campaign issue. Behrel answers by claiming that "I am the only candidate with knowledge and experience. These fellows (his opponents) can tell you how great they are in a 10-minute speech. But, I've seen a lot happen in Des Plaines" since moving here from Chicago in 1926.

Behrel is a different mayor now than he was in 1969. His outlook has mellowed on some issues. He even appears ready to consider a move to city manager government.

And his problems have increased to the point where some aldermen have declared open war on the mayor. A recent effort to cut the mayor's post to part-time was killed by Behrel backers. Another move to reduce mayoral committee appointment power faded after committee discussion.

BEHREL CALLS this last campaign week the "silly time ... killer time ... idiot time." He'll begin his days campaigning at local train stations about 6 a.m. in a last ditch effort to secure votes. The election "will be close," he said yesterday.

The "silly time" refers to "an effort to get Herb Behrel. They've lost sight of everything else," the mayor said, answering a recent rumor that "I'll become a commuting mayor" between Des Plaines and Arizona.

Behrel balanced a desire to travel and retire against finishing major city projects when he decided to seek a fifth term. His daughter and son-in-law, with five children, live in Des Plaines. His stepson lives in Tucson, Ariz.

THE MAYOR recently purchased "a lot in Sun City, Ariz. There's no house on it right now. That's not saying there won't be in the future."

"Round-trip air fare to Arizona is $397," the mayor told the Herald. "That's pretty expensive commuting."

Behrel ran in 1969 on the "good reputation for the city while I've been mayor. His re-election bid talks of a "continuous good government, continuous improvement in community services — always within the confines of the operating budget, from current funds."

Burton Kosmen: 'The businessmen are cronies of the present city administration...'

Burton W. Kosmen is a longshot in Des Plaines' mayoral race. "I'm a spoiler. I'm running to bring out the facts," he has said.

The facts, as Kosmen sees them, are that businessmen are "cronies of the present city administration ... city payroll padding is just as common here as in the City of Chicago ... unpopular and expensive bond referendums cost the taxpayers money under home rule."

Cronyism is a favorite Kosmenism that means anything from coverups in the city's fire prevention bureau to downtown redevelopment.

Kosmen is a Chicago high school teacher. A lifelong city resident, whose relatives were involved in the organization of the United Motor Coach Co., Kosmen is earning an education as a first-time political candidate.

WHAT BEGAN AS Kosmen's oneering effort to stop leakage from gas station storage tanks two years ago has turned into a circus of vicious campaign rhetoric, often without substantiation of charges.

Kosmen, 46, won a moral victory last year over gas leakage from a neighboring gas station into the basement of his home, 709 S. Des Plaines Ave. His one-man effort to prove underground soil contamination led to pulling of eight tanks here and passage of a city ordinance governing inspection and installation of tanks.

While fighting gas station owners and city fire officials who inspect the tanks, Kosmen blossomed as a political force by launching a drive against the proposed River Road overpass at Miner Street.

launching a drive against the proposed River Road overpass at Miner Street.

A Kosmen petition, circulated near the proposed bridge, asked the Cook County Forest Preserve District to deny right-of-way land for the project.

Kosmen nobly began his 11th-hour mayoral campaign with the announcement that "I'm in favor of the small homeowner first and the large landowner last. I favor strict enforcement of build-would be available to the public and recordings of closed sessions would be released after six months.

• A "modification" of the city's present combination of public and private downtown redevelopment programs "to ensure that all actions are subject to continuous scrutiny by the public."

• "Equal enforcement" of fire prevention laws, zoning ordinances and other regulations.

• Establishment by the city of a "positive, consistent environmental quality program."

• Public Saturday afternoon sessions at city hall where residents could give their opinions on proposed ordinances "as a continuing public opinion polls on all substantive issues before the council."

• "Galvanizing or eliminating do-nothing" commissions.

• A "positive ordinance" allowing city employees to take part in local politics on their own time and out of uniform, without penalty.

"A look around your own neighborhood, a look at downtown will tell you that there is nothing wrong that cannot be cured by: 1) increased participation of the electorate in government; 2) professionally qualified administrators; 3) equal enforcement of fire prevention laws, zoning ordinances and other regulations."

KOSMEN'S post-platform campaign has shied from his early statement that "no department head (should) be appointed unless or until he or she has met the standards of the appropriate national professional organization ... a city ethics ordinance is needed that requires full fiscal disclosure of personal and family net worth ... that city government can no longer be looked upon as the solution to the retirement problems of affable but not particularly knowledgeable people who are approaching the years when they don't want to work quite as hard as they did ..."

He has ventured into the realm of possible, but unproven, attacks, on Des Plaines city government and its officials. "You and I are being cheated — safety-wise and financially," he's fond of saying.

Kosmen's list of criticisms includes, proposed superblock development, construction of a city hall-police complex without public referendum and cost of commuter parking.

"There's so much animosity ... there may be more to lose than to gain" by running for office, Kosmen has said.

His recently formed Citizens Action Party "must emerge and bring these issues before the public, said Kosmen, who has campaigned around his teaching schedule and through a telephone answering service.

David Wolf: '16 years is long enough for one man...it's time for a change'

Sixteen years as mayor of Des Plaines is "long enough for one man," David Wolf said.

"It's time for change. I've done my homework. My commitment is apparent," he said.

Wolf announced his run for mayor Jan. 24. Since then, his campaign has been perpetual motion. He began a 90-day leave of absence from his post as a Des Plaines fire department captain Jan. 27 to campaign full-time for the $25,000-a-year mayor's chair.

"I feel I've put my message across," Wolf said from his campaign headquarters at Miner Street and River Road. "I'm getting agreement from all parts of the city."

WOLF'S CRY IS that Des Plaines government is a slow-motion, leaderless machine. Solutions to solve flooding are discovered after, not before, rain damage. A comprehensive plan has rested undisturbed, in the city council for 18 months. "All we do is react. You can't do anything without planning for it. My job would be to lead ... to say to the council ... let's move ... let's address ourselves to this situation."

Buoyed by car-top, luminescent "Wolf for mayor" signs and an active campaign committee, Wolf's campaign has been a quiet, well researched effort at meeting voters face-to-face.

His discussions at coffees, street corners and candidates nights have prompted a continuing discussion of problems that Des Plaines has not faced.

"ONE OF THE most important considerations is social services. It comes up time and time again," he said. "Des Plaines is not responsive to the need of its residents — counseling, expanded rec-creation areas, transportation and beautification.

"People are generally — overwhelmingly — completely — against changing the general character of the city," he said. "Residents moved here from urban areas. They don't think kindly toward high-rise development of downtown although they do favor some sort of redevelopment."

Wolf, 674 Laurel Ave., talks of "important problems — the rapid crime rise ... flooding ... the city plan. People want to know where the leadership is."

"I'm convinced that crime can be controlled by more widespread use of street lighting and more patrol cars on the street. Some cars, especially after dark, should be staffed in certain cases with two men."

WOLF DISMISSES his lack of government experience by saying that "I'm very well informed I've been interested in city government for years."

His father, Rheinhardt, was a three-term alderman who lost mayoral election bids to Behrel in 1957 and in 1965. "His involvement in politics spurred my interest. I attended council meetings because I was damn proud of him."

Wolf's campaign has been short of hard-hitting criticism of Mayor Herbert Behrel. While rapping the mayor's lack of leadership, Wolf has avoided mention of alleged building and fire code violation here — a topic that crosses into his official duties as a fireman. What Wolf, as a city employee, knows about inner workings of Des Plaines government has remained quietly in the background during the campaign.

Wolf's candidacy was carefully arranged with months of preparation. Wolf formed a steering committee of 13 persons including aldermen disillusioned with Behrel, former Voters Independent Party organizers, union officials, attorneys and businessmen.

OUT OF THE steering committee came a 16-point platform "to respond to the needs of our community." He announced opposition to spot zoning, location of the proposed Metropolitan Sanitary District plant here, O'Hare airport noise, pollution and the planned east-west Thacker-Dempster street connection at the Des Plaines River.

"I shall encourage the revitalization of area civic associations to discuss and debate the issues of local concern and will endorse re-establishment of the Des Plaines Council of Civic Associations." He called for a commission to "investigate the form of local government best suited to the needs of the city."

Des Plaines' planned 129-unit senior citizen housing project will meet "only 25 per cent of the city need." Purchase of United Motor Coach is necessary "if a fair market price is agreed upon. I'm concerned with providing the facilities to improve public transportation."

Wolf is the epitome of a home town boy. A product of local schools, he grew up working as a grocery store delivery boy and a hardware store clerk. He became Des Plaines fifth paid fireman in 1952 and has coached Little League, advised Boy Scouts and participated in his church choir.

WOLF, FATHER of four children, was president for three years of Des Plaines Historical Society. He said he can appeal to old residents "because I'm born and raised here" and to new, younger voters because "I'm part of their generation."

"I own a home here. I've lived here all my life. My wife and I plan to live the rest of our lives here."

He is not a financially poor candidate. For 16 years his family has owned and vacationed at a cottage near Tomahawk, Wis. Wolf also owns a farm on the Illinois River near Peoria "where I love to go duck hunting."

"If work will win this election, then we'll do it. My people have busted themselves," he said. "I predict a big vote."

election 73 Meet your Dist. 207 school board candidates

Michael Bartos

'Teachers' union affiliation is their own business. I don't believe in interfering...'

Dist. 207 teachers joined the Illinois Education Association, a statewide teachers union, last fall. Since then the teachers have been asking for more voice in school operations.

Incumbent Michael Bartos, running for reelection, says he is not opposed to the teachers' affiliation with the IEA. "That is entirely up to them. I don't believe in interfering with the internal workings of a teachers' group," he said.

The board recently vetoed a request by teachers to allow a representative of the union to sit with the board during its meetings. Bartos agrees that teachers should not sit on the board because they are not elected officials. He encouraged them to attend board meetings and use other channels of communication.

"I believe teachers should work to do whatever they can to improve communications. They should publicize their efforts," said Bartos.

"TEACHERS, just like any other citizens, should have the right to speak to individual board members," said Bartos. "I believe that as a board member I am not only responsible to administrators but to students and teachers and voters who elected me," said the incumbent.

More teachers should attend board meetings, said Bartos. "I'm not going to fight for the teachers if they are not there."

Bartos, an associate professor of English at Harper College in Palatine, said, "If teachers at Dist. 207 are not satisfied with the negotiations process and the outcome of negotiations this year, then I foresee increased teacher militancy. If teachers do not become militant I believe they will become apathetic, which is far worse."

Bartos voted against the majority of the board last winter when a request for a student smoking lounge was turned down. He said he is opposed to a smoking lounge but does not approve of the schools' policy of suspending students for smoking or carrying cigarettes. He requested that the administration revise the policy.

"I AM a populist and I am opposed to any sort of elitism. I believe that not allowing some people to smoke and permitting other people to smoke is elitism," said Bartos. The rule should apply to teachers and administrators as well as students, he said. "I do still question the legality of the policy passed by the board that enjoins students from carrying cigarettes on their person," he said.

A 19-year-old former student attempted to file nominating petitions for the school board this year but was refused because state law says candidates must be 21 years old. "I believe that there must be other qualifications for serving in any public office other than age," such as maturity and experience, said Bartos.

Bartos encouraged students to voice their grievances but said channels of communication at the school are ineffective. "All student councils should be abolished because they are worthless. I would much rather see a town hall meeting concept where the administration would face the student body to discuss

Three terms of three years each are open on the Maine Township High School Dist. 207 board of education this year. Four candidates have filed for the positions. Three are incumbents.

Polls will be open Saturday, April 14, from noon to 7:30 p.m. at all elementary schools in Maine Township. Voters will be able to cast their ballots for candidates running for the East Maine Elementary School Dist. 63, Des Plaines Elementary School Dist. 62, Oakton Community College and Dist. 207 boards of education.

student concerns on a bi-monthly basis." ACADEMIC programs at Dist. 207 "are the finest in the country," said Bartos. "The traditional orientation is in line with my own philosophy, however, I would like to see more innovation in areas such as English and social studies," he said.

The organizational chart of district administrators should be revised, said Bartos. "I believe we have too many department chairmen and we spend too much money on department chairmen. I would like to see department chairmen held more accountable," he said.

Bartos, 42, of 3122 Stillwell, Des Plaines, joined the board in 1970. He attended DePaul University, Northwestern University, and Nova University in Florida and has two master's degrees, a doctorate degree and is now working on a doctorate degree in education. He is married and has seven children.

"I enjoy everything about being a board member. I'm interested in the schools and I feel I have a contribution to make," said Bartos.

Thomas Crites

'Strong relationship between teachers, administrators has been asset to system'

Thomas Crites, 53, of 301 Parkview Rd., Glenview, is running for his first three-year term on the Dist. 207 board this year. He lives in the portion of Glenview Elementary School Dist. 34 that sends its graduates to Maine North High School.

Teachers should have a voice in education where they have "professional competence," said Crites. "I believe teachers should stand for and give expression to the things they believe in. I'm very sympathetic to teachers."

"One of the strong things in our school system has been the relationship between teachers and administrators," said Crites. When the referendum to increase tax revenue to Dist. 207 failed a few years ago, everyone had to make financial sacrifices. The teacher "took a very adult view" to a "mutual problem," he said.

Crites agrees with the school board that teachers should not be allowed to sit on the board during meetings. "The board is an arm of the electorate, representing the community in the school system. Anything that comes through the school should come through the administration," he said.

STUDENTS SHOULD not have a smoking lounge in the school, said Crites. The evidence that smoking causes heart disease is "so great," said Crites, "that it would be very improper for the board to approve a facility that is injurious to the health of the children. I don't believe smoking improves education" and education is the board's function, he said.

Crites is skeptical about allowing an 18-year-old to become a candidate for the school board. "I believe with age comes a measure of maturity. Students lead a rather cloistered or protected life," he said, and usually don't have the experience necessary to run a school. The school board is like "big business," he said, "it requires thoughtful consideration based on experience."

Academic programs at Dist. 207 are excellent, said Crites. "Look at what happens to the students after they leave," he said, indicating that they are very successful in college. The district has had the lowest dropout rate in the nation, said Crites. "They must be offering the students something."

Stories by Katherine Boyce

CRITES THINKS the high schools may be placing too much emphasis on vocational training. He favors a two-year program in vocational training following high school as opposed to teaching job skills within the Dist. 207 program. "We rush into vocational training," said Crites. "What business is looking for is someone who can think."

Crites also said textbooks should be geared to the reading level of the student. "We're graduating children who don't know how to read."

The student should be taught how to read, know numbers and gain "a broader understanding of his heritage." The Threshold program at Maine North, which helps underprivileged students adjust to high school, is a step in the right direction, said Crites. "The district has taken the right attitude."

The budget at Dist. 207 should be balanced, said Crites. "It's going to be tight. Inflation has taken its toll." When it is time to complete Maine North, adding an auditorium and athletic fields, "we will have to ask for a referendum," he said, because the school can't be completed out of money now in the budget.

CRITES, WHO WAS endorsed by the East Maine School Caucus, says he approves of the caucus method of selecting candidates, but added that the caucus should endorse as many candidates as are qualified for the position, no matter how many vacancies are open on the board.

"I have a great interest in education and I feel I should get involved in the school system," said Crites. He was the first president of the fine arts boosters and a member of the athletic boosters, both at Maine North.

Crites is a sales representative for Conso Products and attended Wittenberg University. He is married and has four children.

Leonard Grazian

'Teachers shouldn't sit on the board. They have other means of communication'

Communications between board members, administrators, teachers and students is good at Dist. 207, said Leonard Grazian, incumbent board member running for reelection this year. "I think communications are good, and I think they're open, too."

On the teachers' affiliation with the union, Grazian said "that's for them to decide." He says there is some teacher militancy at Dist. 207 but no more than at other districts in the area.

Teachers should not be allowed to sit on the school board, he said. "They are not board members," said Grazian. Teachers have other channels of communication, such as the superintendent's advisory council and their professional negotiations committee, he said.

School policy separates the responsibilities of teachers and board members, said Grazian. Board members are responsible for policy making and teachers are responsible for instructing students.

GRAZIAN voted against the student smoking lounge. It was "a good decision. Smoking is the number one health hazard in the U.S. today. So important has the recognition of this hazard been, we are required by law to teach the harmful effects of smoking," said Grazian. He said that allowing students to smoke in the building would be hypocritical.

The cigarette-smoking problem is caused by a "small handful" of students who want to infringe on the rights of others, said Grazian. The argument that the smoking rule is unenforceable because students smoke in washrooms is "silly," said the candidate.

Grazian said 18-year-olds should not be allowed to run for the school board. The 18-year-old has spent the past 13 years of his life in the sheltered atmosphere of education and has little experience in the outside world, he said.

Programs at Dist. 207 are "excellent. There is something for everyone in that school system," said Grazian. He said the school offers a diversity of courses but would like to see one more course added, oriental language. It's one of the world's more spoken languages, said Grazian, and "I'd like to see it offered."

THE DISTRICT'S newest high school, Maine North, must be completed, said Grazian. The school now lacks a pool, auditorium and athletic field. Until it is completed "we will be putting students through Maine North that don't have a complete school."

Some residents of Dist. 207 have criticized the board for building Maine North when elementary school enrollments in the area are declining. Enrollment projections show school enrollment at Dist. 207 leveling off at 11,000, said Grazian. The enrollment this year is 11,718. "We would still have the need for four high schools," he said.

On the school budget for the 1973-74 school year, Grazian said, "I'll guarantee one thing. We'll present a balanced budget to the public. This board will not engage in deficit spending." Last year the board eliminated 40 teaching positions to balance their budget. "I do not see any dismissing of teachers this year," he said.

THE CAUCUS system of selecting candidates is "a good idea," said Grazian. It selects and interviews qualified candidates in an atmosphere "devoid of partisan political activity," he said. Grazian attended the caucus this year by the East Maine School Caucus.

Grazian, 48, of 9504 Oliphant, Morton Grove, is married and has eight children. He has his own law office in Chicago, attended the Illinois Institute of Technology and John Marshall Law School and has a degree in chemical engineering and a juris doctorate degree. He is a member of the Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations and chairman of the Morton Grove transportation committee.

"I think that everybody should give some service to their community," he said. "I like this public service because I'm proud of my kids, I'm proud of what my kids have received in education at Dist. 207 and I want my kids to be proud of me."

Roy Makela

'I don't see how professionalism and unionism are compatible...'

Roy Makela is running for his third term on the Dist. 207 board of education. He was endorsed by the East Maine School Caucus for his first two terms but did not receive its endorsement for a third term.

"I believe in the caucus system," said Makela. The caucus interviews qualified candidates and it insures that a school board election doesn't become a "political football," he said.

The unionization of teachers may affect their professionalism, said Makela. "I don't see how professionalism and unionism are compatible," he said, adding that unionized teachers no longer act as individuals.

MAKELA doesn't think teachers should be allowed to sit on the school board. "As citizens they have the right to seek nomination, but as teachers to sit on the board would be a conflict of interest."

Communication between teachers and board members shouldn't be a problem at Dist. 207, said Makela. If they are not getting their questions answered from the administration, then they should go to the school board, he said. The teachers haven't appealed to the board "so I would assume that there are no problems," he said.

Makela said the public hearing on the student smoking issue last January was fair, but he agrees with the majority of the board that "smoking should not be allowed in schools."

Requests by students for more voice in school affairs is healthy, said Makela. "I would be disappointed if students weren't asking for things. I think the day that students don't ask for anything is an indication that they don't care."

THE CANDIDATE said 18-year-olds should not run for the school board. "I don't feel an 18-year-old has anything to contribute to the board that he couldn't contribute as a student representative. The majority of the 18-year-olds don't have the experience to make business decisions," said Makela. As a student "the avenues of communication are open right now."

Programs at Dist. 207 are adequate, said Makela. "I do believe we must stress vocational programs," he said. "We should teach students a salable skill at the high school level." He said that by 1980 only 10 per cent of jobs available will demand a college education.

Academic programs at Dist. 207 are good, said Makela, but "I'm sorry to see that tightening up in our system will affect the quality of courses we are offering." The courses that are the hardest hit by budget cutbacks are foreign language, he said.

"I believe we have a good staff" at Dist. 207, said Makela. The faculty is more consistent than most schools, there aren't a lot of new teachers or old teachers, he said.

THE BOARD has mandated itself this year to balance the budget, said Makela. "Unfortunately we can't do all we would like to do. I hope we don't have to continue reduced expenditures over a period of years," he said. Makela does not anticipate cutbacks in the teaching staff this year but said the district would probably cut down on its recruitment of new teachers.

"I feel I still can be of service" to the school, said the candidate. "It takes at least one year on the board to get used to school operations," he said. Two members of the board have one year of experience, two have two years, one has three years and one has five, said Makela. "I still have the interest of youth and the kids at heart," he said.

Makela, 48, of 8051 Octavia, Niles, is an architect for Consoer and Morgan Architects. He attended Chicago Technical College and is continuing his education at North Park College and the University of Chicago. He has a degree in architectural engineering and is a member of the American Institute of Architects and the Illinois Association of Architects. Makela is married and has two children.

Local man gets 99 years

by JOHN MAES

A Des Plaines man has been sentenced to 99 years in prison for the murder of his 8-year-old stepdaughter, who was found buried in the garden of his former home in Tennessee.

Clyde LaChance, 32, formerly of 727 Dulles Rd., who has been serving two to five years in Illinois State Prison in Joliet for the severe beating of his stepson, Scott, 6, was sentenced last week by a Ducktown, Tenn., judge.

LaChance was extradited to Tennessee to stand trial with his wife, Donna, 29, for the murder of the stepdaughter, Kimberly, who was killed in Jan., 1972, and buried in the garden of the LaChance home in Copper Hills, Tenn.

The couple later moved to Des Plaines where LaChance was arrested in May for the beating and abuse of his stepson. The boy was repeatedly attacked by LaChance, police said, and at one point was made to sit on a hot frying pan.

UNDER QUESTIONING, LaChance was unable to account for the whereabouts of his stepdaughter. He broke down and confessed to her murder to Des Plaines Det. Herb Volberding.

The body was unearthed by Polk County, Tenn., authorities using directions given by LaChance. The couple was later indicted for the girl's murder.

In the trial last week, LaChance was found guilty and sentenced to 99 years and one day in prison. He will serve the sentence in a Tennessee prison after completing the two to five-year term in Joliet for the beating of his stepson.

His wife was found innocent of the murder charge but faces additional charges of child abuse by neglect brought against her in Tennessee.

Both Volberding and Det. Al Freitag of Des Plaines testified at the trial in Ducktown after defense attorneys asked the judge not to admit LaChance's murder confession as evidence because LaChance was not informed of his constitutional rights beforehand.

Volberding told the court that LaChance had been told of his right to remain silent under questioning on four occasions before he made the confession.

PTA notes

The Cumberland School PTA carnival, "Country Jamboree" will be held Saturday, April 14, at the school, 700 Golf Rd.

The Kiddie Korral, a special section, will offer games for children under eight. The Midway will offer twelve games.

There will be a penny candy stand and a musical cake walk, offering home made cakes and cookies to the winners.

Also included at the carnival will be a soda fountain and popcorn stand; a bakery shop with homemade desserts, and a country kitchen which will offer barbecue, hot dogs, potato chips, coffee, milk and desserts.

A "Pocket Lady" will circulate throughout the Jamboree with treasures in every pocket. The Spook House promises a frightening experience to all who enter there.

The bargain hunter may find treasure at the White Elephant Bazaar. Other exhibits include a gold fish contest and a "Little Theatre," which will show cartoons.

Iroquois Junior High School music department will hold a spring festival, Monday, April 16 at 7:30 p.m., under the direction of Miss Leona Folkers, vocal music; John O'Donnell, orchestra; and James Bestman, concert band. The program is presented by the Parent-Teacher Council of Iroquois.

The Iroquois band entered the Northern Division band contest in March and won second place.

Parents and friends are invited. Refreshments will be served following the program.

Memorial services Tuesday

Jehovah's Witnesses in the Des Plaines area will observe the memorial of Christ's death Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Des Plaines Kingdom Hall, 334 S. Mount Prospect Rd.

The memorial sermon will be given by Overseer Sorensen, who will outline the significance of Christ's death and analyze why Jesus commanded his followers at Luke 22:19 to hold the sacred evening meal or supper that he then set up.

Sales tax redistribution bill voted down in State House

by BOB LAHEY
SPRINGFIELD — An Illinois House committee yesterday voted down a bill aimed at sharing the sales tax wealth from giant shopping centers among all cities and villages.

Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, was the object of intense lobbying pressure by suburban officials. Several northwest suburban mayors were here yesterday to express their opposition to the bill which, as one legislator said, "would take the money from the towns where the problems are and put it out with the pigs and cows."

more equitable formula, Schlickman told the committee. However, he said changes proposed in the bill would have a "convulsive effect" on communities that depend on sales tax revenue.

money from sales tax for services to these areas, according to their testimony. Meyer told the committee that in Rolling Meadows sales tax revenue totals $1.2 million coming mostly from industries which the village has labored to attract in order to build its tax base.

bill, Rolling Meadows' sales tax revenue would have plunged from $1.3 million to $612,000. In Des Plaines, the drop would be from $2.1 million to $1.4 million; Elk Grove would go according to a partial estimate, from $1.1 million to $661,000, according to figures given to the committee.

Village moving step closer to paramedic care

Firemen with emergency medical training will be assigned to two ambulances in Elk Grove Village starting the middle of next month bringing the village one step closer to an emergency paramedic care program.

step before becoming a paramedic. Paramedics and technicians work together on emergency treatment teams. ALTHOUGH STILL enrolled in the EMT course, Firefighters Bernie Goss, Greg Rennack and James Kemp have passed the final exam, and they are already starting their paramedic training while simultaneously finishing the EMT program.

FOR SEVEN YEARS now, Carol Torgersen has guarded the intersection of Clearmont Drive and Ridge Avenue near Clearmont School. During that time, no child has been hurt in a traffic accident. The school was recently honored by the Chicago Motor Club for its outstanding safety record.

"THEY DON'T stop at the stop sign or they drive too fast. They get mad because they have to stop. I've gotten chewed out a few times. They always say they are going to report me, but I've never gotten any complaints," said Mrs. Torgersen.

Community Service may get trailer

Elk Grove Village Community Service may get another mobile home within 10 days, according to Charles Willis, village manager.

Willis said the village has title to the trailer, but a site has not been arranged. Two sites being considered are the original location, next to the Landmeier Fire Station, or a new spot adjacent to the Community Service farmhouse on Blesterfield Road.

Community Service did have use of a trailer until the end of last year. The trailer had been given to the village by the owner of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park in exchange for fire protection.

The trailer housed the Community Service "hotline" and the youth counselors' offices. When the owner of the park died, the village and the new owners could not reach an agreement on the continued use of the trailer in exchange for fire protection.

The new owners removed the trailer, which was next to the Landmeier Fire Station; the "hotline" was transferred to the Bridge, a Palatine Township youth agency; the Community Service counselors moved their offices to the farmhouse; and the trailer park was without fire protection.

AFTER THREE weeks without fire protection, the trailer park owners and the village reached a new agreement — fire protection would be restored for a fee and title to a trailer.

Willis said the trailer is now at the trailer park and will remain there until a site is arranged.

George Spees, village trustee and member of the Community Service board of directors, said that once the trailer is brought into the village, it will be used for the new Community Service women's committee.

The committee is planning to publish a monthly newsletter for women and organize other activities of interest to women in the village.

Bowling party Saturday

Elk Grove Village Athletic Association candlelight Scotch doubles bowling party will be at 10:15 p.m. Saturday at Elk Grove Bowl, Arlington Heights and Higgins roads.

A chicken buffet will be served after the bowling.

Tickets are $10 per couple and reservations can be made by calling Anetia Kowalski, 437-0847.

The association will have its general meetings at 8 p.m. the first Friday of each month, at the Elk Grove Village Public Library, 101 Kennedy Blvd.

All coaches, managers, and parents are invited to the general meetings.

Care advised in marking ballot

"As village and school board elections days approach, people need to be reminded what the correct way to mark a paper ballot is," said Dick English, who lost election to the Schaumburg Township Supervisors office by 84 votes.

English urged voters to acquaint themselves with the ballot before election day.

"When a voter takes the ballot to go to the polling place and then loses his vote because he writes yes or places a check mark after his candidates name instead of an X, it's bad for him and for the candidate of his choice."

"I urge all voters to find out the correct way to mark a ballot and make their village and school board vote, which will both be counted on paper ballots, a vote that counts," said English.

201 residents fail to vote for township supervisor

by JERRY THOMAS

Two hundred and one voters who went to the polls in the April 3, Schaumburg Township election could have made a difference in the supervisor's race if they had decided to vote.

Vern Laubenstein, incumbent victor in the race won by only 84 votes, results of the official canvass showed.

There were 2,788 persons who came to the polls but only 2,434 indicated their preference for the top spot on the ballot. Another 153 ballots were declared spoiled by election judges because they were improperly marked.

Laubenstein received 1,259 votes and Dick English, his opponent, had 1,175.

English said he can't understand how 201 voters would go to the polls and not choose a candidate for the top spot.

"I do not at this time challenge the vote but may reconsider this decision," he added.

"I don't know if I can accept the fact that people went to the polls and didn't vote for a top spot," said English.

English said poll watchers in precinct 39 report check marks for "yes" on ballots discarded by judges as defective. "In this precinct, 17 ballots were not counted because they were marked wrong and since the township has 40 precincts, it seemed right that 153 could be marked wrong," he said.

"However, it's wrong that 153 people lost their vote because they didn't know how to mark a ballot correctly," he said. "But, it's the more than 200 votes not accounted for that bother me even more," said English.

Township Clerk Kay Wojcik, said it is not unusual for people to vote for some posts and not all. In a paper ballot election, there are usually many defective ballots, she added.

time to wait for the children to cross the street.

Mrs. Torgersen said she became a crossing guard because she likes to be outside and she likes to work with children.

She had a long wait before she could become a crossing guard. For several years, the Elk Grove Village Police Department refused her application, saying she lived too far from the school.

Her house is at 226 Walnut Ln., about five blocks away.

"FINALLY THEY said I could have the job," she said.

Being a crossing guard places unusual demands on a person's time. Technically, the job is part-time because the guard is only on duty for a few hours a day. But the off-duty time is not long enough to do much except to wait for the next hour on the post.

"You have no chance to go any place," said Mrs. Torgersen. "Maybe you can do your grocery shopping, but that's about all."

Over the years, Mrs. Torgersen has gotten to know many of the children. Occasionally, a child who was at Clearmont years ago comes by to talk to her. "They recognize me, even if I don't know them."

At Christmas the children often give her presents and at Valentine's day they have cards for her.

SHE SAID SHE does not like to report children who do not observe safety rules, but she makes a report if the child does something dangerous, like running out in the middle of the street.

In her seven years as a crossing guard, Mrs. Torgersen has worked under every imaginable weather condition. She said she has gotten immune to the weather and does not even have any special tricks for staying warm on the cold days. "You just get dressed for it," she said.

Although she likes her work, this could be Mrs. Torgersen's last year as a crossing guard. She said the police department considers crossing guards part-time employees, except when it comes time to give pay raises. "Then we are told we weren't anything and we didn't get a raise," she said.

If the pay is not raised next year, she said she may quit.

Full-time planner, transit system necessary here, incumbent insists

by CAROL RHYNE

Elk Grove Village Trustee George Spees says he will continue to maintain exemplary village services with no increase in the tax rate if he is reelected to a four-year trustee term on April 17.

Spees, 39, of 140 Crest Ave., was elected trustee for two years in April, 1971. He has lived in the village for 11 years and is employed as a development engineer with Eureka X-Ray Tube Corp., Chicago.

Long-range planning is required to make the village the "best in the world," and a full-time professional planner is "absolutely" necessary, he said. "I favor a full-time village planner on the payroll, reporting to the village manager and assisting the plan commission."

SPEES SAID HE feels the master plan for the village was excellent when passed, but it must be constantly reviewed and updated. He said a professional planner would help accomplish this task.

There is a need for a transportation system in the village, and Spees said he is working on a solution to the problem as a member of the trustees' transportation committee. At this time the committee does not have a suggestion for implementation of a transportation syshoused in an area they can afford and near a shopping center, Spees said. He said the senior citizens' project south of the Grove shopping center on Arlington Heights Road will provide adequate apartments for a reasonable amount of money.

As far as low and moderate-income housing is concerned, the village housing commission has detailed a report showing the need for such housing, he said. "Consequently, I feel the need is there and the board must work in conjunction with other boards and neighboring villages to come up with a comprehensive master plan for housing to incorporate low and moderate-income units as required."

Spees said low and moderate-income housing is needed because young people and newly married couples whose parents reside in the village find they cannot live here because of costs.

For four-year term: incumbent

Ted Staddler

Ted Staddler

Elk Grove Village needs a transportation system for senior citizens, commuters and shoppers, Trustee Ted Staddler said in relating his plans for the village if he is reelected to a four-year trustee term.

Staddler, 46, of 1032 Brantwood Ave., said a good transportation plan also would reduce the need for families to own a second car thus improving their economic position and helping to relieve environmental problems caused by automobiles. He suggested a commuter bus run between village shopping centers and train stations in Itasca and Arlington Heights.

There needs to be more communication between the residents and the village officials, he said. Speakers' bureau, consisting of elected officials and department heads, could talk to local groups to keep them informed.

STADDLER is interested in protecting the environment, including stopping pollution from plants in the industrial park and sound from O'Hare Airport. "We can't walk away from the jet noise pollution just because it is a big problem. There are hundreds of ways to attack this problem, and we should try every one until we hit on a solution," he said.

The question of open land also is an environmental problem, and Staddler said this is an area for good planning.

"We presently have a master plan to give guidance for the development of Elk Grove, and this plan should be altered or changed when the proposal will be an asset to Elk Grove and not on the whim of any builder or developer," he said.

Staddler said he did not feel a full-time professional planner is needed. The plan commission and village department heads approach the planning in a professional manner, in his view.

He said when a developer wishes to build in the village, he should prove to the plan commission and trustees his project is good for the village. He said he is not necessarily in favor of all single-family housing in the village. "If a development is good for the people, the village should be able to provide the municipal services for it."

THE VILLAGE budget committee is considering enacting a health program, and Staddler said he favors hiring someone to head a health department. He said this individual could be in charge of the community blood donor program and the health inspections.

"We definitely need to continue to improve our mental health services to the community," he said. Staddler said mental health funding is being cut by the federal government, but he feels these services are needed.

Regarding flood control, Staddler said the problem should be approached on an area wide basis, with the cooperation of neighboring municipalities. However, he said if other groups refuse to act, the Five candidates are running for three four-year trustee seats and two are seeking a two-year trusteeship in the April 17 Elk Grove Village election.

Seeking four-year terms are incumbents Nanci Vanderweel, George Spees and Ted Staddler, and hopefuls Kevin McCarthy and Melvin Bytnar. McCarthy, 19, is the youngest person ever to seek village office.

Michael Tosto and Alvin Krasnow are running for the single two-year seat.

The following are the candidates' views on issues and their plans, if elected. The interview with Spees appears on Page 3.

village should proceed with concrete action.

"I am for seeing that the taxpayers get the best return for their dollar," Staddler said. He said this means constantly upgrading the police, fire and water and streets departments, which he said were already good.

He said employees in the street department could be trained to use the spraying equipment the village plans to buy to fight mosquitoes. In the fire department, paramedic services (emergency medical care) are being added, and Staddler said this was another place training would improve service to the residents.

Staddler expressed interest in the paramedic program while on the plan commission. "I felt a community growing as fast as Elk Grove Village should push ahead and look at new ways of doing things. I personally feel my actions helped to bring the paramedic program to the village."

Nanci Vanderweel

Nanci Vanderweel

Elk Grove Village should move cautiously and give a great deal of thought to the ratio of multi-family to single-family housing in all unannexed areas, Trustee Nanci Vanderweel said in explaining her position in the April 17 campaign. She is seeking a four-year trustee term.

Mrs. Vanderweel, 36, of 215 Fleetwood Ln., said she felt a community planner could be useful at times and said the plan commission has been given permission to hire one as a consultant for the proposed Devon-53 housing project.

"It has been said we are not following the 'Master Plan' for the village," Mrs. Vanderweel said. She disagreed with this because the plan stated that the land use policies should be established by the citizens of the village and changed at times. She contends this is exactly what was being done.

MRS. VANDERWEEL, a nine-year resident of the village, was elected to a two-year term on the Board of Trustees in 1971. She is chairwoman of the personnel and transportation committees of the board and is a member of the judiciary, planning and zoning committee.

Speaking of the present board, she said, "This board has always had an open-door policy. I have always supported it and will continue to do so. I feel the concerns of the residents and my ability to be responsive to them have been demonstrated in the two years I have served."

She praised the local government, saying the village residents enjoy municipal services not enjoyed in all communities, even those communities along the North Shore where taxes are much higher.

"Our residential streets are plowed in winter, and our salting program is among the best. We have long recognized the fire and police departments among the best. We have long recognized an efficient and effective water department," she said, adding some 50 miles of village streets were resurfaced in the last two years.

"I am running for office because I have the time and concern necessary to contribute to the board and the community," she said. "Based on the knowledge and experience I have acquired in the last two years, along with accomplishments, I feel I can best serve the village as a trustee."

SHE CITED among her contributions to the village the community blood assurance program, the emergency medical care program (soon to be enacted), senior citizen housing, reduced vehicle sticker rates to senior citizens, the parental responsibility law and a new zoning ordinance and building code. She said she has attended all village board meetings and assigned committee meetings since her election.

Mrs. Vanderweel said she is again running as an independent. "I have never considered myself anything but independent, and I have never compromised my integrity as an official of the village."

Stories by

As community blood program coordinator, Mrs. Vanderweel said she is committed to seeing the program come under the structure of a new community health program. The village budget committee currently is considering hiring a community health director.

"Flood control should be the top priority now," Mrs. Vanderweel said in speaking of goals for the future. Last fall, residents in the Shadywood Lane and other parts of the village were subject to constant threat of flooding during rainstorms.

"Transportation needs (of the village) are evident, and finding a system to move people within the village and/or commuter movement and/or to Woodfield (shopping center) are under consideration by the transportation committee and under review as a budget item," she said. "I feel confident we will have a transportation system in Elk Grove Village for at least internal movement soon."

She said some ways the village federal revenue sharing money could be used are for transportation and community health.

For four-year term: newcomer

Kevin McCarthy

Kevin McCarthy

A "stockholders' report" should be issued at least every quarter to tell Elk Grove Village residents what is being done and what is planned for the near future, Kevin McCarthy said in explaining his campaign for a four-year trustee seat.

McCarthy, 19, of 917 Ridge Ct., is the youngest resident ever to seek village office. He said he was running because "this is the town I grew up in and I am very concerned with the future of the village."

He is a premedical student majoring in political science at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle Campus. As a student, McCarthy said he has the opportunity to schedule his education around a position as village trustee. He has said he enjoys politics and feels he can bring a new point of view to the board.

BESIDES the quarterly newsletter, he said communication in the village could be improved by formally recognizing the Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce at village board meetings and giving its representative a seat with the trustees, but no vote.

McCarthy said he approved of a similar arrangement for someone to represent the employees in the industrial park. "There's a large number of people working in the industrial park, and their ideas and thoughts should not be ignored."

On the subject of revenue sharing, McCarthy said the federal funds should be returned in the form of lower taxes or spent constructively on the village. He said the majority of people he talked to want it spent on the village.

McCarthy said his basic priorities are to fund any programs losing federal funding because of cutbacks. He said on an area-wide basis this means support for the Northwest Opportunity Center.

"My second priority is programs that would benefit the entire village," McCarthy said. He said this includes such items as hiring a planner, flood control and mosquito abatement.

PROGRAMS to help specific parts of town or interest groups are in McCarthy's third guideline. This includes specific measures to control flooding along Salt Creek and the Shadywood Lane area of town, he said.

"We're going to have to plan the village's growth, and we should be thinking 20 to 30 years in advance right now," McCarthy said. He advised hiring a professional land planner to supply expertise on future developments and annexations.

"We should enlarge the scope of planning, not just to involve such things as zoning and compatible land use, but to include impact on schools, hospitals and recreational facilities in the area and how the development will actually affect the people," he said.

Public transportation is needed desperately in the village, and the need will become greater as the village grows and its people get older, McCarthy said.

"I'M IN FAVOR of a regional mass transit system, and I think we should combine with other towns to get a unified system," he said. "As for an interim solution, transportation between the residential section and the shopping centers both in and out of the village would be good. Maybe we could get a connection with the CTA (Chicago Transit Authority) at Jefferson Park for people coming into the industrial park to work and people in the village going to Chicago."

McCarthy, who has lived in the village 12 years, said he sees the village growing rapidly in the next 10 years, and a city council government may be beneficial because it can grow with the village. It would make communication easier between the elected official and the people he represents because the councilman would be responsible to a smaller area, he said.

An increase in manpower and equipment for Elk Grove Village police and fire departments is one improvement of village services Melvin Bytnar is supporting in his campaign for a four-year trustee seat.

Bytnar, 39, of 236 Wellington Ave., said his plans to expand services include street sweeping on a regular basis and effective mosquito abatement.

"We are in for another season of what I like to call 'patio piracy' by these little bandits, and I am calling for the abolition of the mosquito abatement district on the basis on their past performance," Bytnar said. He said the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District has failed to reduce the mosquito problem, and the village could do a better job.

CONCERNING future development of the village, Bytnar said the next few years will be critically important in determining what the balance of the village population will be in terms of multi-family and single-family units. He said he takes a "flexible conservative" view on adding high rises, but is willing to be shown the value of going toward more planned developments.

"WE MUST KEEP in mind the need to retain our village balance and conserve our resources," he said. Some limiting factors in the number of multi-family units are the village's quota of Lake Michigan water, drainage, solid waste and sewage disposal and ability to provide police protection.

Melvin Bytnar

Melvin Bytnar

Bytnar said he recognizes a need for mass transportation in Elk Grove Village. "My choice would be a single, subsidized private enterprise (operating in the village)," he said.

BYTNAR, who has lived in the village nearly five years, said he is running for trustee because he feels it is time for a change. "The present Board of Trustees has carried the burden of government long enough. It is time they received some help."

He also said he was running because he felt it was every citizen's duty to contribute to the community, and with his job with an insurance company, he had the time to devote to the position. "You may laugh and think I'm square, but I've been brought up to believe I am responsible for my fellow man's well-being."

Running as an independent, Bytnar said he was unencumbered by any ties or obligations. "Being civic minded, I know something about how the village has operated in the past. Being a taxpayer, I take a deep personal interest in the village and its future as a place to live and work."

Elk Grove Village is scheduled to receive some $250,000 in federal revenue sharing funds, and Bytnar said part of the money could be used to expand fire and police protection by the one-time purchase of needed equipment and possibly increase manpower. He said the money should not be used for pay raises because once the funds run out, the village couldn't maintain the increases in its budget. He added the money could go for tax relief to the residents.

"I AM DEEPLY concerned about the direction the village is heading," Bytnar said. "The direction the village should take is one of progressive, sensible, systematic development in keeping with the criteria for land use indicated by the comprehensive master plan."

He said intensive planning also was needed in the industrial park with an emphasis on the ecological impact.

Bytnar said he was glad to see the village moving toward getting a senior citizens development south of the Grove shopping center on Arlington Heights Road. "I heartily endorse the need for senior citizen housing, and I would seek to sponsor special benefits for retired people in the village," he said.

For two-year term:

Alvin Krasnow

Alvin Krasnow

Elk Grove Village trustee candidate Alvin Krasnow said he favors multi-family housing and planned unit development as long as multi-family units are built "in good taste and meet all specifications of the village." He is running for a two-year trustee seat.

Krasnow, 46, of 557 Lowestoft Ln., said he did not want to see multi-family dwellings throughout the village in a "checkerboard effect." He suggested a new planning map be drawn up with the help of a professional consultant. "Changing times and needs of people make the present plan out of date," he said.

With four years experience on the village plan commission, Krasnow feels he could be helpful in future planning and zoning by serving on the village board. He said he took an active part in the formation and organization of the original volunteer fire department and served with it from 1960-67. He and his family have lived in the village since 1959.

KRASNOW was defeated in the trustee race in 1969 and blames his loss on lack of experience in village government. "Instead of sitting on my hands after the defeat, I decided to become more involved in village government and run again for trustee later. I served four years on the plan commission, and now I'm ready to run again for trustee."

"This campaign is a campaign without any issues because the village has been run so well in the past," he said. "We have an excellent fire and police department, and the water and sewer department is one of the best." Krasnow said he was not fighting with any of the incumbents because he is seeking an empty chair. (No incumbent is running for a two-year term.)

Krasnow said he is unfamiliar with the revenue sharing laws, but he would become more informed as to how and where the funds may and may not be used if he is elected. He does feel the money should be used on immediate items instead of saving the funds for the future.

PUBLIC transportation is definitely needed in the village, and a mini-bus could provide the service that is required for people to get around, Krasnow said. As areas of possible service, he mentioned routes to the village shopping centers, the theater and possibly Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

"I want to see a public transportation system at a nominal cost to the village and its citizens," Krasnow said. He suggested a 10 or 15-cent fare but added that it all depends on the budget.

In the area of housing, Krasnow said he favors senior citizen housing and feels the project planned south of the Grove Shopping Center on Arlington Heights Road is great. However, he added, not knowing the needs of the village for this type of housing, he feels the one development is enough for the present time.

"I DO NOT favor low and moderate-income housing in the village, only for the reason that property (cost) in the village and its proximity are prohibitive, as well as the construction costs," he said. Krasnow said he has never been involved in planning low and moderate-income housing and would want to study the housing programs and federal subsidies before committing himself.

Krasnow joined the Elk Grove Village volunteer fire department in 1960 and is one of its original directors and a charter member of the village firemen's association. He resigned from the fire department in 1967 as a volunteer lieutenant.

"I have 25 years of construction experience as a foreman and superintendent in building highways, bridges, utility lines and sewer projects that could be valuable to the village," Michael Tosto said concerning his background for the two-year trustee seat in the Elk Grove Village election.

Tosto, 45, of 56 Keswick Rd., said since 14 per cent of the corporate budget goes to the street department, his construction knowledge would be an asset to the village.

"I also have served nine years on the Elk Grove Village fire department as a lieutenant and firefighter. Since 31 per cent of the corporate budget goes to the fire department, my knowledge and experience in this field would be an asset to the board of trustees," he said.

TOSTO SAID that with his professional background and experience with the fire department, he could directly relate to more than 50 per cent of the total village budget.

A public transportation system to enable people to get to trains, the industrial areas and shopping is needed, he said. "I feel a couple of shuttle buses to train stations at peak hours could then be used for shopping center routes during the off hours."

Tosto said he has made no commitment for or against the controversial Devon-53 housing project planned near Devon Avenue and J. Rte. 53 and is keeping an open mind until more facts are brought out at public hearings.

In general, however, he said apartment development should be kept to a minimum to avoid the overcrowding major cities have today. "Most people have moved to our village to get away from the hustle and bustle of the city," he said.

"I also do not want to see our current flood problems made worse. It is my aim to preserve our natural resources for future generations to the best of my ability."

TOSTO DOES not believe the village needs a full time planner because the village already has a master plan.

Concerning the industrial park, Tosto said each company that wants to build a plant should be considered on its own merits, to avoid problems. "We have to be careful what types of companies come in so we won't have plants that are undesirable and use excessive amounts of water or dump large amounts of sewage."

Federal revenue sharing funds could be used for flood control, community services and public transportation, Tosto said. He suggested it would help the entire village to spend money to build covered drainage ditches so they won't attract litter and mosquitoes.

However the money is spent, Tosto said the residents should be consulted, possibly with a questionnaire.

Palatine may pay less for Bridge in coming year

Palatine Township may wind up paying less money this year for its pet project. The Bridge youth services bureau, than it did last year.

$4,000 to fight abuse of booze

The Palatine Jaycees have received a $4,000 grant to conduct a model program alerting the public to the abuse of alcohol.

Earlier, the local chapter was given a $500 grant from the U.S. Jaycees for "Operation Threshold."

When the initial grant was announced, the Jaycees said they would have to cut considerably the alcohol abuse program they had been planning.

NOW, HOWEVER, with the latest grant, Larry Johnson, coordinator of eration Threshold," said the program would be expanded to include more seminars and public awareness campaigns.

The idea behind the program, Lester said, is "to promote, through education, a more responsible attitude about alcohol, alcohol abuse and alcoholism, and to understand that alcoholism is a treatable disease."

The local campaign will get under way with a survey later this month to measure the extent of knowledge the public has about alcoholism.

Funds for the program have been made available to the U.S. Jaycees through the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, an agency of the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Details of Palatine Township's role in The Bridge for the coming year were part of last night's annual town meeting at Sanborn School in Palatine.

To date, only Schaumburg Township has officially promised $10,000. But Jean Fiesler, a representative of The Bridge, who made a presentation to the Elk Grove Township officials last night, said "it looks very favorable" that that governmental body will come through with another $10,000.

if all three townships agree to the funding, Palatine Township's share will be down some $7,000 from this year's budget of $59,000.

But the potential reduction in Palatine Township's share isn't enough to satisfy members of the local League of Women Voters. They say that township taxpayers should only be supporting The Bridge in proportion to the total area served.

Gwendolyn Rowe, an LWV member, asked township auditors to reconsider the township's amount of Bridge funding, in order to reduce it to $23,288 for next year.

That figure is 28.4 per cent of the 1973-74 budget for The Bridge. And Palatine Township is only 28.4 per cent of the total area served by the agency, Mrs. Rowe said.

The disproportionate share for Palatine Township "has lessened the feeling of responsibility on the part of other townships," Mrs. Rowe said.

Current township auditor Richard Bayer responded that The Bridge was the one project that gave him the most pride during his tenure as township auditor for the past eight years.

"I fully agree that it should be on a fair-share basis. But we had to do this to show what could be done," Bayer told the group of some 45 people at the town meeting.

Presentations from four other proposed or existing social programs were also given, as representatives asked for a share of Palatine Township's $48,750 revenue sharing for 1972.

READING IS A LITTLE more fun when you can find some privacy, as Pat Smith and daughter Carrie discover in the new study carrels at the Palatine Public Library. The carrels were installed just in time for National Library Week, in progress now. Special tours and coffee and rolls are available each morning this week at the library, in honor of the occasion. The new carrels will eventually be moved into the new library whenever it is constructed. The library is at 149 N. Brockway St.

Junior high transfer postponed

The transfer of students from Winston Park School to Palatine Hills Junior High School in Palatine has been postponed two weeks until May 1 because of bad weather.

Palatine Hills Junior High School is ready for occupancy but because of inclement weather it has been impossible to put down the gravel for driveways and parking lots, according to Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

The tentative plan now is to move furniture and equipment from Winston Park School in Palatine to Palatine Hills Junior High School during the week of April 23 when the students are out of school for spring vacation. The teachers would then report to the new school on April 30 and the students would report on May 1.

IF THE WEATHER necessitates a second postponement, Kiszka said parents would be notified on April 30 through the PTA emergency telephone chain.

There will be 14 buses transporting students to the newly constructed school on Smith Street when it opens. A plan to drop the students off on Smith Street and build a walk out of wooden planks to the school entrance was dropped because of the liability to the district and the remaining problem with teacher parking.

The soil has already been graded and compacted and the gravel will be poured and leveled when it is possible for the heavy equipment to get in, said Kiszka. The gravel will form the foundation for the blacktopping scheduled to be completed this summer.

District officials had been hopeful the transfer of students could be made in April so extensive state required renovation.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The administration proposed raising the $1.60 per hour minimum wage to $2.30 over three years, a move one House Republican described as a compromise in the wage fight that stalemated the last Congress.

President Nixon asked Congress to give him an unprecedented free hand in the field of trade, including increased exchanges with Communist nations and the power to retaliate against countries discriminating against U.S. exports.

New Orleans Police Superintendent Clarence B. Giarrusso disclosed that six policemen wounded in the January gun battle at the Howard Johnson's motel were shot by police.

Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., has introduced legislation which would repeal the new-instituted taxpayers' $1 checkoff to finance presidential elections.

Many mothers around the country took their children to work yesterday as part of a protest of cutbacks in federally-funded day care centers.

The House sustained President Nixon's veto of a rural water and sewer grant program, giving him the second major victory in a week in his fight with Congress over federal spending priorities.

The state

The Illinois House yesterday passed a bill making the death sentence mandatory in certain murder cases despite claims it is "cruel and unusual punishment."

Once a month, for six hours, a good conduct inmate at any Department of Corrections penal institution could visit privately with his family under a bill passed by the Illinois House.

Rep. Bruce Gougias, D-Chicago, accused R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of cheating the state out of millions of tax dollars by selling little cigars which, he said, are cigarettes in disguise.

The world

A British charter airliner carrying 144 persons to a Swiss fair, crashed into a snow-covered hillside outside Basel, Switzerland, killing 104 persons.

An Israeli commando strike into the heart of Beirut, that killed three top Arab guerrilla leaders, was hailed as a "marvelous" operation by Prime Minister Golda Meir.

British, Japanese and Israeli embassies ordered dependents out of Cambodia as Communists moved to within 15 miles of Phnom Penh. A major attack is expected Friday.

Construction to begin in fall

Navy to build housing on Nike site

The U.S. Navy reportedly has received a congressional appropriation to build 140 housing units for Navy personnel and dependents at the Arlington Heights Nike Base.

Construction of the housing will probably begin this fall, according to Lt. Cmdr. Karl Mueller, deputy public works officer at the Goenview Naval Air Station, who yesterday confirmed that money for the housing has been voted by Congress. Mueller did not know how much money was approved for the project.

Approval of the housing came over the objections of the Arlington Heights Park District and village officials who had hoped to acquire the entire 137-acre Nike base for a regional park.

Yesterday, 13 acres of the base were transferred to the park district. This land, which had been declared surplus to the military, is separate from the 51 acres which the Navy owns at the base.

Tom Thornton, director of parks and recreation for the district, expressed surprise yesterday at what he called the "sad news." He said he was especially dismayed because he had received written assurance from the Navy that no housing would be built without public hearings and consultation with local officials.

"I don't know if anything else can be done," he said. "I'm surprised and disappointed. Both Senators Percy and Stevenson were going to work for the park."

Citing the opposition of park and village officials, as well as homeowners in the area, Thornton said he expected the Navy was "in for a good battle" over the housing plans.

MUELLER SAID that no plans or contracts for the housing have been awarded. He said the units probably would take up about 41 of the Navy's 51 acres.

The Navy land, which lies in Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15, is a horseshoe-shaped parcel along Central and New Wilke roads at the northwest corner of the base. The projected population of the development is 600, of which 110 would be elementary school-age children.

Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent of Dist. 15, said he has been in contact with Mueller to discuss the impact of the project on the school district, but that no commitment has been made by the Navy for either a cash or land contribution to the district.

"If school impact studies indicate another school is needed, and if the base is the best place to put it, we probably would be in a position to make a contribution," Mueller said.

An authorization bill for the Navy housing passed Congress last July, but officials still had hoped actual funding of the development could be held up.

AT THAT TIME the Navy was reportedly considering two-story, row-type housing of five units per row. The authorization bill limited the average cost of units in the development to $24,000. Mueller said he did not know if this limit was carried through in the appropriations act.

Plans for Navy housing at the Nike Base date to 1965. In 1968, Congress appropriated money for 200 units, but a typhoon on the Pacific Island of Guam diverted funds from the development.

Guards may solve hassle between parks, hotels here

The stationing of guards in swimming pool areas to prevent misbehavior may be used by the Salt Creek Park District in an attempt to reinstate a full swim program at the Arlington Park Towers hotel.

Jim DeVos, director of parks and recreation for the district, said yesterday the move was considered by park board commissioners during a meeting Monday.

The plan was offered as a way to patch up bad feelings between the hotel and the district over the swim program. Last week the hotel told the district it could no longer use the hotel pool for open swim. The same order came from the Howard Johnson hotel due to what management at the hotels called rowdy conduct.

PARK BOARD commissioners expressed surprise at the orders, DeVos said. "They were surprised we were getting this kind of treatment from the Towers. They thought it was wrong and said we should try to work out a working agreement with the hotel management," he said.

The agreement would seek to reinstate open swim time at the hotels, he said. Swimming lessons offered by the district at the hotel are continuing, he added.

The commissioners expressed a desire to compromise with the hotel management before making a move to contact directly the Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the hotel, DeVos said.

"WE WANT to talk to the management," he said. "If it involves putting guards in the pool area to make sure the kids behave, that's what we'll do. We already have guards in the locker room areas."

DeVos said, however, that providing more security of this type would probably increase the cost of the swim program. He estimated two additional guards would cost from $1,000 to $1,500 per season.

Building the district's own swimming pool was also discussed by the board, but commissioners agreed the main problem in this alternative was a location for the pool. "I told them I thought we could build a small indoor pool and attached gym for about $500,000," DeVos said. "The problem is where to put it. We keep coming back to that."

DeVos said a pool for the district might improve programming. "It's a hard thing to program on this (hotel use) basis. I think they (the park board) will be looking to building a pool in the future."

Weather delays pupil transfer

tion work could be started and completed before the opening of school in the fall at Winston Park School.

"WE KNOW AND realize we need every bit of time we can get to complete Winston Park on time," said Kiszka.

Outside foundation work on the west wing of Winston Park School has already been started by the construction firm of Pritscher and Erbach. This wing will be used for practical art classrooms when the renovation is completed.

A new scheduling plan has also been worked out for the school, freeing two classrooms in the west wing so walls can be knocked out and the building extended.

Even with these arrangements, Kiszka estimated the postponement would delay construction work on Winston Park School by three or four days.

Officials are still hopeful Winston Park School will be ready for the opening of the 1973-74 school year. Several alternative student placement plans have been drawn up in the eventuality the school is not ready.

$4,200 bid accepted on garage for parks

A bid of $4,200 from Borden Builders of Palatine for a three-car detached garage was accepted Monday by the Salt Creek Park District Board of Commissioners.

The Borden bid was the lowest of three submitted. Other bidders were Roselle Builders, which requested $5,230 for the project, and Custom Builders, which requested $5,390.

The garage will be built at Rose Park, 530 S. Williams, Palatine, to store park district equipment.

Village receives first '73 federal money

The Village of Palatine this week received its first installment in the 1973 federal revenue sharing program — a check for $29,300.

Village Mgr. Berton G. Braun said the amount was slightly higher than expected. He indicated that if the remaining three checks this year are for the same amount, the village would receive 30 to 35 per cent more than in 1972.

Last year, Palatine received $83,000 in revenue sharing funds.

Village trustees appropriated $45,000 of that sum to purchase a high pressure sewer cleaner, and an additional $45,000 to install a pump in Rössler Lake near the Winston Park subdivision. The $7,000 allocated over the amount of funds available will come from this year's revenue sharing total.

Holy Week services slated at St. John's

Special Holy Week services are scheduled at St. John's United Church of Christ, Algonquin and Roselle roads in unincorporated Palatine Township, beginning Monday.

Services begin at 7:45 p.m. Monday through Friday. A Tuesday evening supper starts at 6:30 p.m., and reservations can be made this week at 358-7620 or 358-1788. Weeknight services are:

Monday, Dialogue at Calvary; Tuesday, Calvary's Gamblers; Wednesday, color film, "I Beheld His Glory"; Maundy Thursday, communion; Good Friday, special choral service.

Easter Sunday begins with communion at 7 a.m., breakfast at 7:45 a.m., and a 10:45 a.m. worship service.

Residents of the area interested in joining can contact Mrs. Greener at 358-2063.

Woman, 68, 'good' after auto crash

A 68-year-old Palatine woman was listed in good condition at Northwest Community Hospital after she suffered multiple fractures in a two-car accident yesterday at the Palatine Plaza and Northwest Highway.

Police said Mrs. Elsie I. Langhoff, of 248 W. Palatine Rd., was leaving the plaza at the west exit, turning west on Northwest Highway. Her car collided with an eastbound auto driven by Joyce E. McIntyre, 30, of 962 Carmel Dr., Palatine, police said.

Mrs. Langhoff will be ticketed for failure to yield the right of way from a private drive, said police.

Local cab company selling out

The barrage of calls for taxicabs in Palatine may soon be answered.

The two owners of a Des Plaines cab company have asked Palatine officials for permission to take over the three licenses now held by A-1 Cab Co. and to add two more cabs.

Mike Singleman and Dick Vana, who operate Martin Cab Co., Des Plaines, are negotiating with Herman and Margaret Philippe to buy A-1 and take over its business.

The prospective buyers said they own a fleet of 15 taxis in Des Plaines, five of which would be in Palatine.

The Philipps have been in business in Palatine for nine years. Mrs. Philippe said yesterday they're interested in selling because "we're tired. We're putting in 20 hours a day, both of us; it's not worth it."

The village is now conducting a background and business check of Singleman and Vana before approving the issuance of business licenses.

At one time, Palatine had three cab companies with a total of nine cabs. The three now operated by A-1 Cab are the only taxis in town.

PRESENTING AN IMPORTANT SEMINAR/LECTURE MIND CONTROL & EXTRA SENSORY PERCEPTION

JOSE SILVA, FOUNDER

Recently, many national publications such as Life, Mademoiselle, Harper's Bazaar, National Observer and Sales Management featured articles about SILVA MIND CONTROL. These articles, along with many others, discuss how thousands of people across the country have learned through MIND CONTROL to use more of their mind and to productively develop the vast hidden potential that lies within every human being. Some of these articles report the amazing results of how MIND CONTROL students have learned to totally relax, improve concentration, memory and health, break bad habits and increase productivity and creativity; and yes — function psychically — by learning to develop and put to practical use the E.S.P. that we all naturally possess.

ALPHA BRAIN WAVE FUNCTION
SILVA MIND CONTROL teaches you how to develop and utilize your potential through control of your Alpha brain wave function. Recent research at various universities throughout the country has revealed some of the phenomenal capabilities of man through proper control of his brain waves. Exploration of this almost unknown continent — the human mind — has been pioneered by a soft-spoken researcher, Jose Silva of the Institute of Psychoneurology in Laredo, Texas.

26 YEARS OF RESEARCH
The Institute of Psychoneurology, under the direction of Jose Silva, began their research in MIND CONTROL in 1944 to see if it was possible to increase an individual's I.Q. factor.

Amazingly, Silva discovered that not only could I.Q. be increased, but a person trained in this technique could even control certain areas of the Autonomic System—heart beat, respiration, blood pressure, etc. The implications of this breakthrough were staggering. In-depth studies also revealed that anyone with a normal mental aptitude could develop so-called ESP and clairvoyance when trained in the Mind Control method. In 1966, the Institute decided to release their findings to the general public. Techniques have been researched and refined to where only 40 to 48 hours of class time are required to learn the SILVA MIND CONTROL method.

COME AND LEARN

We invite you to attend this special introductory seminar which will include learning two MIND CONTROL techniques—discussion on Alpha brain wave training — latest reports of psychic research — and an explanation of what is taught in the complete SILVA MIND CONTROL course.

Meet your candidates for village offices: Part 2

Republican Party

Richard W. Fonte

Being young and relatively new in town might not ordinarily be considered assets for a village board candidate.

But Dick Fonte is trying to turn these possible drawbacks to his advantage. And, coupled with his experience in and knowledge of state government, he may just pull it off.

Fonte is seeking a seat on the Palatine Village Board as a Republican candidate.

He's 27 — the youngest trustee candidate in the running — and has lived in Palatine slightly over a year. "I'm open to some fresh ideas," he says. "I think that's needed; I'm willing to listen."

FONTE'S ALSO got some ideas of his own, mainly in the areas of budgeting and working with other governmental bodies.

To him, "nothing more clearly shows the rudderless leadership (in Palatine) than the lack of a careful budget."

"You've got to take into account all of your revenues, and think of the budget in more than a one-year frame."

FONTE WOULD like to see the village money spent on such special concerns as flood control, as well as routine services.

And he's convinced that can be done without raising taxes. "The village got $300,000 of new funds last year. There was no need to raise taxes."

According to Fonte, the village relies too heavily on property taxes, which account for 10 per cent of the village's revenues. Village government, he maintains, "has the least legitimate claim over any real estate taxes, particularly when it has other sources of revenue that are growing as the village grows."

"There's no sense in placing a burden on the homeowner when it's clearly unnecessary," he added.

Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie for three years, Fonte believes he gained "a very good concept of how government works" that could be useful on a local level.

"We should work with state government a little better than we have in the past," he said. "It's important that the village administration take on an advocacy role for the citizens and push for what we want."

Fonte doesn't guarantee the village

Three trustee seats on the Palatine Village Board are being contested in next week's election.

Candidates are incumbents Thomas F. Ahern, Terry L. Leighty and Shirley A. Munson, all members of the Village Independent Party, and challengers Richard W. Fonte, Robert J. Guss Jr. and James L. Shaw, members of the Republican Party.

The trustee terms are each for four years. Village trustees, along with the village president, are the chief policy makers of the village.

Tomorrow the Herald will present interviews with the two candidates for village president.

Besides a closer working relationship with the state, Fonte advocates working more with neighboring communities and other governmental bodies as well.

He considers the Northwest Municipal Conference "a good starting point" for increased cooperation among suburbs.

Village Independent Party

Thomas F. Ahern

Tom Ahern is fond of telling about one of the first votes he cast as a Palatine village trustee. It happened to be against other members of the Village Independent Party.

"Wendell (Jones, the only Republican Party member of the board) turned to me and said, 'See, you guys can't even agree among yourselves.' And I told him, 'Wendell, that's the beauty of it.'"

Ahern is a firm supporter of local, rather than national, political parties running local government, and points out that as a registered Democrat, he'd have little chance of being a trustee without an independent local party.

AHERN WAS appointed to the board 1½ years ago to fill a vacancy. He's now attempting to win a full four-year term as trustee.

He considers the trustees' job "to try to strike a balance — to give the needed services for the least amount possible and use existing funds to the best advantage."

Ahern says the village has "a sound financial picture," and says that even with last year's tax increase, "the tax rate is still lower than it was in 1968."

Like the other Village Independent Party candidates for trustee except newcomer Kent Bradley, Ahern isn't making any pledges in the campaign, besides continuing the Listening Post.

"We could make all sorts of promises, but we haven't done so," he said. "We feel what we have done in the past is a good indication of what we would do in the future."

AS A PUBLIC relations director by profession, Ahern is concerned about public relations in the village. He was one of the organizers of the Listening Post, in which a village trustee is available at village hall every Saturday morning to meet with residents.

"We're available when the citizens want us," he said, "not when it's convenient for us."

Ahern believes a coordinated effort among area municipalities should be undertaken to combat flooding problems.

"It's not an individual community problem," he said, "but it involves the whole sector, and you have to attack it that way."

Mosquito, too, are a regional problem, he says, but should be combatted with a regional mosquito abatement district. But not the present Northwest Mosquito Abatement District. "The best thing would be to abolish the district and form a new one for the Northwest suburban area," Ahern said. "The place to get the mosquitoes is before they're hatched, and the mosquito abatement district isn't doing that."

Robert J. Guss Jr.

Bob Guss doesn't like what he calls a "Big Brother attitude" at village hall, a "we know what's best for you" approach.

That, he says, is what prompted him to run for village trustee. He's seeking a four-year term as a Republican.

Village officials now, Guss says are "at sword's point with the people in the village who are their constituents."

"You go before the village board and you usually get shot down," he contends. That's partly why Guss helped form an umbrella homeowners group two years ago. "We felt that if we went to the board as leaders of a homeowners group we could at least get in to see them."

The organization was denounced by village trustees as an attempt to circumvent regular channels of communication, and it was dissolved shortly after being formed.

GUSS STILL is convinced homeowners should be more involved in decision-making. "The more people you get involved, it's their decision," he said; "not 'our decision.'"

Guss in particular is interested in resident input in finding solutions to the flooding problem.

"The problem is getting worse, not better," he says. "There are homes being flooded today that never flooded before."

He's convinced the village should not wait for the Salt Creek Watershed Plan to be implemented, but should start immediately on building retention ponds.

Asked whether immediate construction would jeopardize federal funding for the watershed project, as his opponents have charged, Guss responded: "Do you think the federal government would be that unresponsive to the people of Palatine?"

GUSS ALSO believes the village should ban building on the flood plain in Palatine and within 1½ miles of the corporate limits.

"The flood plain is a God-given natural retention area to park water, not buildings," he said. "And that's what we intend to do with it."

Guss also supports the Republican pledge to clean the creek and to fix storm sewers over a five-year period.

And, "for those unfortunate people whose homes will flood this year," the Republicans, says Guss, would have an emergency flood relief committee to provide assistance in obtaining pumps, sandbags and other necessities.

Terry L. Leighty

Terry Leighty doesn't hide the fact that someday he'd like to be Palatine village president.

He didn't seek the position in this election, he says, because his business — real estate and insurance — wouldn't have allowed him enough time. "Although it's a part-time job," he said, "I feel you have to devote almost full-time to it."

Leighty does believe he has the time to continue serving as village trustee. He was appointed to the village board in 1969, and shortly after that, was elected, without opposition, to a full term.

He's now seeking to retain that post as a Village Independent Party candidate.

HIS MAIN qualification, he says: "I don't think anyone can out-dedicate me or out-interest me."

As a local businessman, chairman of the board's building and zoning committee and a recent appointee to the board of directors of the chamber of commerce, Leighty is especially interested in business conditions in Palatine and ways of attracting additional business.

He considers it the responsibility of the chamber to recruit businesses, but says the village has a responsibility to "create an atmosphere that businesses would be attracted to."

Terry L. Leighty

"We've still got to have tough zoning laws and tough building codes," he said, "but we've also got to tell these businesses that we want to work with them and help them locate here."

At the same time, the village must take steps to relieve traffic congestion in the central business district, according to Leighty.

"THERE'S NO SENSE trying to attract more businesses and more people in the mrdw area unless we improve the traffic flow," he said. In particular, he believes a widened and improved Palatine Road would keep the traffic moving and at the same time encourage expansion of downtown Palatine.

Financially, he believes the village board should devote more study throughout the year to reviewing the village budget.

James L. Shaw

Jim Shaw is a salesman by profession. He's now trying to apply his sales technique to himself — to sell himself as a prospective village board member.

The Republican nominee has lived in Palatine for 17 years. This factor, coupled with his ability to interact with other people, he feels are his primary qualifications for a trustee position.

"I'm not an engineer, a CPA or anything like that," he says. "What I can offer to the board is to go out and talk to the people and people can come and talk to me easily."

SHAW STRESSES communications as his main interest. He contends the Village Independent Party majority on the village board has been unresponsive to Palatine citizens.

"Citizens do not have the voice in village government they have the right to," he said. "Many residents have simply become apathetic to village government because of VIP irresponsiveness to community issues."

Shaw's answer to that is in part establishing citizen advisory groups to work with the trustees. Included in these groups would be past village presidents and present office holders in other community organizations, homeowners association members and businessmen.

"We've got to do everything we can possibly do to get the people involved in decision-making in the village," he said. Shaw also endorses the Republican platform promises to hold village board meetings throughout the village and to continue to hold "Listen-In" sessions to hear the views of the residents.

BASICALLY, he feels, Palatine is experiencing "growing pains." These pains are aggravated, he contends, by a lack of planning. "Everyone has his own idea of what to do, and as a result, everyone is going in a different direction."

Instead, Shaw believes, the trustees should "create a climate for builders to come into the village" with desirable plans.

Much of the renovation of downtown Palatine, he says, could be accomplished with private rather than public funds.

As far as industry goes: "We've got to provide a spot for industry and access to it — roads, possibly a railroad siding.

Then we've got to go out and sell the town."

"Palatine has never done this. The location of projects now is hit and miss, which causes all kinds of problems — traffic congestion, overcrowding in schools..."

Shaw is running for office, he says, because of these and other problems — as he puts it, "the inactivity of the village administration to do anything about flooding or taxes or planning."

Shirley A. Munson

Shirley Munson probably didn't know what she was getting into when she began observing Palatine Village Board meetings in 1971 for the League of Women Voters.

She gained enough knowledge about the workings of the board, and enough expertise about the issues the board dealt with, that she wound up being appointed to the board when a vacancy occurred in January, 1972.

Mrs. Munson is now seeking to retain her trustee seat, for a full four-year term, as a Village Independent Party candidate.

She sees the No. 1 problem in Palatine as "money." "Everything I would like to see happen in Palatine is deterred by a lack of funds," she says.

As chairman of the administration and finance committee, Mrs. Munson has a particular interest in the village budget. She'd like to see such programs as sidewalk, curb and road reconstruction included in the budget, but says the money simply isn't there.

"It would be awfully nice to eat into that $750,000 (the village's accumulated share of motor fuel taxes), and use it up each year," as the Republicans have suggested. "But we need that money for other projects."

MRS. MUNSON said the money is needed for street light and traffic signal installation as the state improves Palatine Road near Winston Drive, and Hicks Road by the railroad tracks. The funds also are earmarked for the W. Colfax Street improvements, she said.

The village is receiving more money each year in sales tax rebates, "but the cost of government is going up just as fast if not faster," Mrs. Munson said.

She regards flooding problems as "extremely important," but there's just so much you can do locally. "Flooding, she says, "is not an isolated thing" but an area-wide problem which requires coordinated efforts to bring under control.

"It's no excuse, but last year was one of the heaviest rainfalls," she says.

SHE'S A STRONG advocate of closer cooperation between different governing bodies. She once studied intergovernmental cooperation for the league, and says it has "tremendous potential."

The Northwest Municipal Conference is the logical body to help suburbs work together and avoid duplication of efforts, Mrs. Munson says, "but it can only be as strong as its members make it."

She suggested that the municipal conference develop a Northwest suburban master plan, similar to one devised by the Barrington Area Council of Governments.

And she'd like to see the village make more use of resources gathered by the

Sales tax redistribution bill voted down in State House

by BOB LAHEY
SPRINGFIELD — An Illinois House committee yesterday voted down a bill aimed at sharing the sales tax wealth from giant shopping centers among all cities and villages.

The measure would have caused the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars each year for several Northwest suburbs by redistributing the one per cent sales tax municipalities keep on purchases made at local stores and businesses.

By a vote of 13 to 1, the House cities and villages committee gave the bill a "do not pass" recommendation, a move that generally means the death of proposed legislation.

The measure, introduced by State Rep.

Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, was the object of intense lobbying pressure by suburban officials.

Several northwest suburban mayors were here yesterday to express their opposition to the bill which, as one legislator said, "would take the money from the towns where the problems are and put it out with the pigs and cows."

LONE COMMITTEE member voting today was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights. He said his vote came only because he supports establishment of a commission to come up with a sales tax redistribution formula.

"I would like to turn the clock back to the time before the sales tax formula was devised" and start again with a more equitable formula, Schlickman told the committee.

However, he said changes proposed in the bill would have a "convulsive effect" on communities that depend on sales tax revenue.

The bill would have given only 20 per cent of the one-cent municipal sales tax to towns where it is collected. The remaining 80 per cent would have been distributed statewide on a per capita basis, in the way gasoline and state income taxes are given to local governments.

Figures distributed by Rep. Donald L. Totten R-Schaumburg, showed that all Northwest suburban communities in his district would lose revenue under the bill, with the exception of Palatine and Hoffman Estates, which would have more than doubled their sales tax revenue.

Of 10 cities and villages in the Northwest suburbs, total sales tax revenue would have dropped from nearly $10 million to slightly over $7.3 million.

AMONG THE officials present were mayors Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect, Robert Atcher of Schaumburg, Nicholas Blase of Niles and Roland Meyer of Rolling Meadows. Also present were George Passolt, village manager of Wheeling and Richard Eppeley, village manager of Mount Prospect.

Most were from communities which have large shopping centers and need the money from sales tax for services to these areas, according to their testimony.

Meyer told the committee that in Rolling Meadows sales tax revenue totals $1.2 million coming mostly from industries which the village has labored to attract in order to build its tax base.

Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, drew applause from the crowd jammed in to the small hearing room, saying "there will be no reduction of taxes in the communities which benefit from this bill, and we all know it. The towns which are hurt by it will simply have to go to the people for more taxes in other forms."

Under the formula proposed by the bill, Rolling Meadows' sales tax revenue would have plunged from $1.3 million to $612,000.

In Des Plaines, the drop would be from $2.1 million to $1.4 million; Elk Grove would go according to a partial estimate, from $1.1 million to $661,000, according to figures given to the committee.

The figures would have been less drastic in Arlington Heights, $1.5 million to $1.4 million and Mount Prospect, $1.5 million to $1.1 million.

Palatine would have benefited slightly with an increase in revenue from $567,000 to $580,000. Hoffman Estates, would have enjoyed an increase from $211,000 to $440,000.

Scholarship fund out of budget; police pension up

Shuffling of more than $12,000 in the 1973-74 proposed Rolling Meadows budget took place last night during almost two hours of public hearing on the budget.

Major changes in the budget included the elimination of $10,000 from the Public Information and Education Committee budget for a city-sponsored scholarship fund and an increase of $10,000 in the police pension fund.

The budget is expected to be passed at the next council meeting April 24. The budget must be passed before April 30 according to state statutes.

The shuffling of the scholarship fund from the budget killed what had been a pet project, of sorts, of Mayor Roland Meyer.

THE REQUEST to eliminate the category came from Rip Van Slyke, president of the local Jaycees. Slyke told the council he was representing the Chamber of Commerce which objected to the fund. He said figures from the "College Blue Book" of 1972 show that $3 billion is given away annually in scholarships throughout the country. "The city budget should benefit the whole city, not just several people," Slyke said.

Ald. Tom Waldron (2nd) said statistics show scholarships are going mainly to the poor "the middle class is being forgotten," Waldron said.

Nevertheless, a motion to strike the scholarship fund from the budget was made by Ald. Ken Retske (5th). Voting to strike the appropriation were Ald. Tom Scanlan (1st), Ald. William Ahrens (2nd), Ald. John Rock (3rd), Ald. Jim Huddleston (4th), Ald. Fred Jacobson (5th) and Retske.

Another major change in the budget came when the council voted to increase its original $30,000 allocation for the police pension fund to $40,000. The move was prompted when an angry Thomas Schramm, chairman of the police pension board, chided the council for cutting the board's original request of $45,000 without notifying the board.

"I came here tonight to attend a police pension board meeting and I found out quite by accident that our request had been reduced to $30,000," Schramm said.

SCHRAMM SAID he had appeared before the finance committee with the $45,000 request several months ago. He said the request was based on recommendations made by the State Insurance Department. A minimum of $38,500 would be needed for the fund this year, he told the council.

"I came away from the finance committee meeting with the understanding that the full amount would be given," Schramm said. "No one had the courtesy to notify me or the board of the change."

Schramm then told the council, "the pension board in the future will make its requests directly to the city manager. None of us will ever appear before the finance committee again unless we're asked to do so by a mayor, as long as I'm on the pension board," Schramm said.

Jacobson, chairman of the finance committee apologized to Schramm for what he called a "lack of communication" between the committee and the pension board but he added that no commitment had been made by the committee to recommend the full $45,000 appropriation.

The council then approved a $10,000 increase in the pension fund by a 4-4 vote.

Township may pay less for Bridge

Palatine Township may wind up paying less money this year for its pet project, The Bridge youth services bureau, than it did last year.

Although the agency is losing a $23,000 grant from the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission, area townships are considering giving $10,000 each to finance a share of The Bridge.

Details of Palatine Township's role in The Bridge for the coming year were part of last night's annual town meeting at Sanborn School in Palatine.

To date, only Schaumburg Township has officially promised $10,000. But Jean Flesler, a representative of The Bridge, who made a presentation to the Elk Grove Township officials last night, said "it looks very favorable" that that governmental body will come through with another $10,000. And Palatine Township officials are hoping for a similar amount from Wheeling Township, which

Navy housing on Nike site gets approval

The U.S. Navy reportedly has received a congressional appropriation to build 140 housing units for Navy personnel and dependents at the Arlington Heights Nike Base.

Construction of the housing will probably begin this fall, according to Lt. Cmdr. Karl Mueller, deputy public works officer at the Goenview Naval Air Station, who yesterday confirmed that money for the housing has been voted by Congress. Mueller did not know how much money was approved for the project.

Approval of the housing came over the objections of the Arlington Heights Park District and village officials who had hoped to acquire the entire 137-acre Nike base for a regional park.

Yesterday, 13 acres of the base were transferred to the park district. This land, which had been declared surplus to the military, is separate from the 51 acres which the Navy owns at the base.

Tom Thornton, director of parks and recreation for the district, expressed surprise yesterday at what he called the "sad news." He said he was especially dismayed because he had received written assurance from the Navy that no housing would be built without public hearings and consultation with local officials.

"I don't know if anything else can be done," he said. "I'm surprised and disappointed. Both Senators Percy and Stevenson were going to work for the park."

Citing the opposition of park and village officials, as well as homeowners in the area, Thornton said he expected the Navy was "in for a good battle" over the housing plans.

MUELLER SAID that no plans or contracts for the housing have been awarded. He said the units probably would take up about 41 of the Navy's 51 acres.

The Navy land, which lies in Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15, is a horseshoe-shaped parcel along Central and New Wilke roads at the northwest corner of the base. The projected population of the development is 600, of which 110 would be elementary school-age children.

Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent of Dist. 15, said he has been in contact with Mueller to discuss the impact of the project on the school district, but that no

Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., has introduced legislation which would repeal the new y-instituted taxpayers' $1 checkoff to finance presidential elections.

Many mothers around the country took their children to work yesterday as part of a protest of cutbacks in federally-funded day care centers.

The House sustained President Nixon's veto of a rural water and sewer grant program, giving him the second major victory in a week in his fight with Congress over federal spending priorities.

The state

The Illinois House yesterday passed a bill making the death sentence mandatory in certain murder cases despite claims it is "cruel and unusual punishment."

Once a month, for six hours, a good conduct inmate at any Department of Corrections penal institution could visit privately with his family under a bill passed by the Illinois House.

commitment has been made by the Navy for either a cash or land contribution to the district.

"If school impact studies indicate another school is needed, and if the base is the best place to put it, we probably would be in a position to make a contribution," Mueller said.

An authorization bill for the Navy housing passed Congress last July, but officials still had hoped actual funding of the development could be held up.

AT THAT TIME the Navy was reportedly considering two-story, row-type housing of five units per row. The authorization bill limited the average cost of units in the development to $24,000. Mueller said he did not know if this limit was carried through in the appropriations act.

Plans for Navy housing at the Nike Base date to 1965. In 1968, Congress appropriated money for 200 units, but a typhoon on the Pacific island of Guam diverted funds from the development.

Crusade of Mercy budget at $26,000

The 1973 Rolling Meadows Crusade of Mercy budget has been increased by $3,000 more than last year's.

The approved budget for this year is $26,000, compared to $23,040 last year, according to Al Carlsen, Crusade treasurer. Local contributions this year totaled $8,310, an increase of $237 from last year and the Metropolitan Community Chest made up the remainder.

The Rolling Meadows Crusade of Mercy budget is distributed locally among the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Salvation Army, Campfire Girls, Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, the Northwest Mental Health Association, the USO and the Family Services branch of the Salvation Army.

Since January local funds have been distributed to the 8 agencies and when these run out the Metropolitan Crusade Community Chest will start making monthly disbursements to the local organization.

Woman, 68, 'good' after auto crash

A 68-year-old Palatine woman was listed in good condition at Northwest Community Hospital after she suffered multiple fractures in a two-car accident yesterday at the Palatine Plaza and Northwest Highway.

Police said Mrs. Elsie I. Langhoff, of 248 W. Palatine Rd., was leaving the plaza at the west exit, turning west on Northwest Highway. Her car collided with an eastbound auto driven by Joyce E. McIntyre, 30, of 962 Carmel Dr., Palatine, police said.

Mrs. Langhoff will be ticketed for failure to yield the right of way from a private drive, said police.

Recycling turnout good

"One of the largest turnouts ever" participated in the monthly recycling day in Rolling Meadows Saturday, according to Evelyn Drummond, chairman of the Recycling, Ecological and Beautification committee.

Starting next month, the committee will sponsor two recycling days each month, she said. The May recycling drives will be held May 5 and May 19. Throughout the summer, recycling will be held on the first and third Saturdays of the month, she said.

June 2 will be plant day, with plants to be given to those who have contributed materials in the April, May, and June recycling drives.

Strickly Sports gets lease at sports arena

The Rolling Meadows Park District has leased the pro shop at the sports complex to Strickly Sports Inc.

Under the terms of the five-year lease, Strickly Sports Sales Inc. will pay the park district $400 each month to rent the facility. The company also agreed to purchase the park district's inventory office and sports equipment for more than $20,000 with the first $5,000 to be paid this month. The remainder is due prior to Dec. 31.

The board also authorized Steve Person, director of parks and recreation, to take bids on lighting of the arena, painting of the arena, glass above the dashboard, playground equipment and drinking fountains.

Palatine may pay less for Bridge in coming year

is also considering The Bridge for funding.

If all three townships agree to the funding, Palatine Township's share will be down some $7,000 from this year's budget of $59,000.

But the potential reduction in Palatine Township's share isn't enough to satisfy members of the local League of Women Voters. They say that township taxpayers should only be supporting The Bridge in proportion to the total area served.

Gwendolyn Rowe, an LWV member, asked township auditors to reconsider the township's amount of Bridge funding, in order to reduce it to $23,288 for next year.

That figure is 28.4 per cent of the 1973-74 budget for The Bridge. And Palatine Township is only 28.4 per cent of the total area served by the agency, Mrs. Rowe said.

The disproportionate share for Palatine Township "has lessened the feeling of responsibility on the part of other townships," Mrs. Rowe said.

Current township auditor Richard Bayer responded that The Bridge was the one project that gave him the most pride during his tenure as township auditor for the past eight years.

"I fully agree that it should be on a fair-share basis. But we had to do this to show what could be done," Bayer told the group of some 45 people at the town meeting.

Presentations from four other proposed or existing social programs were also given, as representatives asked for a share of Palatine Township's $48,750 revenue sharing for 1972.

PRESENTING AN IMPORTANT SEMINAR/LECTURE MIND CONTROL & EXTRA SENSORY PERCEPTION

Recently, many national publications such as Life, Mademoiselle, Harper's Bazaar, National Observer and Sales Management featured articles about SILVA MIND CONTROL. These articles, along with many others, discuss how thousands of people across the country have learned through MIND CONTROL to use more of their mind and to productively develop the vast hidden potential that lies within every human being. Some of these articles report the amazing results of how MIND CONTROL students have learned to totally relax, improve concentration, memory and health, break bad habits and increase productivity and creativity; and yes - function psychically - by learning to develop and put to practical use the E.S.P. that we all naturally possess.

ALPHA BRAIN WAVE FUNCTION
SILVA MIND CONTROL teaches you how to develop and utilize your potential through control of your Alpha brain wave function. Recent research at various universities throughout the country has revealed some of the phenomenal capabilities of man through proper control of his brain waves. Exploration of this almost unknown continent - the human mind - has been pioneered by a soft-spoken researcher, Jose Silva of the Institute of Psychorientology in Laredo, Texas.

JOSE SILVA, FOUNDER

26 YEARS OF RESEARCH

The Institute of Psychorientology, under the direction of Jose Silva, began their research in MIND CONTROL in 1944 to see if it was possible to increase an individual's I.Q. factor.

100,000 GRADUATES COAST TO COAST

Amazingly, Silva discovered that not only could I.Q. be increased, but a person trained in this technique could even control certain areas of the Autonomic System-heart beat, respiration, blood pressure, etc. The implications of this breakthrough were staggering. In-depth studies also revealed that anyone with a normal mental aptitude could develop so-called ESP and clairvoyance when trained in the Mind Control method. In 1966, the Institute decided to release their findings to the general public. Techniques have been researched and refined to where only 40 to 48 hours of class time are required to learn the SILVA MIND CONTROL method.

COME AND LEARN

We invite you to attend this special introductory seminar which will include learning two MIND CONTROL techniques-discussion on Alpha brain wave training - latest reports of psychic research - and an explanation of what is taught in the complete SILVA MIND CONTROL course.

Meet your candidates for city offices: Part 2

Stephen Eberhard

3rd Ward incumbent wants 'bulk' of U.S. funds to go toward flood control

After 13 years as serving as an alderman in Rolling Meadows' 3rd Ward, Stephen Eberhard feels his experience and knowledge of the city are important factors in his reelection campaign.

"I feel that the people probably feel I've done a good job. They've more or less paid for my training. I don't look for a lot of glory but I like to work. I feel I'm part of the city and the city government."

National politics is something that should be kept out of city government, he feels. "I don't really care for politics as such. I guess some think that once you're elected, you're a politician, but I don't see it that way. To me it's not a game. I'm not running to enter a game. I'm running to be a part of the city."

"I have been an independent as long as I've been on the council. I'm put on the council because of the people. I'm responsible to them."

THOUGH THE city has no major problems facing it now, Eberhard feels flood control is an immediate priority. "Flooding is a problem to the extent that we're dependent on the south end of Salt Creek to take our runoff. As far as the sewer system, it's not a problem because the system is adequate."

Tying into the new Arlington Heights retention basin at Wilke and Kirchoff roads and completion of the Salt Creek Watershed program should help eliminate flooding problems in the city, Eberhard says. Help will also come from the we've sat over a large water bed, but it's going down and going down fast."

ALLOCATING $2,001 from the revenue sharing to the Northwest Opportunity Center is a matter which Eberhard has still not resolved. "The center serves a purpose, but I think that Rolling Meadows excels in what it does for its citizens. I'm convinced that, fortunately, with the money we have, we have an adequate amount to take care of our own."

"It's probably a needed center, but for the people outside the corporate limits of the city. If they (the center) have served people from Rolling Meadows, someone from the city should go to these people and ask how they were helped. I'd favor helping them (the center) if we don't have to raise taxes to do so."

Eberhard thinks a better way to fund the center would be to abolish township government and give township taxes to the center. "I've changed my mind on the abolition of township government. If it can be proven that the center is providing services to people in Rolling Meadows, then the money being sent to the township should go to the center."

Using city funds to help finance certain requests of the park district could be considered, provided a need is shown, he says. "The park district has never substantiated what they want. If the park district requires financial assistance, there is no reason we should not get involved, but I want justification."

ANNEXING the park district to the city would be a move Eberhard would support. "I would definitely be in favor of the city taking over the park district because the management would be better." He says such a move could be done immediately.

Public transit for the city is a subject that would require extensive study, he feels. Such a study would demand several years of research before the city could explore investing in a bus system, he says.

Richard Nolan

'I don't think any office should be uncontested. A lot of people don't know who their alderman is.'

Richard Nolan, candidate for alderman in Rolling Meadows' 3rd Ward, thinks his most important duty if elected will be to provide a closer link between residents and the city government. "The biggest thing is to work closer with the people. A lot of people don't know who their alderman is."

Although he has lived in the city for nine years, Nolan is a new resident of the 3rd Ward due to the recent redistricting of the city. Nolan had considered running in the 4th Ward before the re-map and was convinced by friends to enter the 3rd Ward race.

"I didn't think any elected office should be uncontested. The people have a choice now. I'm enjoying talking to people. I'm running just as a concerned citizen."

Since his entire ward is made up of single family homes, Nolan feels there is more civic concern shown in the ward than might be found in wards with a mix of homes and apartments. He says there are no major problems in the city but he has three objectives in mind in his campaign.

They include "working to provide maximum services for tax dollars, getting stronger environmental codes, and stronger flood abatement programs."

HAVING SERVED for seven years as the manager of Senior Men's Baseball in the city, Nolan has some opinions about the city park district but doesn't feel the city will be able to do a great deal to assist. "I definitely think there is a conflict of interest (on the park board). I think it would help the city to take over the park district and put it under one roof, but I don't know how much of a financial problem they have."

As long as it is a separate governing body, Nolan says the city should not interfere in the district's operation. "Until they come to us, we should not say anything."

Nolan feels expenditures for flood control are worthwhile. He also has come to a decision on funding for the Northwest Opportunity Center, an expenditure he originally opposed.

"This has been kicked around politically a great deal. I've talked to people in my ward and have found the majority are very much behind giving the center the $2,001. I would definitely vote for it if I were on the council. Arlington Heights has already contributed its share, and I do see a need for the city to contribute to the center."

"I cannot see why we can't give them the money when we can spend money for other less important things. If the center had wanted more than $2,001, they would have asked for it. I think we should give them the money."

PAY INCREASES for alderman is a subject Nolan will not discuss because he says it should not be made a campaign issue. "When I took out my petition, I didn't even know what the pay was. I'm not in it as a part time job. Money is immaterial at this point. The pay wouldn't compensate for any alderman doing a good job."

Nolan does not support proposals to provide a transportation system in the city. "I feel I moved out to a small community to get away from that. There are trains and taxis and most families have two cars. I cannot see funding transportation to get from here to Arlington Heights or to Woodfield." He also opposes the use of motor fuel tax money to support suburban and urban mass transit systems.

THOUGH NOLAN has been active in the Republican Party, Nolan insists he is running as an independent. He has not asked for nor received endorsements from the GOP, he says.

An endorsement from Mayor Roland Meyer also would not matter in his campaign, Nolan says, although the candidate has high praise for Meyer. "Any organization needs a leader. You can't be weak and have the support of the people. Mayor Meyer is on top of the trouble, small or large, in the city."

Frederick Jacobson: 5th Ward incumbent backs funds for Opportunity Center

"I speak what I think," says incumbent 5th Ward Ald. Fredrick Jacobson. "I'm honest and maybe I'm not a good politician for it. I don't like to hurt people, but I try to be truthful."

Jacobson has served as an alderman in Rolling Meadows since 1969 when he defeated Rudolf Balek. Since then he has helped bring to the city a number of programs, he says, including a full-time sanitation, a position he actively sought to initiate as board of health president before joining the council.

He feels there is a need for more openness between branches of city government and the council. "I think the council is not as informed as a whole about things going on in the city as it should be. It's a problem of communication."

A remedy would be to allow the council to meet once a month in closed, informal sessions to discuss city problems and matter spending before the council, he says.

THOUGH OPINIONS sometimes differ among aldermen, Jacobson doesn't think there is dissension on the council. "Overall we work together and our aim is still the betterment of the city."

Frederick Jacobson

Problems in the city and his ward are few, he says, but residents still are most concerned about flooding problems. Because of this, Jacobson feels the city should do all it can to correct the condition. The purchase of flood control equipment with funds provided by federal revenue-sharing monies "was a well-justified expenditure. The first priority for future dollars should be to do a complete job of finishing the work."

Before determining how future revenue sharing should be spent, Jacobson says the city should evaluate the effectiveness of the new equipment. "The allocation (of revenue sharing) depends on how much is accomplished with the money we have spent so far."

In addition to flood control, Jacobson thinks the city could allocate $2,001 to the Northwest Opportunity Center for families from the city being served by the center. "If the services they (the center) have provided are legitimate and legal, there is no question in my mind that they should get money this year."

FUTURE FUNDING of the center, however, should depend on the scope of services that can be provided by the city's own welfare department, he says. Jacobson would favor a working agreement with the center to have Rolling Meadows cases referred to the city welfare office.

Services that could not be provided by the city would be handled by the center, he suggests. Payment to the center for specific cases involving Rolling Meadows residents could then be paid to the center for each specific service rendered.

"We need to divide the spheres of service and define areas of responsibility. The question is really should the city become more involved in a 'welfare department' more than just emergency temporary family assistance? I don't think we're geared to take care of long range assistance."

A bus service for the city is another area in which revenue sharing might be used, he says. "I'd like to have a transportation system for the city. If revenue sharing is sufficient to the point where we can afford this service, there are some very nice small buses that could be purchased. I think there is no question that the city has to look at this in the near future."

JACOBSON, WHO is chairman of the city finance committee, says he thinks pay raises for aldermen should be considered by the council. "I think the aldermen deserve pay raises. You can't pay him for all the committee meetings he attends and the time he spends in the wards. There are a number of expenses involved in being an alderman. Whatever the council decides, if they ever decide, the aldermen deserve it."

He also thinks the city should get involved in a blood banking program and work toward better cooperation with the park district.

He dismisses talk he is not responsive to problems in the southern part of the 5th Ward or the apartment residents. "I've been in the southern part of the ward when they had flooding problems. I'm down there whenever the people call me. I've been cognizant of the problems of the apartment residents and I've tried to put information in their monthly bulletins on how to contact aldermen if they have problems."

"I don't feel I've had problems with meadows cases referred to the city welfare office.

Services that could not be provided by the city would be handled by the center, he suggests. Payment to the center for specific cases involving Rolling Meadows residents could then be paid to the center for each specific service rendered.

If revenue sharing is sufficient to the point where we can afford this service, there are some very nice small buses that could be purchased. I think there is no question that the city has to look at this in the near future."

HE WOULD NOT vote for a pay increase for aldermen, he says. "On the zoning board, we don't get paid. Several years ago the matter came up and we all voted not to get paid. If I have no expenses (on the zoning board), I don't want to get paid for it."

"I think $100 per month for aldermen is sufficient to cover costs. I don't think anyone should want to be an alderman as a way to make extra money."

Because he has been a member of the zoning board, Macklin has some ideas on the kind of building he would like to see take place in the city in the future. Single-family home construction, however, no matter how desirable, is no longer financially practical, he says.

"Each development has to be considered on its own merits. With the cost of land so high, single family homes are almost out of the question. But future apartment construction will have to depend on a number of factors like density, where the apartments are, and how it would affect the schools."

MACKLIN BELIEVES he would not have difficulty representing both apartment residents and home owners in the ward. "I grew up in an apartment. I think it is a fallacy that the apartment people don't care. My family cared and I'm sure the people here care."

Bernard Macklin: Zoning board member wouldn't support aldermanic pay increase

A desire to become more involved in city government in Rolling Meadows prompted Bernard Macklin to enter the race for alderman in the 5th Ward. "I'm very proud of Rolling Meadows and the only thing I'm not happy with is I'm not involved."

Macklin, who has been a member of the city's zoning board of appeals for three years and a resident of the city for eight years, said he had not thought about running until several neighbors approached him with the idea. "They asked me if I had given any thought to running. I said 'no' and they said 'why not?' I thought about it for several weeks and was encouraged by everyone I talked to. They more or less convinced me to run and now I'm very enthused about it."

Like most, Macklin doesn't think there are any major problems in the city that are not being dealt with. "Flooding is definitely the big problem now. Anything that can be spent for flood control is good money spent because it has hurt so many people."

Spending a portion of the city's $177,000 federal revenue-sharing allotment for flood control is worthwhile, he thinks. But Macklin has no strong feelings about other uses for the money. "Uses for federal revenue sharing would have to be answered at the time the money is available. I think the city has taken care of us pretty well so far. A first priority could be to lower taxes, but everyone's for that."

ONE AREA THAT could be explored as a use for the money is public transportation for the city, Macklin says. "Most of the people have said they don't want a public transit system but I think it would be great to have limited bus service. If it was feasible and people wanted it, we could use it."

Macklin said the system could provide service to major points in the city and area shopping centers. But he says he would not support the plan unless it had favorable backing from residents. "I don't think any issue should be forced on people."

Macklin would not support city assistance for the Northwest Opportunity Center. "I believe that as long as the city has a welfare officer, he should handle this." Macklin says he thinks the city should provide aid to needy families in Rolling Meadows while the center is handling only the families living in unincorporated areas.

Financial assistance from the city to the park district is a matter Macklin says he cannot comment on extensively because the park district is a separate governing unit. But he does feel if it is feasible, he would like to see the park district annexed by the city.

HE WOULD NOT vote for a pay increase for aldermen, he says. "On the zoning board, we don't get paid. Several years ago the matter came up and we all voted not to get paid. If I have no expenses (on the zoning board), I don't want to get paid for it."

Village's first chairwoman

Pat Morse heads blood plan

Mrs. Pat Morse, 146 Chandler Ln., Hoffman Estates is the first chairwoman of the village's four per cent blood program.

Mrs. Morse was appointed to fill the position at Monday's village board meeting. She will be paid $5 per hour to schedule blood drives, recruit donors and direct volunteer workers in the program that village officials hope will provide free blood for any resident of the community who needs it.

Under a contract signed in late February with the North Suburban Blood Center of Glenview, the chairwoman is to conduct four blood drives the first year of operation. If four per cent of the village population donates in that year, all village residents are entitled to free blood. Any donor is entitled to the free blood even if the four per cent goal is not attained.

In announcing the appointment, Mayor Frederick Downey said Mrs. Morse and her husband, Marvin, have lived in the village a long time, and she has been active in PTA. Mrs. Morse also is a member of the village youth commission, Downey said.

Although the village is now moving on the blood donor program, it appeared the board reached a consensus favoring non-participation in what one trustee termed social service programs.

TRUSTEE EDWARD Hennessy, whose term on the village board expires April 30 and who now is township tax collector, was delegated to tell the township board the village is not prepared to fund mental health services.

Hennessy has spoken out against village contributions requested by agencies providing mental health counseling to township residents. Because the state has established planning groups for mental health services along township lines, funding should be provided by the township rather than by villages within the township, he has said.

Last week the board denied a $13,000 contribution request from Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Community Services. This week the board voted to have Hennessy refer that request to the township. He was to speak last night at the annual township meeting.

Inter-party cooperation averts vote list shortage

A clash between opposing party members in the coming April 17 village election has apparently been averted through inter party cooperation. Party office seekers recently agreed to share a single list of registered voters prepared for the village clerk.

The object of cooperation is a list of registered voters prepared in computer form for the village clerk's office. When the village board approved preparation of the list, to comply with state law, officials from both parties suggested the clerk obtain duplicates, so that candidates could purchase copies.

Mayor Frederick Downey, incumbent seeking reelection on the Civic Party slate, Monday night asked Village Clerk Virginia Netter about the status of the lists. Mrs. Netter referred the question to Deputy Clerk Helen Wozniak, who is running for clerk with the Republican Party.

Mrs. Wozniak reported the lists had arrived Monday afternoon. When Downey asked if extra copies had been ordered, Mrs. Wozniak said only the two duplicates requested by the Republicans had been obtained. They were the only additional copies available, she said.

DOWNEY SAID he had ordered a copy too, and asked why it was not ordered along with the ones for the Republicans. When Mrs. Wozniak reported she was not informed the Civic Party wanted a copy, Mrs. Netter added "It's probably my error."

Mrs. Wozniak suggested she would check with Glenn Hoffman, Republican campaign chairman and the person who ordered the two copies, to see if he would agree to let the Civic Party purchase one of them.

Yesterday Mrs. Wozniak reported Hoffman was willing to release the second list, and Downey said he had been told "It's all taken care of." He did not wish to make an issue of the oversight, he said, since he expected to receive the list later in the day.

Registration lists are used by the parties to make final contacts with potential voters, both in the days just preceding the polling and on election day.

Downey could have gotten another copy of the list "almost immediately," said Mrs. Wozniak, even if Hoffman had not agreed to share. But under the village's contract with the computer firm, copies requested along with the original order, as Hoffman's were, would cost only $1 per precinct, or $15. Later copies would cost $5 per precinct, or $75.

insurance and real estate brokers. The fee for amusement operations, such as carnivals, circuses and exhibitions, was set at $30.

RATHER THAN THE previous fee for small animal dealers of $20, the village now will charge $30.

A whole series of fees, with 16 classifications, was established for food vending machines, while the old section dealing with them was rescinded.

The fee for automobile accessory dealers licenses was dropped from $50 to $30, and the fee for dancing schools was changed from $50 for three instructors and $75 for four or more instructors to a flat rate of $30.

While filling stations previously were charged a $30 fee plus $5 for each pump more than six, they now will be charged a flat $20 fee.

A new section was added setting fees for retail food stores, with six categories listed on the basis of square footage. For stores with 1,000 or fewer square feet of floor space, the fee is $30. The rate increases in levels up to $16,000 square feet at $240, and over 1,600 square feet, the fee is 1 1/2 cents per square foot.

New rates were established in three categories for restaurant licenses. For Fashion store to open at Woodfield Mall

A women's fashion store will open their third unit in Woodfield Mall tomorrow. Kaufman's, also located at 744 N. Michigan Ave. and 4900 N. Harlem Ave., Chicago, carries women's sportswear, dresses, coats, knits and shoes.

M. L. Kaufman, president of the firm, will be on hand along with William and Harold Kaufman, for the ribbon-cutting ceremony in the mall's upper level north end. Also participating in the ceremony will be the new store's manager Leo Hoch and assistant manager Joanne Bahr, Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher, Cook County Board President George W. Dunne, Jeannie Morris, author and television personality, and representatives of the Woodfield management office.

establishments accommodating up to 50 persons, the fee was raised from $30 to $80. For seating up to 100 persons, the fee increased from $60 to $100. For seating of more than 100 persons, the fee jumped from $90 to $130.

NEW FEES OF $30 were also established for hardware store licenses and motor vehicle repair shop licenses.

The new fee schedule was established after studying inspection and control procedures and their cost to the village. The committee is to study those procedures, recommend ways of updating them and suggest areas where they may be unnecessary. It also will examine new types of businesses coming to the village, and determine if inspectional controls are required for them.

Members of the License Review and Study Committee will include Trustee William Cowin, finance committee chairman; Village Manager George Longmeyer; Finance Officer John Tsao and the village clerk to be elected April 17. The committee is to convene May 15, and report back to the board the last week of each month, with final recommendations due Oct. 1.

ert O. Atcher, to a post office committee and a communications committee.

In reply, Dougherty said the communications group held only one meeting and explained the group responsible for locating a post office in Schaumburg "was of very short duration."

Incumbent Denis Ledgerwood spoke to his opponent's criticism of lack of fencing at a proposed retention pond at Braintree and Weathersfield Way. "This pond isn't even planned yet. I suggest we find out what the engineers are planning before we begin to scream," he said.

Aigner talked of a "combined 25 years of experience" provided by the four SUP candidates and chastized independents for failure to attend committee or board meetings prior to launching their campaigns.

RAY McARTHUR, SUP candidate for a two-year term, answered charges that the original village master plan was altered to eliminate park and school sites. The plan was formulated in a flexible manner to allow periodic updating, he explained.

Mrs. Popp, also running for a two-year term, stressed "people" are the issues in this campaign. Hitting on the need for improved communications between residents and elected officials, the candidate repeated she "will be the voice of the people."

Candidates Johnson and Jackson emphasized a need for improving serious flooding conditions in Schaumburg.

But the audience of about 50 gasped when she said she believes SUP stands for "Schaumburg's Uninformed People." She is concerned about what she terms inadequate park and school sites as documented in Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission materials.

All eight candidates will experience their final face to face confrontation prior to the election tonight when they appear before the Sheffield Park Homeowners. The meeting, open to the public, will be at 8 at Jane Addams Junior High School.

Fate of Chino Park may be decided by June 1

The fate of Chino Park in Hoffman Estates may be decided by June 1, after having been in question for nearly two years.

The village board directed Mayor Frederick Downey this week to appoint two trustees next Monday as a committee to investigate alternatives for the future of the park. The board included in its resolution a deadline of the second board meeting in May for the committee to present a recommendation to the full board. Parties interested in owning the land are to be consulted.

The park now is owned by the village, which pays for maintenance. The board has been asked to deed over portions of it to the Hoffman Estates Park District or the Hoffman Estates Boys Club, and the village youth commission also has informally expressed interest in owning the site.

FOR A LONG TIME, a decision was delayed because of disagreement over who should pay back taxes on the park, the village or the new owner.

The taxes accrued because of a failure to obtain tax free status for the site when the village assumed its ownership.

Village officials signed the checks for the taxes this week. And although the village is on record with a commitment to give the land to the park district, board members have since indicated they may change their minds. The park is the site of the annual Fourth of July Celebration, at which beer is served, and state law prohibits sale of beer on park district property.

Even if the park district should receive the land now, it is too late for the district to make improvements it had hoped to complete for this summer. The district approved its budget for this year without any provision for Chino Park, when the village failed to make a decision on the deed transfer.

Schaumburg chess club wins tourney

The Schaumburg High School Chess Club won the recent High School Dist. 211 chess tournament.

The tournament involved the top 10 players of each of the four schools. Final score was Schaumburg 12 1/2 points, Conant 12; Fremd 11 1/2; and Palatine 4.

Special meeting set for swearing-in

Officials to be elected April 17 in Hoffman Estates will be sworn into office and seated at a special meeting of the village board at 8 p.m. April 30.

The officials will not actually take office until 12:01 a.m. May 1, the start of the village's fiscal year. But the ceremonial meeting for April 30 was scheduled to permit them to be seated as early as possible.

Under the village's meeting schedule, the new board members would not normally be sworn into office until May 7, the first Monday in the new fiscal year. Mayor Frederick Downey, an incumbent candidate, agreed to call the special session to eliminate that delay.

In other action this week, the board approved a new fee schedule for business licenses in the village, and approved establishment of a committee to review the entire licensing procedures and recommend changes to modernize them.

The new schedule eliminates licensing for several occupations already licensed by the state, adds sections for a number of businesses, reduces license fees in a number of areas and raises them for restaurateurs.

New bank to open late this year in Woodfield Plaza

A new national bank will open late this year in the Woodfield Executive Plaza, the office building complex adjacent to Woodfield Mall just north of Woodfield Theater.

The Suburban National Bank of Woodfield will be the first national bank in the Woodfield complex and the first in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

The U.S. Comptroller of the Currency in Washington D.C. issued the charter for the national bank to the Suburban Bank Group, a six-bank association. According to a group spokesman, half of the banks are state chartered and half are nationally chartered.

Organizers of this seventh suburban group bank are Gerald Fitzgerald, president of the Palatine National Bank; real estate broker Jack Kemmerly; William McConor, president, Union 76 Division of Union Oil Company of California.

Also Lee Morrison, president, Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates; Michael Reese, president, Suburban National Bank of Elk Grove Village; and attorney Richard J. Rlordan, of Rlordan, Larson, Linklater and Bruckert.

THE BANK WILL aim at both commercial and consumer accounts, the bank spokesman said.

Projections of population growth and business of existing banks in the area showed another bank can be supported, she said. Capital requirements for the Woodfield complex are higher than for other areas, she said, and consequently the new bank will be capitalized at $1 million. Many banks open with $500,000 to $800,000.

Richard Fillippini of Farnsworth and Palmer, developer and manager of the executive plaza, said the new bank will take up 6,500 square feet of the lobby, which is half the floor. The group applied for its charter about nine months ago, he said.

The new bank should do well, he said, pointing to the drive-in facilities that will be constructed and the ease of dropping off a check at a free-standing building.

The bank should open by November or December, Fillippini said. The executive plaza itself will open in September. No tenants have been announced publicly, he said, but they are anticipated heavy users of the bank.

According to the bank spokesman, 20,000 shares of stock at a par value of $50.00 will be issued. Initial stock offerings will be made to shareholders in the six existing suburban banks: Cary State Bank, Palatine National Bank, Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates, Suburban Bank and Trust of Carpentersville, Suburban National Bank of Elk Grove Village and Suburban National Bank of Palatine.

Further information is available through Suburban Bank Group, Drawer A, Palatine 60067.

PRESENTING AN IMPORTANT SEMINAR/LECTURE MIND CONTROL & EXTRA SENSORY PERCEPTION

Recently, many national publications such as Life, Mademoiselle, Harper's Bazaar, National Observer and Sales Management featured articles about SILVA MIND CONTROL. These articles, along with many others, discuss how thousands of people across the country have learned through MIND CONTROL to use more of their mind and to productively develop the vast hidden potential that lies within every human being. Some of these articles report the amazing results of how MIND CONTROL students have learned to totally relax, improve concentration, memory and health, break bad habits and increase productivity and creativity; and yes — function psychically — by learning to develop and put to practical use the E.S.P. that we all naturally possess.

ALPHA BRAIN WAVE FUNCTION SILVA MIND CONTROL teaches you how to develop and utilize your potential through control of your Alpha brain wave function. Recent research at various universities throughout the country has revealed some of the phenomenal capabilities of man through proper control of his brain waves. Exploration of this almost unknown continent — the human mind — has been pioneered by a soft-spoken researcher, Jose Silva of the Institute of Psychorientology in Laredo, Texas.

26 YEARS OF RESEARCH The Institute of Psychorientology, under the direction of Jose Silva, began their research in MIND CONTROL in 1944 to see if it was possible to increase an individual's I.Q. factor.

Meet your candidates for village offices: Part 2

Hoffman Estates Civic Party

Lee Dodgion

Lee Dodgion's interest in village government has been building since he moved here with his family in July, 1970.

A resident of 115 Park Ln., Hoffman Estates, he first became active with the Winston Knolls Homeowners Association. He now is running for village trustee on the Civic Party slate.

He has "always had a strong interest in things going on around me," he said, because "at the local level I can have some influence on what's going on, some impact on how the village is developed."

He feels his work experience and previous activities in his homeowners group would make him a valuable trustee. He now is employed as a planner for Union Oil Co., Schaumburg, and holds engineering degrees with a specialty in fire protection services.

While Dodgion sees updating the village master plan as a priority item, he does not feel Hoffman Estates should hire a full-time planner to do it.

"I WAS A LITTLE disturbed by the fact the ROOST organization (Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township) came out and said to hire a planning staff, but didn't talk about what to do with it," said Dodgion.

A village master plan should be updated annually, as is done with plans for major industrial firms, said Dodgion. But the input for the plan "has to come from the people within the village," he feels. An expert consultant should be hired, but not a full-time staff person, he said. While the consultant fee likely would cost more than a planner's salary in short term considerations, he asks "what do you do with people when their function is done?"

Dodgion also notes Republicans speak of the planner in terms of a promoter, and said the functions are separate and distinct. Promotion is "implementation of planning, and they are normally different types of people," he said.

By the time Hoffman Estates reaches a population of about 60,000 persons, its system of government will have to change, Dodgion said, but he added he is not sure what direction it should take. He feels it will be difficult for at-large trustees to adequately represent such a large population.

DODGION STRONGLY supports establishment of a municipal fire department, noting the abundance of separate taxing districts in the community. Village revenues provide more sources of financing for a department than does the existing fire district system, he added.

Dodgion would prefer to see the village work with its employees without union formation, saying both groups would be better off. But if they cannot work well that way, a union is inevitable, he said, and the village could work effectively with one.

And while Dodgion favors a street lighting program limited to such points as major intersections, he wants to see it instituted with existing revenues, perhaps with federal revenue sharing funds.

Industrial growth will come to the village as other areas are filled, said Dodgion. But because the village is not close to a railroad and has no public transportation, it will be difficult to attract industry prior to that time.

WHILE DODGION said party affiliation should not be considered when hiring village employees, he sees no objections to a village trustee recommending qualified potential employees to the village manager. He would limit this, however, if the trustee were related to the potential employee, if they worked together in political campaigns or were close friends.

Dodgion questions whether the uniting ordinance, and describes himself as neutral on low or moderate income housing and sees little likelihood the federal government will force a low income plan on suburban communities.

Dodgion questions whether the unit school district controversy is a real or created issue. If he saw a unit district "happening," he would like the village to work with existing school districts to oppose possible detriment to the area not included, he said.

The primary issue of the current village campaign is whether or not national political parties should be involved in village elections, said Dodgion. He believes they should not, citing Chicago as an example of the results of national party controls.

Dodgion and his wife have two children.

Hoffman Estates Civic Party

Charles Lovesky

Village government is all about people, believes Charles "Chuck" Lovesky, Civic Party candidate for Hoffman Estates trustee.

Persons who have not been active participants in village government should be encouraged to take an interest, including young persons and residents of apartment complexes, he said. The only way to accomplish this is by showing government is interested in them, by knocking on their doors and talking to them, he believes.

Some of these needs are in the area of village services. While Lovesky is unsure of the cost of establishing a municipally owned scavenger service, he notes that Rolling Meadows has established one and "its been working well for them." Hoffman Estates should examine the costs for scavenger service and a municipal fire department as well, and consider use of revenue sharing funds to begin these systems, he said.

DESCRIBING HIMSELF as negative on the question of a village planner, Lovesky still feels a consultant should make a professional study of such a full-time position. He notes that it would be difficult to hire someone for a temporary period, only until the village is fully developed.

There is a lack in basic communication between the village and the business community, which should be improved, said Lovesky. He based his assessment on attendance at village board meetings, saying he has not seen businessmen represented. Lovesky operates a business of his own, Unique Engravers Inc., of 6614 W. Diversey, Chicago.

He sees a need for industrial development in the village, and cites as benefits of this an improved tax base for homeowners. The village must be absolutely certain it can provide services, such as water and police protection, and then approach the owners of industrial park lands and offer assistance in promoting the village.

BUT INDUSTRY is not Lovesky's only concern. He feels the village should also keep a watchful eye on developments in the unit school district issue, and be prepared to support existing boards of education in any stand they may take. He does not believe the village can institute legal action to prevent a unit district's formation along any particular boundary lines, however.

Lovesky would have no qualms about recommending persons for village employment, if they are qualified on the basis of knowledge of the job and educational and management background.

While he feels there would be a danger of patronage from recommendations by officials affiliated with national political parties, "I don't believe with independents involved you're facing that issue," he said.

Lovesky also would like to see the village adopt an open housing ordinance as a statement that discrimination will not be permitted, although he said he has not seen examples of discrimination. "If it is done on a personal basis, I don't know," he said.

An understanding of business policies, meeting payrolls, directing staff employees, meeting legal commitments and running a productive business are all areas Lovesky feels would make him an effective trustee. He also cites his experience as president of Hoffman Estates Jaycees as indicative of his leadership abilities.

He and his wife Jeanine and their three children live at 610 Oakdale Rd.

Hoffman Estates Civic Party

William Stukas

A legal background, including service as a village attorney, is one asset William Stukas would like to bring to the Hoffman Estates village board as a Civic Party candidate for trustee.

Stukas was both a village attorney and a village prosecutor, before he moved to 491 Devonshire Ln., Hoffman Estates, from Minnesota five years ago. He also has been prosecutor for Hoffman Estates since 1971.

Stukas thinks his other legal experience, sometimes on the opposite side of the bench from a village board, also will serve him in good stead. He has represented developers wishing to build in a community, and knows how they prepare and present their information. He could see holes in their logic, and also understand their problems of business operations, he believes.

In Minnesota, state law bars partisan politics from municipal elections. Stukas also has worked a precinct in the City of Chicago and on a 1964 suburban campaign. Having experienced both party politics and non-partisan campaigning, he must prefer the latter.

STUKAS SAID he is running because he is "against appointments by parties; it is detrimental." Stukas said patronage as a "matter of principle" is the "primary issue of the campaign."

At the same time, Stukas sees no reason why an elected village official should not recommend individuals for employment as salaried personnel. "If I have knowledge of the person's qualifications, I have a perfect right to set forth those qualifications. I don't think political affiliation has any bearing" on the matter, he said.

Stukas' priorities for a term in office would be increasing the concern of village government for apartment tenants, obtaining equal fire protection throughout the village, street and road repairs and development of pedestrian access to cross major streets, perhaps with overhead crosswalks in some areas.

While Stukas favors more responsiveness to the needs of apartment tenants, generally he feels consumer protection can be more efficiently provided by local business organizations than by village government.

The village must make a direct effort to "show apartment tenants they are considered to be a part of the village," he said. "Most municipalities are more responsive to homeowners or business interests than they are to renters, and Hoffman Estates is like the others, he said. He also would encourage greater political activity by young persons, he said.

WHILE STUKAS does not see a need for increased village services now, a coming need will appear in forcing better maintenance of multiple residential units, perhaps by passing an ordinance barring an owner from collecting rents during periods of improper maintenance.

Some action will be necessary regarding fire protection, he said, but he reserved judgment on the procedure to equalize the service throughout the village until after completion of a village financial study. He "tends to favor a municipal department," but said he does not know if it is justified now in cost terms.

Stukas also favors extended street lighting, suggesting the costs might well be offset by savings in thwarted vandalism. A bond issue could finance the lights, and while Stukas would insist on public hearings, he does not feel a referendum would be necessary.

While drawing industry to Hoffman Estates would be an uphill fight with the competition from other areas, he believes it could be done by showing developers they can run an industry profitably in the village.

Hoffman Estates also should actively oppose a unit school district for the village of Schaumburg, Stukas believes. While he said legal action would be difficult, a resolution, a public information campaign and attempts to work with other villages and the school district might be effective. And he does not rule out legal action.

Schaumburg independent

Carol Johnson

Carol Johnson is a 30-year-old Schaumburg housewife, mother and former teacher who admits to serious soul-searching before committing herself as an independent candidate for village trustee.

Her decision to seek a four-year term evolved gradually as she became interested and involved in community affairs. It stemmed, in part, from concern for the way the average citizen is treated when approaching the village board with a complaint.

Regarding recent flooding problems, Mrs. Johnson contends "people testifying at village board meetings are given the burden of proof... to establish they are not putting towels down their drains or regrading their lawns." She thinks village officials owe residents the courtesy of a "third check."

Distressed about the "immediate problems of the community" (a credibility gap between elected officials and residents, inadequate public health service and an insufficient number of building inspectors), Mrs. Johnson feels her biggest contribution as a trustee would be the questions she would pose. "In Schaumburg, the questions that aren't asked are the important ones," she believes.

SHE DESCRIBES the village master plan as "a nebulous thing" and criticizes its not being readily available to citizens.

While Mrs. Johnson advocates development of a hospital in the area, she has actively opposed the 20-acre Schaumburg Road site on which Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center North proposes to locate.

Following two years of investigation as chairman of Timbercrest Home Owners Association hospital study committee, she testified against the site at a January meeting of the Illinois hospital licensing board.

She considers that site inadequate in size and a potential flooding and traffic hazard and has pledged to work with a group seeking donation of a 40-to 60-acre alternate site. She believes, too, that a hospital should be financed through revenue bonds with no cost to the community.

The candidate fears duplication of services and equipment which could add to the cost of care will result because of improper planning within the total suburban community and lack of coordination with other hospitals.

Mrs. Johnson believes police and fire protection are keeping pace with growth but assesses public health service as "critically short."

She views the present village board as "a group of rubber stamps under one-man rule."

"FREQUENTLY, the trustees echo the desires of the mayor. They must, because they are on the village board at his pleasure," she remarked.

Unsuccessful in attempts to seek appointment to auxiliary boards, Mrs. Johnson thinks applicants for these posts "must first serve their apprenticeship with Schaumburg United Party," the administration backed party.

A unit school district feasibility study is "a tremendous example of the need for diversification" on the board, she says. Mrs. Johnson describes Schaumburg officials as "myopic in scope" in this area and claims they are failing to consider possible state and federal legislation which might remove the tax base for a unit district.

But, she favors completion of a study to determine possible need for a municipal airport. She feels mass transportation systems "or anything to relieve surface congestion" must also be considered.

The candidate considers the village board negligent in removing mosquito protection without first providing a responsible alternative. "Malathion is hazardous to our environment... but mosquitoes are hazardous to our health," she says, calling for immediate initiation of a comprehensive control program "to protect nature and the natives."

SHE BELIEVES moderate and low-cost housing needs must be dealt with by all communities. Her recommendation is a feasibility study to determine if this need exists in Schaumburg.

Mrs. Johnson also favors a more cooperative attitude with neighboring communities but does not anticipate a merger with Hoffman Estates in the foreseeable future.

Though she personally appreciates no municipal tax and considers it a great advantage, she contends residents pay one way or another for services rendered.

She approves of a proposed sign ordinance which will provide aesthetic appeal but also opts for more landscaping in commercial areas and parking medians.

While the proposed cultural center is "marvelous," Mrs. Johnson thinks builder donations for its establishment have been more than generous. More neighborhood parks and other facilities would be beneficial to the entire community, she adds.

If elected, Mrs. Johnson does not look forward to being a member of the "in-group" on the village board. "After all, it's been so long since an independent served on the board it's hard to predict just how the trustees and mayor would act," she said.

A GRADUATE of Pasadena City College and San Diego State College, Mrs. Johnson did graduate work in special education for the mentally retarded. She also served as a demonstration teacher and curriculum consultant in the San Diego public school system.

During the nearly five years she has lived in Schaumburg, Mrs. Johnson has been active in Schaumburg Township Mental Health Board, the area provisional League of Women Voters, the township Republican organization and several other community and civic groups. She was a finalist in the Jayceettes Outstanding Young Woman of the Year contest last year.

She and her husband, David, live at 334 Hazel Drive with their sons, Jay, 4, and Darrin, 2.

Schaumburg independent

Helen Jackson

"I don't want to live in 'supercity', but I can't afford to move," said Helen Jackson. Her alternative to Schaumburg becoming the "northwest loop" is campaigning for a four-year village trustee term as an independent.

She is listed on the April 17 ballot as Mrs. Alan Jackson.

The candidate, a 31-year-old mother and former college instructor, thinks residents feel "a genuine need for representation" because all current trustees are affiliated with one local party.

"I just don't feel we are getting two sides of every issue," she pointed out stressing that "overbuilding is not what the individual home owner wants."

She believes the interest of business override those of the home owner in the eyes of the current administration. But, if elected, Mrs. Jackson intends to reemphasize those individual concerns by pushing for improved village services and elimination of flooding and sanitary sewer back-ups.

She favors immediate "cessation of rapid and abnormal growth" opposing "high density apartments, an inadequate hospital site and airport expansion."

IN ORDER TO effectively control multi-family development, Mrs. Jackson suggests building permits be denied for "great numbers of buildings with high density." She believes open space must be more carefully preserved and suggests a maximum of 12 to 15 units per acre "to catch up" though she would prefer a ceiling of nine or less units per acre.

Seeing no arguments in favor of the 20-acre builder donated future home of Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center North, Mrs. Jackson thinks the land should be sold in order to obtain a better site. However, she will

"reluctantly" support the health care center "if it is inevitable and to be our only hospital."

She opposes airport expansion because of proximity to O'Hare, noise, pollution, congestion and other dangers and considers the facility unnecessary. "Schaumburg is attractive to business now and we don't need an expanded airport to bribe others into the area," she feels.

She would press for more inspectors (building and health) and a youth worker and believes the community must take a more realistic look at its existing drug problems.

But, Mrs. Jackson admits to mixed feelings concerning a unit school district proposal hoping that a feasibility study will be "two-sided." Builder contributions, she says, should continue to go to the elementary school district.

Not having researched financing of a mass transportation system, she didn't comment except that personally, she has no need for it.

THOUGH CRITICAL of village abolition of a mosquito control program without offering a satisfactory substitute, the candidate says she favors spraying if done with chemicals not dangerous to small animals. Larvaciding is considered ineffective by the candidate.

While Schaumburg levies no municipal tax, Mrs. Jackson thinks "hidden taxes" are paid in inspection fees and permits. And if surplus funds exist, she would like to see them put to use in solving flooding problems and increasing youth services.

She has "open feelings" toward a possible merger with Hoffman Estates though she feels there is a need for more cooperation with that village.

Discussing moderate and low-income housing, Mrs. Jackson does not believe a need currently exists in Schaumburg though she feels low-income groups should be given low interest mortgages.

Concerning the civic-cultural complex, Mrs. Jackson said she questions village priorities. "The administration will be moving to a new building but it has not taken steps to solve flooding problems or help youth," she commented.

Regarding campaign funds, the candidate said her expenses will be kept below $100 and will come from nickels and dimes culled from her family food budget.

A GRADUATE of Rosary College, Mrs. Jackson received an M.A. from Loyola University and subsequently served as a philosophy instructor at Clark College, Dubuque, Iowa, as well as Harper and Triton colleges in the local suburban area.

A resident of Schaumburg for seven years, she has also done substitute teaching in Dist. 54 and taught Confraternity of Christian Doctrine (CCD) classes at St. Marcelline's Catholic Church.

She is a member of the 12th Dist. Republican Women's Organization. Mrs. Jackson and her husband, Alan, live at 1515 Syracuse Lane with their daughters, Alana and Heather.

Not done completely at instigation of Minton, Teichert

Process servers apparently caused summons drama

The decision to dramatically hand out summonses to incumbent village candidates before an audience of Mount Prospect residents during an election forum was apparently made by the process servers themselves.

As best the chain of events can be reconstructed, the act of invading the candidates' night proceedings Monday night by the summons servers was not done completely at the instigation by either challenger Michael Minton or Mayor Robert Teichert.

This much the audience saw as the candidates forum was suddenly interrupted: process servers entered the Old Orchard theater, climbed to the stage and presented Trustees Bud Richardson, Patrick J. Link and Donald B. Furst with legal papers. Teichert was served minutes before and explained to the audience what was going on. The announcement was met with both cheers and boos.

Ron Wronski, chief of the process servers for the Cook County Circuit Court, told the Herald yesterday his instructions were to issue the summonses by Monday at the latest.

THE SUMMONSES were issued in connection with a court suit filed by mayoral candidate Michael Minton seeking to have the court stop the "truth squad" activities of the incumbent trustees.

A court hearing on the matter will be held today before Judge Harry Comerford at 10 a.m. at the Chicago Civic Center.

Chief process server Wronski explained that when public officials are concerned, "we usually try to serve papers on a meeting night... the writ specified they be served at the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy."

With the election a week away and no village board meeting scheduled on Monday night, Wronski said his deputies had to serve the papers at another location.

"Our job is to serve the writs. Our policy is to do it as discreetly as possible," he said.

Monday night Teichert was called out of the auditorium by a Mount Prospect policeman at which time he was served with the papers in the passageway. Teichert then walked back to the podium and invited the servers to give the writs to the three board members. Teichert explained to the audience later that he did that to prevent each board member being called out of the room one at a time.

MINTON TOLD the audience he had specifically asked that the summonses not be served at the candidates' forum and that the night not be interrupted.

What apparently happened was that the deputy, finding out he could not serve the writs at the village hall, sought out the objects of the papers at the forum.

Wronski told the Herald the deputies talked to police outside the forum and stated they wanted to serve the writs discreetly. Sgt. Ralph Doney of the Mount Prospect Police Department then asked the deputies to give him the summonses so he could present them after the meeting going on inside.

The deputies refused to hand over the writs, saying they had to personally serve them. At that point Teichert was called down from the stage. According to Mount Prospect Police Chief Bert Giddens' office, the procedure of process servers delivering writs to policemen instead of the persons on the papers is common.

NEVERTHELESS, the summonses were issued before an audience of some 400 persons after the process servers refused to surrender them and after Teichert directed that they come to the podium.

Meanwhile, more details of Minton's Monday meeting with U.S. Attorney James Thompson have been learned.

Thompson told the Herald yesterday he met with Minton and Minton "laid before my staff his complaints." Minton has said he gave Thompson details of "shady land deals," the question of the ballot and the incumbent slate's "truth squad." The indication (from Thompson) was of "extreme interest," according to Minton.

Early yesterday, Thompson told the Herald he was not planning an investigation into the issues brought up by Minton. Later, after a call from Minton, Thompson said he would like to change his response to "no comment."

"We have not indicated either way whether there is any federal jurisdiction involved," he said. "We have not indicated either way whether we will take any action."

Teichert campaign called 'a big lie'

by TOM VON MALDER
Michael Minton, candidate for Mount Prospect mayor, branded Robert D. Teichert's campaign a "big lie," during the Old Orchard Country Club candidates' forum Monday.

The 26-year-old challenger accused Teichert of never speaking out on any issue and he began answering the 11 challenges given him by Teichert at an earlier debate last week.

Teichert began the mayoral candidates' portion of the forum by outlining the benefits of living in the village. He then spoke of credibility and asked Minton for specific names, dates and places of incidents alleged in charges Minton has made.

All village meetings of the board, plan commission and board of appeals have been open meetings, Teichert said, and are either on tape or have been transcribed by a court reporter. He said if Minton had evidence otherwise or of infractions of local ordinances and federal laws, he should file suit in court and "not in the form of vaguely worded press releases."

Teichert also handed to reporters copies of his income tax statements for the past four years and proof of his payment of property taxes. Teichert's gross income for last year, $36,735.41, is primarily from his salary as patent counsel for Ekco Housewares Inc., and $2,000 as mayor. About a sixth of his income was from the sale of a stock option.

MINTON SAID he was refused copies of "certain documents" (meaning the village's proposed budget, among others) by village employees. He said a complaint had been filed with the Better Government Association regarding the $4,800 spent on the village calendar. Minton has called the calendar a campaign gimmick (Continued on page 3)

Congreve supporting Minton

Former Mount Prospect Mayor Daniel Congreve told the Herald yesterday he will endorse challenger Michael Minton in the village's hotly contested mayoral race, and also cast his support for Leo Floros for village trustee.

Congreve said he is supporting Minton because "the damage done to the village in the past four years is ridiculous" and that a change in administration is badly needed. Congreve was the incumbent mayor and Robert Teichert's opponent four years ago when Teichert was the challenger.

Congreve said he will vote for Floros because he is the sole independent seeking election to the village board. "We need somebody besides all 'yes men' on the village board," Congreve said yesterday.

Dan Congreve

The race for the village presidency four years ago pitted Congreve against Teichert who was then a minority member of the village board. Teichert won that election in what many political observers considered an upset.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The administration proposed raising the $1.60 per hour minimum wage to $2.30 over three years, a move one House Republican described as a compromise in the wage fight that stalemated the last Congress.

President Nixon asked Congress to give him an unprecedented free hand in the field of trade, including increased exchanges with Communist nations and the power to retaliate against countries discriminating against U.S. exports.

New Orleans Police Superintendent Clarence B. Giarrusso disclosed that six policemen wounded in the January gun battle at the Howard Johnson's motel were shot by police.

Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., has introduced legislation which would repeal the newy-instituted taxpayers' $1 checkoff to finance presidential elections.

Many mothers around the country took their children to work yesterday as part of a protest of cutbacks in federally-funded day care centers.

The House sustained President Nixon's veto of a rural water and sewer grant program, giving him the second major victory in a week in his fight with Congress over federal spending priorities.

The state

The Illinois House yesterday passed a bill making the death sentence mandatory in certain murder cases despite claims it is "cruel and unusual punishment."

Once a month, for six hours, a good conduct inmate at any Department of Corrections penal institution could visit privately with his family under a bill passed by the Illinois House.

Sales tax redistribution bill voted down in State House

by BOB LAHEY

SPRINGFIELD — An Illinois House committee yesterday voted down a bill aimed at sharing the sales tax wealth from giant shopping centers among all cities and villages.

The measure would have caused the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars each year for several Northwest suburbs by redistributing the one per cent sales tax municipalities keep on purchases made at local stores and businesses.

By a vote of 13 to 1, the House cities and villages committee gave the bill a "do not pass" recommendation, a move that generally means the death of proposed legislation.

The measure, introduced by State Rep. Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, was the object of intense lobbying pressure by suburban officials.

Several northwest suburban mayors were here yesterday to express their opposition to the bill which, as one legislator said, "would take the money from the towns where the problems are and put it out with the pigs and cows."

LONE COMMITTEE member voting was State Rep. Eugene Schlickma, R-Arlington Heights. He said his vote came only because he supports establishment of a commission to come up with a sales tax redistribution formula.

"I would like to turn the clock back to the time before the sales tax formula was devised" and start again with a more equitable formula, Schlickman told the committee.

However, he said changes proposed in the bill would have a "convulsive effect" on communities that depend on sales tax revenue.

The bill would have given only 20 per cent of the one-cent municipal sales tax to towns where it is collected. The remaining 80 per cent would have been distributed statewide on a per capita basis, in the way gasoline and state income taxes are given to local governments.

Figures distributed by Rep. Donald L. Totten R-Schaumburg, showed that all Northwest suburban communities in his district would lose revenue under the bill, with the exception of Palatine and Hoffman Estates, which would have more than doubled their sales tax revenue.

Of 10 cities and villages in the Northwest suburbs, total sales tax revenue would have dropped from nearly $10 million to slightly over $7.3 million.

AMONG THE officials present were mayors Robert Teichert of Mount Prospect, Robert Atcher of Schaumburg, Nicholas Blase of Niles and Roland Meyer of Rolling Meadows. Also present were George Passolt, village manager of Wheeling and Richard Eppley, village manager of Mount Prospect.

Most were from communities which have large shopping centers and need the money from sales tax for services to these areas, according to their testimony.

Meyer told the committee that in Rolling Meadows sales tax revenue totals $1.2 million coming mostly from industries which the village has labored to attract in order to build its tax base.

Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, drew applause from the crowd jammed in to the small hearing room, saying "there will be no reduction of taxes in the communities which benefit from this bill, and we all know it. The towns which are hurt by it will simply have to go to the people for more taxes in other forms."

Under the formula proposed by the bill, Rolling Meadows' sales tax revenue would have plunged from $1.3 million to $612,000.

In Des Plaines, the drop would be from $2.1 million to $1.4 million; Elk Grove would go according to a partial estimate, from $1.1 million to $661,000, according to figures given to the committee.

The figures would have been less drastic in Arlington Heights, $1.5 million to $1.4 million and Mount Prospect, $1.5 million to $1.1 million.

Palatine would have benefited slightly with an increase in revenue from $567,000 to $580,000. Hoffman Estates, would have enjoyed an increase from $211,000 to $440,000.

Prospect Heights incorporation 'alive'

Despite objections by the Illinois Municipal League, two state legislative committees have recommended passage of bills that would give Prospect Heights a chance to incorporate.

The Illinois House of Representatives Committee on Cities and Villages voted 6-5 to recommend passage of a House bill that would allow Prospect Heights to become a city without consent of neighboring villages. Arlington Heights and Wheeling have objected to the proposed city of about 10,000 residents.

The Illinois Committee on Local Government voted 10-2 to recommend passage of a similar Senate bill. Both bills, introduced into the Illinois General Assembly last month, would permit unincorporated areas of 7,500 or more residents to incorporate without approval of nearby villages. For an area of less than 7,500 persons, the bill requires consent from municipalities within 1½ miles.

Before voting, both committees listened last week to testimony from the Illinois Municipal League, opposing the bills, and the Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA), in favor of the bills.

Tom Fitzsimmons, assistant director of the League, said the group is opposed to the bills because they would create more units of local government.

"WE ARE OPPOSED by policy to the proliferation of further units of local government. We believe if they (Prospect Heights residents) want to live under the charter of incorporation it is available to them by annexing to surrounding communities. Why create another assembly of services which would be quite costly to residents? Besides, when those people decided to move in an unincorporated area they knew what the conditions were."

Fitzsimmons said he was aware Arlington Heights and Wheeling have formally opposed the bills, but that it did not influence the league's position. He said the league will work to defeat the two bills when they get to the House and Senate floors. The bills are sponsored by State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, and State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northfield.

Jack Gilligan, PHIA president, said he testified that the state statutes on incorporation are ambiguous and that the incorporation laws need to be modernized, as proposed in the bills.

Minton quoted Teichert as telling Betterman, "There was no reason why the village should inform the residents of the annexation prior to the approval by the board."

"Shady land deals," Minton said, come in through the high density projects Teichert is allegedly permitting. He said Teichert permitted 2,400 units at Old Orchard despite its only being zoned for 1,000 in the County. (A court order covered all aspects of this development, including density.)

Minton challenged Teichert to "deny the tacit agreement which he has entered in favor of Kenroy Builders to permit high density development of the Mushroom Farm located at Route 83 and Dempster Street." (This land is zoned for multi-family use in Mount Prospect already.)

DIMUCCI BUILDERS, Minton said, were permitted by Teichert to "tamper with public records in violation of the criminal code." He said a lien was involved.

Minton accused Teichert of meeting weekly with Salvatore DiMucci. He asked Teichert why the village has "spent almost $86,000 in bringing water to the Old Orchard Country Club project while the builders have spent only $20,000."

The third mayoral candidate, Albert Motsch, repeated his positions for economy in government, additional traffic safety measures and low-rise senior citizen housing. Motsch said in the past 16 years he has not seen a "bad government" in Mount Prospect.

Teichert campaign called 'a lie' designed to win votes for the Village Party, which Teichert heads.

Throwing a thick envelope down in front of Teichert, Minton said he had gone down to the Cook County Clerk's office and, for $3, purchased a copy of the voter list. The village board, he said, wasted taxpayers' money when they gave a "blank check" to Village Clerk Donald Goodman for the preparation of such a list.

In his rebuttal, Teichert said the county list was only up-dated through last November.

Minton accused the board of being self-appointed censors through their "truth squad." He compared it to 1939 in Germany and said, "Those storm troopers have no place in our village."

Teichert said he had an affidavit stating Minton told at least one resident Teichert was paid $10,000 for his campaign by a local contractor Teichert asked Minton for the name of that contractor.

AGAIN TEICHERT indicated he may sue Minton after the election. Until then, he said, he would reserve further legal action. "I'll meet you on any grounds you choose," he told Minton.

With the last rebuttal, Minton began to answer some of Teichert's challenges.

He said a secret annexation took place on Oct. 27, 1970, on a 56.9-acre parcel between Golf Road and Willow Street, east of Busse Road. Minton said the owner, Merle Betterman, 1508 Willow Ln., told the village he was opposed because residents supposedly had not been notified of the pending annexation.

VOTE FOR Albert J. Motsch

INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE FOR VILLAGE PRESIDENT

I believe from what I have been reading in the local press that the issues and projects proposed by me have started a great "me too" crusade. This is good. It was never intended by me that changes I favored would redound to the benefit of my own ego, but that the city at large would improve its image.

ECONOMY — The goals I have set forth are neither impossible nor extravagant. I stand for economy which at the same time promotes progress. The more we annex, the more personnel we will require. The people of Mt. Prospect prefer a quality city rather than vastness.

TAX UNREST — Convassing the city on foot as I have the past several months has been a pleasure. I have been well received and have become better acquainted with the many fine upstanding people who reside in our city. Ah, yes, they do indeed have various complaints . . . high taxes are invariably mentioned. The people generally do not believe they are receiving the services they are paying for.

URGE TO CAMPAIGN — I made up my mind to campaign for village president after reading the following quote: (The Mount Prospect Herald, August 16, 1972) The title of which was, Eppley's Year. A Team is Built. "I like the fact that the village board has been able to hold taxes down. But I'm afraid the budget is going to have to go up, it will not be exhorbitant though." Yet another time, Eppley said, "Next year's budget will be a shocker when it comes to personnel."

MY EXPERIENCE — I am probably the first senior citizen to declare for village president of Mount Prospect. I believe I am fully capable, aggressive and possess leadership that can attract a large number of citizens to my cause. I have proven by experience that I can successfully supervise, control and coordinate activities with those of management. I served in these capacities for many large corporations as fiscal agent, controller, office manager, auditor, systems manager, chief cost and budget accountant, public accountant and management engineering. I have plenty of initiative, and I use it.

UPDATING OUTMODED CITY — I have long advocated the Central school and its environs as the site for a new village hall and civic center. I also have suggested that the railroad station be moved to a more suitable location. I suggest either underpasses or overpasses to relieve downtown traffic congestion.

SAFETY — We need more safety lights at dangerous intersections especially at Highway 83 and Lincoln St. We need pedestrian overpasses at dangerous crossings for school children and other pedestrians. The guards admit inability to control traffic adequately, I have worked for six years to get traffic lights at Highway 83 and Lincoln Street.

SENIOR CITIZENS — I can not see a high rise home as affording senior citizens security and serenity. They deserve better than a high rise landscaped with cement pavement and highways, breathing in highway pollution and being kept awake by noisy traffic. I propose a structure no higher than two stories built in a park-like setting. Incorporated in this site would be a non-sectarian chapel where ministers of all faiths would be able to co duct services. Bus service at reasonable cost or possibly free could be provided for shopping or medical services.

INVOLVING CITIZENS IN THEIR GOVERNMENT — Citizens of Mt. Prospect, the annexing problem has gotten out of hand — your hands. Not one bit of annexation or high rises or low cost housing should be permitted without a referendum by the citizens.

STUDY TO UPDATE ORDINANCES — I will undertake a professional study of our present government and its commissions to make village government more efficient. I will make a study of outdated village ordinances and have them updated.

ORGANIZING VOTERS TO CHECK ON OFFICIALS — I also want to break down the secrecy in village government by organizing the voters in each precinct to elect a leader to represent them on an "open door committee" which will be required to observe official proceedings and elected officials and report back to their precincts.

I am running for village president on a one dollar per year salary basis. This custom was established during World War I. Albert Motsch and his wife, Marie, have resided in Mt. Prospect 16 years.

Minton, Motsch challenge Teichert for mayor

Robert D. Teichert

'We've started programs that will take up to a decade to complete...'

by TOM VON MALDER

Robert D. Teichert is seeking reelection as mayor of Mount Prospect because he feels the ballot box "is the real testing box."

The 48-year-old lawyer wants to run again because he still is interested in serving the village and because his administration has started programs and planning that will take "two years, five or even a decade" to complete.

His campaign theme has been "experience and accomplishments." He particularly points with pride to the accomplishments made against flooding, "the No. 1 problem, affecting 60 per cent of the village." He listed the Hatten Heights storm sewer, West Park retention basin, Crumley Basin, Weller Creek widening and rechanneling and the recently completed Consoer, Townsend and Associates engineering report as measures taken against flooding in the past four years.

AS MAJOR VILLAGE problems other than flooding, Teichert said he would include traffic, health and safety, water supply, the environment and senior citizen needs. As solutions toward some of those problems, he said his administration has provided two ambulances with cardiac units, the recycling program, central dispatching for police, two Voters will have a choice among three candidates for mayor of Mount Prospect in Tuesday's election. Incumbent Mayor Robert Teichert, who won election four years ago as an independent, now heads the Village Party slate.

Teichert is challenged by Michael Minton and Albert Motsch, both independents. Here are the views of each of the candidates, based on exclusive Herald interviews.

new wells, the capacity to store an additional 4 million gallons of drinking water, and the mutual aid fire alarm system.

Other solutions he named were the fire cadet program, a flood plain ordinance, data processing for water bills and a full-time sanitarian.

Yet, he stressed more the ongoing solutions — such as proposed annexations to the south that would eventually almost double the village's property tax base. He also talked about relocation of the railroad station platform and addition of new commuter parking, studies beginning on the renovation of the downtown (and for a new library), and the pending request for federal funds to build senior citizen housing.

Teichert is running with a full slate this year — four trustee candidates and one village clerk candidate — called the Village Party. This is the first time he has run with a slate. "I don't feel I could have won with a slate in 1969 (against then — Mayor Daniel Congreve)," Teichert said. The fight that year, he added, was an ideological one with Teichert favoring the council-manager form of government and Congreve wanting it "only on paper."

TEICHERT NARROWLY won that fight, and after four years as village trustee, became mayor. A little over two years later, the village board hired Robert J. Eppley, the village's first professional manager. Teichert still considers that one of the village board's best accomplishments. "I feel Eppley is the outstanding manager in Illinois," he said.

Both of Teichert's opponents, Michael Minton and Albert Motsch, have indicated they want to be full-time mayors or very close to full-time. Teichert said he felt that would be "sliding backward." "I don't feel the average mayor is qualified to run the village around the clock," he said.

Teichert spoke of several items he feels still have to be accomplished:

- Flooding: "The multiple-suburban approach to flood control is essential. Unfortunately, each community does not want to give up its autonomy." He said, for example, that the Des Plaines fighting of the Metropolitan Sanitary District treatment plant and interceptor down Rte. 83 has hurt Mount Prospect.

- The village board, he said, is trying to get the MSD to put in the Bauer retention basin north of Central Road as soon as possible. "We don't have the $8 million it will take."

- Cable television: "I'm going to push hard for a cable TV — not to make money or for better TV reception, but to put it in as a utility and allow residents to tap in for burglar and fire detector protection, and to read water meters."

- Cost of government: Teichert said the village's condition is fairly stable now. "We have top notch people performing beautifully. It is evident in the things happening." He pointed out that while the tax rate has more than doubled in the last four years, it is about the same as the 1961 rate. He said the rate was "unwisely" dropped during Congreve's administration when the Randhurst sales tax monies started to come in.

Robert D. Teichert

"I've maintained that our village tax rate should stay about 8 per cent of the total real estate tax bill," he said. He foresees no tax increases, although he fears new state laws may be passed to take away the sales tax monies, and he has pledged to fight such laws. He said he does think a utility tax would be fairer than a real estate property tax; however, he added that he doubted the village would shift.

• Downtown renovation: "I think we should start stockpiling money, perhaps purchase the Central School property. It is a key site that can do wonders for downtown." He sees a commitment being made on the downtown's future within two years, and possible construction by 1980.

Teichert lives at 1205 W. Robin Ln. He and his wife Alice, have three children. He is patent counsel for Ekco Housewares Co. in Franklin Park and Wheeling.

Albert Motsch

'Land annexations and high-priced executives are costing us too much...'

Albert Motsch

"Dollar-a-year" men — those types who worked for the federal government at token salaries — have fallen out of vogue in the years since World War II.

Albert Motsch, mayoral candidate in Mount Prospect, wants to revive the practice, and he has vowed to serve as mayor for the sum of $1 a year. (Currently the mayor's salary is $2,000, with an additional $2,000 to be paid for the mayor's services as liquor commissioner starting May 1.)

Motsch's promise to serve the village at virtually no charge is part of a larger plan he wants to formulate that will reduce village spending. According to Motsch, land annexations plus what he terms "high-priced executives" are costing the village too much money. He has given out few details of his proposal other than to say he promises to keep a tight rein on the village purse strings if he is elected April 17.

MOTSCH ADMITS to being a neophyte among politicians, having never before run for elective office. "One of the main reasons I'm running is that (Robert) Teichert (the incumbent) was the only candidate. I couldn't stand by. So, to wake up the apathy among the voters, I am running."

Subsequent to Motsch's entry in the campaign, a third candidate, Michael Minton, joined the race. But Motsch says he is staying in the race anyway. "If someone had come up with the program I had, I would have withdrawn."

As credentials for the job of mayor, Motsch points to his business background. "I have directed, supervised and coordinated a personnel with management in executive capacities for 30 years. I have been a public accountant, controller, auditor, budget accountant, management engineer and systematizer."

A native of St. Louis, Mo., Motsch has been a Mount Prospect resident 16 years. Now 75 years old, he is retired and residing at 600 S. Pine St.

Motsch prefers to term his campaign pledges a "program" instead of "platform." Says Motsch, "A platform is something that you stand on once every four years, and then step off of after the election." Also, Motsch says he wants his administration to be flexible. Formulating a rigid platform would not serve this purpose, he says.

NEVERTHELESS, he has proposed three major points. First, he calls for conservatism in government, especially where money is concerned. Second, he says he is against "wholesale annexations and high-rise buildings." He cites the annexation of the "New Town" area of Prospect Heights with its 10,000 residents, as the best example of bad annexations.

His third point is "safety for the public." More specifically, he wants a stoplight for Rte. 83 and Lincoln Avenue, and pedestrian overpasses at Rte. 83 and Sha-Bonee Trail and at Emerson Street and the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks.

Motsch wants the citizenry to take a more active role in village government. He would bring this about, first, by having a representative from each village precinct monitor local government and report to residents. He would also set up a board of advisers, a sort of unofficial village president's "Cabinet." The four would be village residents with expertise in various areas involving village functions.

ON THE SUBJECT of downtown redevelopment, Motsch says, "We've got to work with the businessmen, not against them." As a first step in redevelopment, Motsch wants the train station relocated away from the downtown area to relieve traffic congestion. Next he wants overpasses along Northwest Highway at Main and Emerson streets. The third step, he says, is to start the renovation of businesses.

His views on other subjects:

- Low and moderate-income housing: "You've got to have a certain amount of it. But it has to be done right." He elaborated only by saying, "I would want low-rise buildings." He indicated he was unfamiliar with the federally subsidized Huntington Commons apartment development in Mount Prospect.

- Taxes: "Taxes are okay now. I'm mostly concerned about the future." Motsch wants to hold the line on taxes as much as possible and advocates alternate forms of taxation to keep real estate taxes down.

- Mount Prospect Community Action Plan: Motsch endorses the social help agency, started by Teichert more than two years ago, and he supports village funding of the two major CAP programs, the Pump House Hotline and the ICE House Counseling Center.

Michael Minton

'I'm for the preservation of the quality of suburban life...residents aren't getting what they're entitled to.'

by TOM VON MALDER

Michael H. Minton, 26, says he is running for Mount Prospect mayor because he sees the village fast becoming "a backyard of Chicago" and he wants to stop that dash toward urbanization.

When he returned from law school about two years ago, Minton said he "saw Mount Prospect growing a lot, not only in size of people but in its boundaries and type of residences." He said he saw too many multi-family developments where it used to be almost all single family. (He has lived in the village since he was seven.)

"I am running for the preservation of this suburban quality of life," he said, adding he has seen a "misuse of the taxpayers' funds, wasteful spending and services that have not been expanded."

"I am deeply concerned," he said, "that the residents are not asked what they want for Mount Prospect. The residents are not getting what they are entitled to."

BUT WHY TRY to start at the top? "I feel I have the talent and the right attitude to run for mayor. What Mount Prospect needs is new direction. Village government has been too closed-door. We need less of the tin-God politicians and more common sense. I felt, very honestly, that I would make a better mayor now than I might make in 10 years."

Twelve months of preparation and a walk throughout the village, which even now is heading for its final stages, is the basis of Minton's campaign to the people. With him he brings promises to lower taxes, to fight high-rises and multi-family complexes and to make village government more responsive.

He would have annexations by referendum only, and strongly believes "you do not have to annex a problem to control it," as he said was done with Huntington Commons. Yet he also believes that property can be successfully annexed and rezoned single-family to avoid scheduled high density apartment use on the land. This can be done "if (in court) you can show it (such annexation and rezoning) is in the best interest of the community."

Opposition to Huntington Commons is a keystone in Minton's campaign. "I am opposed to the way Huntington Commons was brought into the community. There was an air of secrecy about it. The families in that area and really, the residents of Mount Prospect — no one knew that we had federally subsidized housing on a low to moderate income level built in Mount Prospect."

Again, he would have a referendum before permitting any low income housing in the village.

MINTON SAID he believes there are problems inherent in low income housing and those problems have now come to Mount Prospect.

"We have had the problems now developing in Mount Prospect. There is a crime wave and a crime pattern in southern Mount Prospect. We have instances investigated by police officers of two rapes, a shooting, a stabbing and a pistol whipping in one building of Huntington Commons within a five-week period," he said.

That period was about a month or two ago, according to Minton. He charged the police reports on the incidents got "lost in the paper shuffle." Minton would not reveal the names of any involved in the incidents because he promised the officers not to reveal them.

ON OTHER MATTERS, Minton said he is in favor of a renovation of the downtown area, citing parking as the worst problem. He accused the present village government of being too slow to tackle the problem.

"The merchants are willing to spend money on rehabilitation and expansion of the downtown area. They realize it will cost them money and it is not the homeowners' responsibility," he said.

Minton is calling for a special tax district to be set up that would include all of the downtown area. Then "a tax (would) be imposed based on the fair market value of the real estate located in our downtown area." This revenue would be used to provide more parking, for expansion and to promote growth, he said.

There would be no high-rises, nothing taller than three-story buildings under his plan. "The existing structures are sufficient," he said.

Minton agreed a new library is needed and said money for it should come from the available revenue sharing funds. He does not feel a new municipal building is needed. "I see no reason to expand our present village building."

He said there was some space in the current building not being utilized to its fullest, specifically a room near the finance office. Also, he said he would have a new police station built, which would in turn make more space in the current village hall.

THE CURRENT POLICE force is undermanned, Minton said, and he has pledged to add 37 new policemen if elected. "The village is beginning to suffer as a whole from the lack of police protection," he said, pointing to rise in vandalism. He feels it is a waste of time for the policemen to fill out a report on every call answered.

As for the proposed $6.6 million 1973-74 village budget, Minton said he will cut it by $2.3 million. The only specifics he gave were that some salaries "are way out of line," the use of village cars for private employee use (such as for Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley) would be stopped and federal funds would be used whenever possible.

Minton and his wife Mary recently moved to 1207 W. Lounquist Blvd., after living in a Mount Shire apartment. He is employed with the Arlington Heights law firm of Biestek and Facchini.

Sales tax redistribution bill voted down in State House

by BOB LAHEY
SPRINGFIELD — An Illinois House committee yesterday voted down a bill aimed at sharing the sales tax wealth from giant shopping centers among all cities and villages.

Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, was the object of intense lobbying pressure by suburban officials.

However, he said changes proposed in the bill would have a "convulsive effect" on communities that depend on sales tax revenue.

Hoffman Estates, which would have more than doubled their sales tax revenue.

Meyer told the committee that in Rolling Meadows sales tax revenue totals $1.2 million coming mostly from industries which the village has labored to attract in order to build its tax base.

bill. Rolling Meadows' sales tax revenue would have plunged from $1.3 million to $612,000.

Congress appropriates cash for housing at Nike site

The U.S. Navy reportedly has received a congressional appropriation to build 140 housing units for Navy personnel and dependents at the Arlington Heights Nike Base.

Approval of the housing came over the objections of the Arlington Heights Park District and village officials who had hoped to acquire the entire 137-acre Nike base for a regional park.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

The administration proposed raising the $1.60 per hour minimum wage to $2.30 over three years, a move one House Republican described as a compromise in the wage fight that stalemated the last Congress.

Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., has introduced legislation which would repeal the new y-instituted taxpayers' $1 checkoff to finance presidential elections.

The House sustained President Nixon's veto of a rural water and sewer grant program, giving him the second major victory in a week in his fight with Congress over federal spending priorities.

The state

The Illinois House yesterday passed a bill making the death sentence mandatory in certain murder cases despite claims it is "cruel and unusual punishment."

Once a month, for six hours, a good conduct inmate at any Department of Corrections penal institution could visit privately with his family under a bill passed by the Illinois House.

Home rule can be good— but costly real. Until the legal standing of the nine-member board is upheld, for example, every decision of the new board could be contested as unconstitutional.

There is also the chance the Village of Arlington Heights will lose the "friendly suit" — a fate which befell the Village of Oak Park when it attempted to create a special downtown taxing district for business district redevelopment.

The board expansion already has been upheld in Cook County Circuit Court, and Village Atty Jack Siegel has expressed confidence that the constitutionality of a nine-member board will be sustained.

In fact, of the four home rule ordinances adopted by the village board, including board expansion, apartment licensing, a $10 new car sales tax, and a solicitor's ordinance, the village has lost only the auto sales tax measure, which was repealed after the supreme court held that both the village and the county had the right to collect the tax.

Village Pres. John Woods, who was the floor leader of the home-rule article at the 1970 constitutional convention in Springfield, says he is satisfied with Arlington Heights' success with home rule, but thinks some of the need for litigation could have been avoided by legislative action.

"The courts have been reasonably good, although I have disagreed with some unusually restrictive decisions. In state after state, we have seen the reluctance of the court to give the full sweep of home rule to municipalities," Woods said.

Woods, who along with Siegel served on former Gov. Richard Ogilvie's task force on constitutional implementation, says the legislature has moved too slowly, "slower than would have been anticipated," in passing legislation that could smooth implementation of municipalities' home rule powers.

"The legislature seems to devote a disproportionate amount of time to extremely important matters like mass transportation, and then does not have enough time for important items like municipal home rule," he said.

Siegel said the implementation task force foresaw the volume of litigation that home rule would spark. "At the time, we said home rule would be a full-employment bill for lawyers for the next 10 years."

But he says he believes the courts are a better ground to clarify home rule than the legislature.

"If we go to the legislature and ask for enabling legislation, it's the same as saying we (the municipality) don't have the power the constitution gives us. It is better and sounder law to go through the courts."

Arlington Heights Asst. Village Atty Wayne Silva, who recently attended a lawyers conference on home rule, agrees that the supreme court could curtail municipal home rule powers, but he too says action by the legislature could end up weakening the constitutional provision.

"Municipalities felt when home rule was enacted that it was designed to enable them to perform functions without having to look to the legislature," Silva said. "If they have to go back to the legislature everytime they want to do something, then home rule has no meaning."

Silva said it was largely for this reason the Illinois Municipal League has petitioned the supreme court for a rehearing in the Oak Park case, rather than wait for the legislature to pass a bill now pending that would specifically authorize the creation of special districts.

A proposal by Arlington Heights banker Douglas Dodds to create a special downtown district here is linked to the outcome of Oak Park's effort. Dodds plan is for a special taxing district that would cover the central business district and be used to finance the construction of downtown parking garages.

The special taxing district is just one revenue avenue now open to home rule municipalities, but still relatively unexplored. The controversial nature of taxation has kept most home rule municipalities, including Arlington Heights, from levying the new taxes available to them.

"Revenue raising is a new area (of home rule) that I'm sure is going to be explored as communities look for ways to get away from the heavy dependence on the real property tax," Woods said.

Theoretically, Arlington Heights could levy a tax on just about everything from gasoline and tobacco to liquor and apartment rentals. It could even enact a pari-mutuel tax on betting at Arlington Park Race Track, or a motel tax similar to that passed in Palatine.

"There are a wide range of possible taxes to be considered, some of which will have to be discarded because they are economically or politically infeasible," Woods said.

Any new home rule tax would almost certainly be challenged and result in still more court battles.

"I think most municipalities have really shied away from an aggressive use of home rule because they're not willing to fight for it," Silva said.

That's been the story of home rule to date — action and litigated reaction. Ultimately the court, more than the legislature, the constitutional convention or any local village board or city council will determine just how great the impact of home rule will be.

Lecture slated today

The Northwest Suburban Montessori School is sponsoring a lecture by Larry Lewis today at 8 p.m. in the Thomas Junior High School hall.

Lewis, a director of the program in Oak Park, will discuss preschool and elementary Montessori philosophy — the philosophy of non-structured learning. Admission is $1 and the public is invited. Thomas Junior High School is located at Arlington Heights Road and Thomas Street.

Newspaper drive Saturday

Wheeling Township Teen-age Republicans (TARS) will sponsor a newspaper drive Saturday to earn money to fund their biennial eight-day trip to Washington D.C.

Township residents may take old newspapers to a special trailer truck located in Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez, Arlington Heights. TARS will also pick up newspapers at the curb in areas bounded by Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road, Kirchoff and Arlington Heights roads.

Residents in other areas should bring newspapers to the park or call 259-8843 for pick-up.

Contest winners named

Camp Fire Girls Talcott District, which includes Arlington Heights, Wheeling and Buffalo Grove villages, recently held a poster contest to launch the Camp Fire Girl candy campaign.

First place winners received wooden plaques with the Camp Fire symbol. They are: Stacy Worchester, first grade; Sandra Engmann, second grade; Liane Israel, third grade; Dana Johnson, fourth grade; Susan Thompson, fifth grade; Chris Hogan, sixth grade; Mimi Zygowicz, seventh grade; Laura Engmann, eighth grade and Kris Glatz, Horizon Club.

Second place winners received blue ribbons. Winners include Debbie Weinstein, first grade; Suzy Rice, second grade; Beth Ehlers, third grade; Patty Purcell, fourth grade; Joy Kicker, fifth grade; Jeannie Israel and Susan Lally, sixth grade; Ellen Engmann, seventh grade; Patty Dinse, eighth grade and Linda Wilke, Horizon Club.

The Camp Fire girls also sponsored two father-daughter buffet dinners recently. Several groups performed in five-minute entertainment programs.

St. Viator seeking sea wall protection

The Clerics of St. Viator, 1212 E. Euclid, Arlington Heights, recently applied for a construction permit from the Illinois Division of Water Resource Management, Springfield, to construct a sea wall to protect a residential building in Chicago.

The building, located near Sheridan Road and Granville Avenue, has been subject to the rising water and high waves of Lake Michigan. It has been a residence for clerics attending and teaching at Loyola University, Chicago, since 1940.

A spokesman for the Clerics of St. Viator said the sea wall was necessary to preserve the building.

Teachers to weigh compromise pact

by JILL BETTNER

School Dist. 21 teachers are set today to consider the proposed 1973-74 contract as revised Monday by representatives of the Wheeling Faculty Council (WFC) and the school board.

Dist. 21 Assistant Supt. John Barger, chairman of the school board negotiating team, said yesterday the new contract is a compromise.

"There are some things we would have preferred to have in it and some things I'm sure they would have preferred to have in it, but when you negotiate, you have to compromise," he said. "I think the contract is fair for both parties."

Barger refused to elaborate further and would not disclose the terms of the agreement worked out Monday. Margo Richter, chairman of the WFC negotiating team, also refused any comment when contacted yesterday.

Miss Richter said last week the WFC executive committee rejected a proposed multi-year contract that had earlier been agreed upon by the bargaining representatives.

ACCORDING TO Miss Richter, the teachers planned Monday to ask the school board negotiating team to accept the terms of that proposed multi-year contract as a one-year agreement. Both Miss Richter and Barger refused yesterday, however, to verify that the contract going to the teachers today is a one-year agreement or that it contains the same terms as the proposed multi-year contract.

If the teachers approve the revised contract today, Barger said the agreement will be considered by the school board Thursday night at its regular meeting.

Because the negotiations have been closed this year, information on the terms of the contract package has been sketchy. Last year's sessions were open to the public.

Barger revealed several weeks ago some of the points that were discussed by bargaining representatives. They included:

- The 1973-74 school calendar.
- Extra duty salary for teachers.
- Basic salary for teachers.
- Insurance coverage for teachers.
- Contract duration.

IT IS NOT known if the bargaining teams have reached agreement on these issues or if additional terms are being discussed.

Last year, representatives of the Illinois Education Association (IEA) bargained for local teachers. The 1972-73 contract, when it was finally approved last September, included a 6 per cent hike in annual teacher salaries.

The 6 per cent pay increase was split up among the teachers according to a pay schedule devised by the WFC. The contract provided $3,825,352 for the pay schedule as compared to $3,608,823 allotted in 1971.

Other terms included in the present contract that is set to expire in June are:

- The procedures for negotiating contracts.
- 10 days sick leave for teachers, one day personal leave with the approval of the district and one day personal leave without approval. All sick days and personal leave days not used can accumulate to 100 days.

• The board of education will pay group health and accident insurance for all full-time employees.

Miss Richter said when the talks ended last year she was pleased with the contract. Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill also said he felt the settlement was "a good one." He said the 6 per cent pay raise was competitive with increases in other districts at that time.

Gill has not commented on this year's talks and was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Meet your Dist. 25 school board candidates

William Beck: 'We must continually seek better ways to improve our curriculum...'

There are no major issues in this year's campaign because the people of Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 are satisfied with the education their children are getting, according to William Beck, incumbent school board candidate.

"That doesn't mean the district can't get any better, however," said the caucus-endorsed candidate, who lives with his wife and three children at 306 S. Windsor. It also doesn't mean there are no problems facing the district.

"We must always be concerned that we may not be establishing a good educational foundation for our children. We should not compare ourselves to other school districts, either, but to our potential," said Beck. "We are constantly solving problems."

Though Beck admits he is not an educator, he says the board should continually seek out better ways to improve the curriculum, keeping in mind that "kids are individuals."

William Beck

TO PROVIDE the best education possible, Beck says he will continue to insist the administration hire the best teachers available.

Beck calls teachers the "high leverage employees" in the district because "they're the ones who get the job done." Though he welcomes dialogue with teachers, Beck said he would rather not speak to a formal teachers' assembly.

"Speaking formally to a group of teachers would be short circuiting the administration. The teachers should deal with the administration in most cases," said Beck. "If teachers want to talk to board members, however, it seems the appropriate place would be at board meetings to which the public is invited."

Beck, who is serving his third year on the board negotiating team, is for merit pay and against negotiations open to the public.

"Merit pay is something to negotiate for. The board has, in the past, indicated an interest. But it's up to the teachers to request it," said Beck.

THE OBJECTIVE in contract talks is to reach an agreement, not to stage a drama, according to Beck.

"The parties to the agreement should sit down and work it out. We don't need any third party pressures. Both sides would start saying things for effect, not for agreement," said Beck. "Closed-door negotiations are in the best interests of the public."

Five candidates are seeking three school board seats in Arlington Heights Elementary School Dist. 25.

Seeking office are William Beck, James R. DeVuono, Edith Jolly, John Patrick O'Brien and Richard Schlott. Beck and Schlott are incumbents and have been endorsed by the school district caucus along with Mrs. Jolly. Running as independents are DeVuono and O'Brien. The election is Saturday.

Besides negotiations, Beck says his major concern as a board member has been, and will be, to find better ways of spending taxpayer's money.

"We don't have to worry about how much money we are going to get — we can't control the income," said Beck. "We should talk about spending what we get better."

Spending wisely is what differentiates between good and bad school districts, he said.

"Equal funding isn't going to make for equal education," said Beck. "What we should have is equality of opportunity — that means we will have the opportunity to be unequal and excel if we can."

BECK SAYS local control must be retained because each community should have the "realistic opportunity to excel."

Local control also means keeping the district to a manageable size and therefore Beck does not favor a unit district which would include High School Dist. 214 and its feeder elementary districts.

"The financial advantage that some people thought would be the result of a unit district is quickly being eroded away. Personally, I would rather handle a dual district of just elementary students than the same number of elementary and high school students in a unit district," said Beck. "But we should continue to look into the question of forming unit districts especially if it could mean better management."

BECK DOESN'T agree with the current district discipline policy and fought against it before it passed a few months ago.

"What we have is a procedure rather than a policy," said Beck. "We should have just made a policy of no corporal punishment in the district. The way our statement is worded now, the only time a teacher may hit a child is under very controlled circumstances. I think each case should be dealt with individually."

"If a six-foot eighth grader goes after a five-foot teacher I sure hope she defends herself," said Beck.

Beck, a process engineer at Honeywell in Arlington Heights, advocates private schools as an alternative to public funds should be used to support private schools.

James DeVuono: 'The only issue...is the caucus and the dangers with it'

James R. DeVuono, independent Dist. 25 school board candidate, is pounding the streets of Arlington Heights in an attempt to get people involved in the school board election and in the district.

"The only issue in this campaign is the school board caucus and the problems and dangers with it," said DeVuono, who tried for a board seat last year and was defeated by more than a two to one margin.

DeVuono says that for the past 18 years the school board has been appointed by the caucus, noting that no one has ever beaten a caucus-endorsed candidate at the polls. He said he would not accept caucus endorsement and refused to go before the group.

DEVUONO, WHO lives with his wife and five children at 1211 N. Mitchell, has lived in the district for nine years. He owns an independent sales agency in the construction business.

James DeVuono

"People in this community pay taxes and most of them don't even know there's an election. If people continue not to get involved they won't have the opportunity to get involved much longer," said DeVuono who got a record 1,000 signatures on his nominating petitions. Last year only 908 ballots were cast in the school board election.

The people aren't voting because the caucus precludes an election, he said.

"There were about 64 people who voted in the caucus endorsement this year. I'd hardly call that representative of a community of our size," said DeVuono.

"Granted, caucus-backed candidates have talked about community involvement, but I haven't seen any of them doing anything about it," said DeVuono. "Don't they think the public should be involved?"

THE DANGER of letting the caucus pick the board candidates is that local control is slipping away, according to DeVuono.

"They're talking about combining districts and more and more decisions are coming from Springfield," said DeVuono. "We cannot let circumstances develop that would take away local control."

He says the communication problem in Dist. 25 goes deeper than between the public and the district.

"There is a void between the administration and the teachers. The board should open all lines of communications to the teachers and be fair, honest and just," said DeVuono.

"Teachers shouldn't be forced to grasp for power and they won't if we keep lines of communication open," he said.

DEVUONO SAID the schools should strive for the maximum growth of each individual and especially the good citizenship of each individual.

"We can build rockets and send them to the moon, but we still allow turmoil in our cities," he said. "It is also our duty to make kids understand how our government functions."

If he were elected to the board, DeVuono said he would do a careful study of the curriculum by visiting every school and meeting every teacher and administrator in the district.

He says teachers should decide what's best in matters of discipline, but should not have absolute free rein to react emotionally to discipline problems.

"Teachers should take the emotion out of the situation first. Then sit down and discuss the problem slowly and objectively," said DeVuono. "There won't be any problems with discipline if teachers will think before they act."

DEVUONO THINKS the school board should have thought more before they acted in the case of John D. Fender, fired last June for alleged cruelty in his relations with students. He said the board should have waited for the criminal case to be settled. Fender was found innocent of battery charges.

"It would have been wise for the board to make their decision about Fender after the criminal case was settled," he said.

He is against unit school districts. "Bureaucracy breeds bureaucracy and enlarging the district isn't going to cost any less to run. If unit districts get more state aid than dual districts then the law should be changed," said DeVuono. "We haven't done such a bang-up job as a small district, and increased size sure isn't going to help."

DeVuono says he is going to win the election with his group of over 15 workers who will knock on doors of district residents until election day.

"If people don't respond to the election with the amount of effort we are putting into this campaign, it will be a death blow to the elective process," said DeVuono.

Edith Jolly: 'I may not know all the answers...but I'll know where to get them.'

Schools have always been a major concern for Edith Jolly, caucus-backed candidate for the Dist. 25 board of education.

She was a teacher in Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, before moving to Arlington Heights 13 years ago. Besides working with local PTAs, especially on legislative committees, Mrs. Jolly has been through a total of 31 school years with her four children.

"Schools are my thing," she said. She has also been on committees to build high school and organize Harper College. She lives at 1310 N. Mitchell with her husband, Robert, and four children.

As a school board member, Mrs. Jolly hopes to open lines of communication with the people of the district.

Edith Jolly

"I may not be able to answer everyone's questions, but I will know where to direct people to get the answers," she said. Mrs. Jolly said people should deal directly with school district personnel and that an ombudsman isn't needed.

THOUGH SHE says the schools are "basically doing a very good job," she also said she is not totally satisfied with the district.

"I'd like to see a full-scale foreign language and music program in the district," she said. "I'd also like to see full evaluations done on innovative programs."

While she is in favor of innovative programs, Mrs. Jolly says that the new open classrooms which feature individualized learning make for parent frustration.

"We, as parents, have to make sure children are learning the basics," she said. "That doesn't mean the district should teach for a testing program but we have to see if we're moving ahead or not."

MRS. JOLLY suggests on-going evaluations by professionals both in and outside the school district be done on innovative programs.

"There's great merit to individualized programs, but we can't ignore the basics," she said.

Though Mrs. Jolly is committed to local control of the schools, she wants to make sure they get as much public money as possible.

"Public money should go only to public schools, our public schools just can't afford any money drain," said Mrs. Jolly. "We must make a concerted effort to receive our fair share of revenue without relinquishing local control."

Because she wants to keep a tight grasp on local schools, Mrs. Jolly wouldn't want to see a dual district which would include High School Dist. 214 and its feeder schools.

"I'm a small-town person and I think it would be insane to have such a large district," she said. "We need local school control which promotes local interest in schools."

BUT WITHIN local schools, Mrs. Jolly said lines of communication between the board, the administration, the teachers, parents and students must be followed.

"I'd be glad to talk to members of the teachers association, for example, about anything they want. But I'd be in no position to solve problems or make decisions for them. Teachers shouldn't come directly to the board, they should go through the administration. But at the same time, the teachers must know that the board isn't turned off to them," said Mrs. Jolly.

Merit pay for teachers is a good idea, according to Mrs. Jolly, but she doesn't know how it would be administered.

"Parents and kids know who the good teachers are, but there may also be vindictive parents or administrators who gang up on a teacher, or some good teachers may just be overlooked," she said. "It's a very subject system, but merit pay should be investigated."

John P. O'Brien: 'Open or structured classes are not the answer to teaching...'

John Patrick O'Brien, an independent candidate for the School Dist. 25 board of education, plans a low-key campaign aimed at disgruntled parents.

O'Brien, 520 N. Haddon, was an unsuccessful candidate for the village library board.

"I'm not a joiner," said O'Brien. "But I have two more children to put through the school system and I think I can contribute to the board as a concerned taxpayer."

O'Brien, who has had his law office in the village for 11 years, also says he can add continuity to the board.

"We have a substantial turnover in this town. Well-intentioned people come here with novel, untested teaching programs then they're gone," said O'Brien.

John P. O'Brien

THE SCHOOL BOARD, he said, should take the pulse of the people to find out how to communicate better with the school programs. He also says parents should have more of a choice about what type of classroom their children are in.

"Open classes are not the answer to teaching, nor are structured classes. We should divide the classes up and provide what's best for the kids."

O'Brien said principals should decide what happens in the classrooms and teachers shouldn't be able to arbitrarily choose to teach in an open classroom situation.

"Individualized education hasn't provided us with anything new. We still have a body of accumulated knowledge and it is the responsibility of the school district to teach it," he said.

FINANCING THE schools in the future is the biggest problem facing the district, he said. He would like to see the reinstatement of the personal property tax and says he would study the problem in an effort to stabilize the district's financial picture.

O'Brien says the teachers in the district are paid fairly, "no different than any other employable professional."

He says that open negotiations would only make for a "mob scene" and wouldn't accomplish anything.

"People must depend on their elected representatives to do the best thing in this type of situation," he said.

Discipline, however, should not be the concern of the schools, according to O'Brien.

"Parents shouldn't expect teachers to discipline their children. If a student becomes a problem, he should be sent home to his parents," said O'Brien. "Teachers shouldn't take the responsibility of striking a child."

O'BRIEN SAID the John Fender decision, in which a teacher was fired for alleged cruelty to students, is typical of the ills of the system.

"Too many people think that you have to whack a kid to discipline him," he said.

O'Brien said he wouldn't mind seeing public money spent on private education.

"Wherever kids are being educated we should pay for it. Where you teach isn't important," he said.

A 12-month school year also appeals to O'Brien who says the current system wastes the district's resources of both buildings and teachers.

O'BRIEN SAYS the Dist. 25 Nominating Committee "doesn't know all about everything." He did not ask for endorsement from the group.

"The man who presented the nominating petitions for the people who were endorsed by the committee was inexcusably arrogant," said O'Brien referring to the scramble to file nominating petitions on Feb. 28.

"I certainly hope this type of attitude isn't the attitude of the board," said O'Brien noting that caucus-endorsed candidates have won the board elections for the past 18 years.

Richard Schlott: 'Special education programs are the largest source of savings...'

Cooperation has been the key word for Richard J. Schlott in his three years as an Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 Board member.

Currently he is the president of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC), which manages programs among a number of school districts in a 10-district area wish to provide cooperatively.

"The special education programs are the largest source of savings enjoyed by the members of the NEC," said Schlott. "The districts could not run adequate special education programs by themselves."

Schlott also is in favor of cooperation with municipalities such as the village in order to save money on volume purchases. The 39-year-old board member was the main instigator on the board in favor of convincing the village to return $20,000 in utility taxes to the district.

SCHLOTT ALSO would like to see more cooperation, in the form of more communication, between the board and the residents of the district.

"We have gone to school buildings once a month for meetings and we have included a recess in our agenda so we have a chance to talk to people, but still few people come," said Schlott. "We are too isolated from the people."

Schlott says the teachers have a positive relation to the board.

"The teachers are interested in the same thing we are, good schools," said Schlott. "We sometimes differ over the details."

Schlott is serving his first year on the board negotiating team which received the Arlington Teachers Association's proposed contract two weeks ago. He is not for negotiations open to the public.

"Open negotiations are too politically oriented. Both sides strive to win the public over to their side and all you end up with is a strike or bad feelings," said Schlott. "Just look at the Chicago School District."

Though Schlott says he is not an expert on the methodology of teaching, he would like to see more results.

"I DON'T want the administration to tell me we're a good district, I want them to show me," said Schlott, who says more student test score reporting to the board would be in order. "We shouldn't use tests as weapons but as indicators to know how we're doing."

Schlott says he is in favor of the current district discipline policy, which he voted for. The policy says that a teacher may hit students only under very controlled conditions.

The John Fender case, according to Schlott, was an administrative bungle. Fender, who had taught in the district for 10 years, was fired for alleged cruelty to students.

"We (the board) did not become aware of the situation until after the fourth incident (the fourth time Fender allegedly hit students)," said Schlott. "It seems that action should have been taken long before it was."

But Schlott said the firing of Fender was handled correctly by the board.

SCHLOTT, A technical advisor in the patent department of Borg-Warner, is currently studying law at John Marshall Law School in Chicago. He and his wife and three children live at 415 S. Evergreen.

Another priority item for Schlott is child safety.

"One of the bravest people I know is the woman who goes out in the middle of four lanes of traffic in Arlington Heights Road with a little stop sign to stop cars so children can get to and from school," said Schlott. "We need a better method."

Schlott is for a 12-month school year only if it would make "educational sense," because it wouldn't save any money. "We've already got the buildings," he said.
